BRITISH TEXTILE MAKERS WINNING IN U. S. MARKETS

New Design Policies Chief Weapon.

Dress American

A double page profusely illustrated article on American design, textiles and manufacture appears in the Graphic section of The Sunday Tribune tomorrow. It will describe the struggle to capture America's two and a half billion dollar women's dress market.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—By Easter time the United States will be permeated with English textiles, English garments, English styles, and English accessories, as the direct result of a cleverly conceived and masterfully executed plan to pull Great Britain out of the depression at the expense of this country.

To appreciate what it means to English mills and factories to have carried the "Buy British" campaign into the richest market in history, to an unsuspicious and receptive purchasing public, it need only be pointed out that in 1929, at the peak of normal trade, the women's outer wear business in America represented $2,484,747,327 in value of products at the factory; that $243,851,143 was earned in wages in this industry, and that in Illinois alone $111,130,876 was invested in this type of product on the basis of selling value at the factory.

Business Men Miss Significance.

Even big business men who are promoting this campaign apparently have detected nothing guileful in it—nothing more innocuous than one more style tendency.

Their attitude is summed up in the retort of one of these New York merchants to the query, "But why this sudden English trend?"

"I don't know and I don't care where it came from—all I care about is, Will it make money?"

That neutral but momentous pronoun "it" refers specifically to a dominating tendency in feminine clothes this spring; to the dress preferences of the English woman, which will set the pace for fashion throughout the occident; to the inspiration not alone for suits but for sport things, daytime frocks, and evening dresses, emanating not from Paris but—wonder of wonders—from London, the capital for generations of a nation noted for careless dressing.

"It" means that millions of American dollars are being diverted to the purchase of cloths from England, and that they are coming to this country not only as of yore, in yard goods, but made up in garments which have found their way onto the order blanks of buyers from every section of the United States, and will be shown, either in the original or in copies, in every women's ready to wear department store this season.

Exploit English Styles.

Study the advertisements of women's outer wear in current issues of newspapers and magazines and note the frequency with which "casual" clothes [typical of both English men and English women] are exploited; the definite phraseology, such as "English to the core, this smart tailored tweed suit ——" or "—— as English as the moors it suggests ——"; look and you will find increasing emphasis placed in the large department stores of most American metropolises on the London style and manner. Yet nowhere is the "Buy British" slogan even suggested.

American textile manufacturers have been scrambling to meet this competition from across the water, and, putting forth their best efforts, have achieved a standard of excellence in domestic tweeds and kindred fabrics surpassing anything yet produced in this country.

As a result the finest American tweeds of all time will vie with the imported in what all buyers confidently predict will be the greatest suit season in decades, with these cloths taking precedence in popularity and smartness over anything on the boulevards this spring. Topcoat and suit ensembles developed in either foreign or domestic weaves will be reigning favorites.

Paris Feels Competition.

During the openings this year Regent street hummed with activity and buyers went to Paris by way of London. Even the Rue de la Paix itself, for centuries the fount of fashion and the arbiter of all that is worn by wom-

TARIFF MESSAGE STIRS PROTESTS BY REPUBLICANS

Oppose Giving Power to President.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—[Special.]—A special message to congress by President Roosevelt today asking authority to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements with other nations and to raise and lower tariff rates 50 per cent galvanized the Republican leadership into a fighting attitude.

Although the President represented the move as an emergency measure, Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader of the senate, and Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho], after reading the administration bill which accompanied the message, pointed out that it provides for a grant of tariff making power of indefinite duration to the executive.

Charge Misrepresentation.

The White House and Democratic leaders were accused of misrepresenting the measure as a three years' delegation of power. Examination of the bill disclosed that the three years' limitation applies to the reciprocal agreements negotiated. Such agreements are to continue three years and thereafter until denounced by either party, but the President, under the terms of the bill, could continue to negotiate such agreements and to raise and lower duties indefinitely.

Congress could regain its tariff making authority only by repealing the legislation and it would take a two-thirds vote to effect repeal over a veto.

A close examination of the bill also revealed that it proposes to repeal the entire provision of the present tariff act for the equalization of the costs of production at home and abroad through revision of tariff rates within 50 per cent limits. Numerous provisions for countervailing duties on imports from countries with higher duties on American goods are also to be repealed.

Several Republican leaders said that the scheme would vest the President with power to ruin entire industries and communities by the withdrawal of tariff protection. An unscrupulous executive, it was asserted, could use such power for political coercion and punishment of industries and communities in the interest of continuation of a political party in power.

Compared to League Covenant.

"The last section of the bill is comparable to article 10 of the league of nations covenant," said Senator McNary. "It would declare tariff making by the President a permanent policy of the country. Congress is asked to grant automatic authority to the President to deal with such a vital subject as the tariff.

"For more than 100 years congress has exercised plenary powers in the fixation of tariff duties. It relinquished some of its power in 1930 in what is known as the flexible tariff provision. The safety of that provision was that no change could be made in duties without due notice to parties interested and public hearings. In the bill presented these safeguards are removed. The President is given exclusive authority to modify existing duties as a permanent legislative policy of the country.

"This power, however righteous a President may be, could unwittingly be used to the advantage of one section and to the supreme injury of another section.

Announces His Opposition.

"Power of this kind should not be lodged in any one's hands and I shall oppose the proposition.

"The presentation of this question to the congress at this time will, in my opinion, arouse discussion of such length that any project for an early adjournment must be revised."

"According to the terms of the bill the power granted to the President of negotiating and promulgating tariff agreements will be permanent unless congress summons courage to repeal it," said Senator Borah. "It is apparent that the treaties will be interminable unless denounced and this would place permanent tariff making power in the hands of the President.

"I cannot support the administration's bill under any circumstances. My position is the same as that taken and maturely formed when congress delegated power to the tariff commission and the President under the flexible provision in 1930. I then opposed congress delegating such powers and am more determinedly opposed to the present proposal."

SKETCHES OF THE NEWS

ROOSEVELT IS A HEALTHIER MAN THAN YEAR AGO

Washington, D. C., March 2.—(AP)—Because Franklin D. Roosevelt can keep smiling he has come through his first year healthier than when he became President, the White House physician says. Dr. R. T. McIntire, pronouncing Mr. Roosevelt in "fine shape," said today:

"As a matter of fact, it has been a healthy year for the whole White House family. Even the Roosevelt grandchildren have had scarcely any ailments.

"There is no question in my mind that President Roosevelt is better today, in a general physical way, than when I first saw him in March of last year," Dr. McIntire added.

"He has gone through the year in fine shape. The reason for it, I think, and the best thing about it, is his general attitude on life—a cheerful, optimistic outlook, never expecting trouble."

The President's regular swims in the White House pool and his various yacht and schooner trips were also given some credit for Mr. Roosevelt's state of good health by Dr. McIntire.

South Dakota to Dispose of State Mines

Pierre, S. D., March 2.—(AP)—After 15 years of expensive trial another of South Dakota's socialistic ventures is being prepared for interment beside the graves of three other business projects which have cost millions, while the state is looking forward to forestall by constitutional amendment future dabbling in business.

Already more than 40 million dollars in debt as a result of the failure of its state owned enterprises, South Dakota is writing off another $185,000 by getting out of the coal business. It is disposing of its mine at Haynes, N. D., and selling its lease on another strip in this state, the latter a relief project.

Still Has Cement Plant.

Disposal of the coal mine project, established in 1919, leaves only one other state business venture of the ambitious program in existence—the cement plant at Rapid City, which already has a loss of $300,000 recorded against it. So far it has escaped the legislative disfavor which has fallen on the other projects.

Decision of Gov. Tom Berry to dispose of the mine was made under authorization of the last legislature. Twice before the legislature authorized its disposal, but no final action was taken until after the inauguration of Berry, who always has opposed the state going into business.

Although no official comment was forthcoming today, it is believed state officials are favorably inclined toward the constitutional amendment which would bar South Dakota from engaging in another business splurge.

This amendment is to be voted on next November and would limit the state's new indebtedness to a million dollars.

Four Projects Defunct.

A summary of the state's business ventures shows four of the five established are now defunct. These include the rural credit bureau, bonding department, crop hail insurance, and the coal mine. The state cement plant is the fifth.

About 42 million dollars still is outstanding in rural credit bonds, with an estimate by M. Q. Sharpe, former attorney general, who investigated the department, that the total loss will be 38 million dollars. The rural credit system was established in 1917 and its liquidation ordered in 1925.

The bonding department, established in 1919, was ordered liquidated last year. It had a deficit of $51,573. The state hail insurance department lost $74,243 in the 14 years of its existence.

The cement plant is still in operation, but interest payments on bonds are given as more than $1,200,000, with returns of $990,000.

LAURA INGALLS, FAMED AVIATOR, IS FEARED DOWN

Charleston, S. C., March 3 (Saturday).—(AP)—T. P. Haviland, department of commerce attaché at the Charleston municipal airport, expressed the fear early today that Miss Laura Ingalls, famed woman flyer, had been forced down in the swamp country between Beaufort, S. C., and Savannah, Ga.

Miss Ingalls took off from the Charleston airport at 3:30 p. m. yesterday after a 45 minute stop for lunch and fuel. A plane believed to have been hers was heard over Beaufort at 4 p. m. and she should have reached Savannah at 4:30. She was expected at Jacksonville, where she was to have spent the night, between 5:30 and 6 o'clock. She was unreported at both places, Haviland said.

Haviland was endeavoring to reach authorities in an effort to start a search for Miss Ingalls south of Beaufort. Miss Ingalls was flying a Lockheed Air Express monoplane with a cruising speed of 145 miles an hour.

She is en route from New York to South America on a good will mission.

PAIR OF ROBBERS STEAL AUTO OF ARMY OFFICERS

Two bandits held up an army chauffeur last night and stole an official United States army automobile. The chauffeur, Private George Humble of Fort Sheridan, had earlier driven Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Hewitt and Lieut. and Mrs. John Hines to the loop. Mrs. Hewitt is a daughter of Brig. Gen. Frank Bolles, fort commandant. The party went home on the North Shore electric line. While the two couples were at a theater Humble drove around to kill time. At Washington boulevard and Canal street the robbers halted him, threatened him with guns, and made him get out of the car. They then drove it away. Police predicted the bandits would abandon the car soon, for it is khaki colored and has army emblems.

Fire Destroys Belmont Mansion in New York

Hempstead, L. I., March 2.—[Special.]—The Belmont manor, formerly the summer home of the late Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, at East Hempstead was burned to the ground this afternoon. All that remained of the 42 room mansion was six brick chimneys standing erect among the smoldering ruins.

Thief Steals Overcoat of Pastor from Church

Dr. Ernest Fremont Tittle, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church in Evanston, reported to Evanston police last night that a sneak thief had stolen his overcoat from the church office Thursday evening. The coat is valued at $75.

Young Doctor Dies in Plunge at Hospital

Dr. Curtis Nelson, member of a socially prominent family, was fatally injured last night when he accidentally fell or jumped from a fifth floor window in the Presbyterian hospital, where he was a patient.

He was 31 years old and lived at 202 East Hillside avenue, Barrington, with his wife and young son. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Murry Nelson of 44 East Elm street. His father is a lawyer and his mother is widely known in club circles and is a former president of the Woman's City club.

No Witness to Fall.

There were no witnesses to Dr. Nelson's fatal fall. The young physician entered the hospital one week ago yesterday, suffering from a nervous ailment. He was considered on the road to recovery yesterday. He was last seen alive at 9:30 last night.

At that time he left his room, where he had been resting alone, and walked down the corridor to a public washroom. The floor nurse, Miss Margaret Kiddie, noticed him and summoned an orderly. The orderly went into the washroom. Dr. Nelson was not there, but a window was open. The orderly looked out and saw the physician lying on the court concrete five floors below.

Attachés took Dr. Nelson back into the hospital, where surgeons worked to save his life. He died about an hour and a half later. His parents and his wife were at his side.

Harvard Graduate.

Neither hospital authorities nor police could determine whether or not the fall was intentional. Mr. Nelson, the father, said it was possible that his son had opened the washroom window for fresh air, and become faint, and had fallen out.

Dr. Nelson graduated from Harvard in 1923 and received his medical education at Rush Medical college. He served his internship at the Presbyterian hospital. In 1928 he married Miss Alice Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Little of 239 Greenwood avenue, Evanston. Mr. Little is a professor of law at Northwestern university.

CO-ED AND WIFE OF DOCTOR SCRAP OVER ACCIDENT

In the presence of Evanston policemen a Northwestern university co-ed and a physician's wife yesterday accused each other of starting a melée involving scratches and hair pulling. The co-ed is Miss Evalyn B. Jacobs, 19 years old, a sophomore and a member of the Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority. Her opponent is Mrs. Emily Brunet, wife of Dr. Walter M. Brunet, 1014 Sheridan road, Evanston.

Miss Jacobs was the driver of an automobile which skidded in front of the physician's home and crashed into a car belonging to Mrs. Brunet. She went to the Brunet home and reported the crash to the police. Mrs. Brunet asked her to wait until the police arrived, and trouble developed when the girl said she didn't want to.

To Policemen Mountain and Bein, a little later, Mrs. Brunet related that Miss Jacobs had torn her dress. Miss Jacobs retorted that Mrs. Brunet had started things by pulling her hair. She was taken to the station and formally charged with reckless driving. No official notice was taken of the alleged battle.

Wealthy Student Found Unconscious in His Room

Philip Coolidge, 24 years old, member of a wealthy Concord, Mass., family, was found unconscious from an overdose of a sleeping potion last night in his room at the International house, on the University of Chicago campus. He was taken to the Billings Memorial hospital. Coolidge is not a student at the university, but was attending the Institute for Psychoanalysis, 43 East Ohio street. His father is Sidney Coolidge, textile manufacturer.

FAINTS IN JAIL AFTER A DAY ON WITNESS STAND

Denies Under Oath She Slew Rheta.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

In a hollow, listless voice, bereft of vehemence or passion, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, 62 years old, yesterday under oath denied murdering her daughter-in-law, Rheta. It was an extraordinary moment in an extraordinary trial.

Here was a woman of keen intelligence and strong character, a feminist leader in medicine and social service for forty years, enmeshed in what she and her lawyers termed a terrible web of circumstantial evidence that has ruined her reputation and brought her trial. Here was her chance to cry out her innocence of murdering the girl she had professed to love.

Fails to Show Spirit.

But when her lawyer, W. W. Smith, brought her to the climax of a three hour examination and put the vital question of her guilt or innocence, Dr. Wynekoop could not muster the outraged vehemence her predicament seemed to demand. It might have been her heart ailment that extinguished her spirits, as Smith afterwards maintained.

"Did you kill Rheta, Wynekoop," he demanded, in stentorian tones.

"No, I did not," was her dispirited reply.

The defendant was half prone in her chair, her chin resting on her left hand, the right hand passing nervously over her mouth, her face half averted as she met her lawyer's gaze askance with apprehensive eyes.

Becomes a Different Person.

On cross-examination, fifteen minutes later, she was another person, figure erect, eyes flashing and voice firm, as she met the subtly insinuating questions of the prosecutor, Charles S. Dougherty. Her energy now was such that some observers half expected her to step off the stand and slap the prosecutor's face.

But her energy persisted only until she left the stand. In the county jail after her ordeal of cross-examination, she suffered a relapse and was put to bed, where she lay, half fainting, until revived by spirits of ammonia. Today she will return for cross-examination, to be followed by a rest until Monday, when Dougherty will demand her conviction in final arguments and her own lawyers will make their plea for acquittal on "reasonable doubt." Dougherty said he would not demand the death penalty.

Attorney Changes Plan.

Attorney Smith, a shrewd strategist in innumerable criminal trials, was quick to perceive the danger in the defendant's lack of vigor in response to his climactic question. He quickly changed his plan. If she could not deny the killing in one vigorous answer he would supply emphasis by repetition. He snatched up a copy of the indictment.

"You were indicted on Nov. 29, 1933, for murder, in an indictment containing eleven counts," he resumed in vigorous tones, striving to convey some of his own fervor to her.

"You are charged in the first count with willfully, feloniously, and with malice aforethought shooting Rheta Wynekoop through the chest, trunk, thorax, and abdomen," emphasizing every word. "Did you do this thing?"

"I did not." Dr. Alice stirred uneasily in her chair. Smith tried once more.

"You are charged with administering a large and lethal quantity of chloroform—amount unknown to the grand jury—to your daughter-in-law, Rheta Wynekoop, thereby causing her death," Smith's voice throbbed. "Did you?"

Answers in Firmer Voice.

"No, sir," in a somewhat firmer voice.

His strategy fully apparent now, Attorney Smith met an obstacle.

"Object to this unnecessary repetition," said Prosecutor Dougherty. Dr. Alice refreshed her throat with a sip of water and sighed.

"I want to make this denial specific," Smith shouted, advancing to the bench. "I want to negative each and every one of the eleven counts in this indictment."

"The indictment is for murder," Judge Harry B. Miller observed. "The general question is whether she did or did not kill Rheta Wynekoop. Objection sustained."

"Did you, or did you not, kill Rheta?" Smith insisted, once more.

"I did not," this time emphatically, and Smith passed on to other phases of the case.

The anxiety raised among the defense staf by Dr. Alice's lack of spirit was betrayed a few minutes later when a recess was declared. In a conference behind the scenes in an anteroom, Attorneys W. W. Smith, Milton Smith, and Frank J. Tyrrell discussed the probable effect of her testimony on the jury.

"Do you think she made a good witness?" Milton Fmith buttonholed one observer. The observer remarked her lack of vehemence and shrugged.

"It's her heart trouble," Smith explained. "Her strength comes at the wrong time. Did you notice how she held her throat at those questions? Her strength was gone. I'm worried about how she may stand up under cross-examination."

Anxiety Is Unfounded.

Smith's anxiety was unfounded, the cross-examination showed. Dr. Alice was her alert self once more. She had been buoyed during the recess by her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, who, taking notes all through the three and a quarter hours of direct examination, came to the witness box with her suggestions.

"You were splendid, mother," Dr. Catherine patted her hand. "You have nothing to fear. You didn't do this thing. Just tell them so."

An officious bailiff shooed reporters away. The courtroom was like a picnic ground, with 600 wedged-in spectators, chatting, chewing gum, and munching peanuts. Mother and daughter whispered on earnestly, while Dougherty went to a distant room to study the questions he would ask her.

Her Vitality Revives.

The defendant's amazing vitality under a heart ailment which forced a suspension of her last trial before Judge Joseph B. David quickly became apparent under Dougherty's cross-examination. Scorning the subtleties by which he tried to trap her, she spoke freely and directly.

The prosecutor forced her almost immediately to the scene of Rheta's death on her operating table, the recollection of which had moved her to tears on direct examination. Now her voice was firm and her eyes dry.

Q. [by Prosecutor Dougherty]—About that blanket on her body—where did you see it last before the death? A.—In a box under the sink in an adjacent room.

Q.—There was a sheet under the body? A.—We always put a sheet on the operating table.

Gasp from Spectators.

Some of the spectators gasped, expecting Dougherty to pursue the subject of the sheet so promisingly opened. He passed on to something else.

Q.—There was a towel at Rheta's mouth? A.—I understand so. I didn't notice at the time.

Dougherty went into her failure to examine the body to discover whether life remained and her telephoning Dr. Catherine that Rheta had been shot without, as she claimed, having lifted the blanket. She parried his questions easily.

Q.—Death is no unusual occurrence for you, doctor? A.—Most everybody meets death some time.

Q.—No, I mean, as a physician, you had seen countless deaths? A.—Well, I had seen some, three in my own family—within a few years.

Q.—Now one method of determining death is by a stethoscope, is it not? A.—If there is any doubt of death, yes.

Q.—Or by taking the pulse? A.—Not pulse and stethoscope both. Either would show the heart action.

Q.—Well, the heart beat might be so feeble that you couldn't detect it by taking the pulse and then would use the stethoscope—right? A.—That's true.

Tells by Her Color.

Q.—You could tell this girl was dead for several hours? A.—Yes, by her color. There's a difference between color just after death and several hours later.

Q.—You didn't place your hand on any part of Rheta's person? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—You made no outcry when you found her there? A.—I'm not one to cry.

Q.—You knew Miss Hennessey [Enid Hennessey, a lodger] was in the house? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—But you didn't tell her of what you saw? A.—No, sir, my daughter told her when she came home.

Q.—You knew Mrs. Vera Duncan was at home next door, the woman you had telephoned early in the evening? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You knew her telephone number? A.—Not without looking it up.

Q.—You didn't call her? A.—No, sir.

Then the prosecutor referred to John Van Pelt, handy man around the Wynekoop household, and asked the physician:

"You were paying the premium on Van Pelt's insurance, were you not?"

"I was—$1 a week," retorted the witness, sitting up straighter.

Her Answer Is Vehement.

"You were beneficiary of that insurance policy, were you not?" inquired the prosecutor.

"I was not!" exclaimed the witness, with a vehemence which startled the crowd.

"Well, you owed him money, didn't you?" persisted Dougherty.

Dr. Wynekoop's eyes gleamed behind her glasses. She hunched forward on the edge of her chair and responded in a clear, loud voice:

"He had his meals, and a room, and medication. I wouldn't call that not being paid. I took him off the street. The insurance was taken out so that there would be money to ship his body home if he died."

She took a hasty sip of water, banged the glass back on the bench beside her, and glared at the lawyer.

A moment later came another conflict. Prosecutor Dougherty asked if she had not been permitted to lie down as often as she pleased during her examination in the police station.

"You were there that night. You know about that, don't you?" parried the witness.

"I'm asking the questions, doctor," replied the prosecutor gently.

Another Verbal Clash.

The witness then admitted that she had been permitted to rest on a cot. Soon came another verbal passage at arms.

"You were permitted to go to the inquest in the company of your son, Earle, were you not?" asked the lawyer.

"Yes, and in the company of Capt. Stege and Dr. Hoffman," snapped back Dr. Wynekoop.

"You're sure about that?"

"Perfectly sure," with emphasis.

As the session ended, the attorney was quizzing the witness about statements she made at the inquest. He read from the stenographic report of the proceedings.

"I probably said those things if the minutes show it," declared the witness.

"But did you say them?" pursued the prosecutor.

"The same answer, Mr. Dougherty," Dr. Wynekoop replied.

Being wheeled away, she answered a question as to her condition with some annoyance. "I'm perfectly all right," she said.

Jurors are Excluded from Courtroom While Dr. Wynekoop Is Carried to Witness Stand

Yesterday's session of the Wynekoop murder trial opened with two more character witnesses testifying for the defendant. When the moment came for Dr. Alice Wynekoop to take the witness stand the jury was excluded in order that they might not be excited to a possible sympathy at the sight of the defendant being carried to the chair.

There was an excited hum in the courtroom as Bailifs Philip J. Klafter and Peter Agriostathes ranged themselves beside the black clad figure in the leather armchair and hoisted the chair between them. They grunted with the exertion of their task as they moved forward. Dr. Wynekoop gripped the arms of her chair tightly.

There was some difficulty in placing the chair on the platform to the left of Judge Miller, but it was finally accomplished. Meanwhile, swarms of photographers had taken flashlight pictures of this process.

Jury Is Brought Back.

The jury was brought back. Attorney W. W. Smith whispered to the judge that he wanted the record to show that the jurors had not seen the defendant take the witness stand.

There was another argument about the defendant not standing while the oath was administered. She finally raised her right hand, as she sat in the chair, and answered "I do" to the admonition to tell the truth and the whole truth.

"Your name is Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop?" began Attorney Smith, who took up a position at the end of the jury box.

"Yes," came the answer in a voice so low that it was almost a whisper. Throughout the examination the witness spoke in such a low tone that her replies were unheard by a majority in the courtroom.

The witness said she was 63 years old and lived at 3406 Monroe street.

Q.—You lived there from 1904 until the time of this tragedy? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know Rheta Wynekoop? A.—I did.

Q.—Your son, Earle, married her? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did the marriage take place? A.—Aug. 31, 1929.

Q.—Did they go away? A.—The next day they went to our summer home at Frankfort, Mich., and stayed two months.

Q.—Did you prepare rooms for them at your home? A.—Yes, a suite of two rooms in front on the second floor. They were completely redecorated and had practically new furniture.

Q.—Did you support the couple? A.—Yes.

Takes Out Insurance.

Q.—In June, 1930, was anything done about insurance for Earle? A.—Yes, I arranged to have a $10,000 policy taken out for him.

Q.—Who was the beneficiary? A.—Rheta.

Q.—Who paid the premiums? A.—I did.

Q.—In May, 1933, did Earle obtain a position? A.—Yes, at the World's Fair.

Q.—After that time was he home every night? A.—In July he stayed away alternating nights.

Q.—Did you notice any trouble between Rheta and Earle?

The witness hesitated. She sat up straighter for a moment.

"I sensed a difference between them," she said, "but I never saw any real evidence of it."

Q.—In November, 1933, was Earle planning to go away? A.—Yes, in connection with a color photography job.

Q.—Where was he going? A.—To the Grand canyon.

Q.—When he went, did he bid you good-by? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Rheta complain of his treatment? A.—Not until just before he left.

Q.—Was Rheta frequently ill in the summer of 1933? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the matter with her? A.—She was ill in bed for several weeks. I called several physicians. They said she was tubercular.

Q.—Was she melancholy? A.—Rather.

Q.—Was she of a morbid disposition? A.—Somewhat.

Q.—Did you tell her to get out into the open air? A.—Yes; often.

Tells of Burglaries.

The witness was then asked if her house had not been burglarized in the fall of 1933. She said it had twice ben entered, first on Oct. 12 and again on Oct. 22. On the first occasion the basement rear door had been broken into, she asserted. About $90 in currency was taken from a drawer where she kept it in the basement on the second occasion, she said.

Attorney Smith began asking about the defendant's own physical condition.

Q.—What was your condition. A.—Poor.

Q.—From what were you suffering? A.—Hypertension — high blood pressure.

Q.—Had you lost weight? A.—More than fifty pounds in a year.

The attorney finally came to the date of Nov 21, when Rheta was slain.

Q.—At what hour did you arise on Nov. 21? A.—About 8 a. m., I think.

Alone in the House.

Q.—Were you and Rheta alone in the house at that time? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who prepared breakfast? A.—Rheta. We breakfasted together.

Q.—What did you do next? A.—I went to the Garfield Park hospital, where an operation was to be performed. I was present while Dr. Berger performed it.

Q.—Then what? A.—I waited about for a time. Perhaps I went to the physicians' reading room. I left a little past twelve.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—I walked home.

Q.—Was Rheta there? A.—Yes. She said, "I didn't know what time you'd be back, mother, so I haven't prepared lunch."

Q.—Did Rheta go to the store? A.—I suggested that she go after lunch. We had lunch.

Rheta Goes Shopping.

Q.—Did she go shopping? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did she return? A.—Between 2:30 and 3 o'clock.

Q.—Did you have a talk with her? A.—She said she'd like to go walking but that she would rather go downtown. She said she wanted to get a piece of music.

Again the attorney veered away from the scene of the operating room death.

Q.—Were you under medical treatment at the time? A.—Yes.

Q.—What treatment were you getting? A.—Heart support—digitalis—mainly.

Q.—Did this heart ailment give you shortness of breath? A.—Yes.

Judge Orders Recess.

Dr. Wynekoop's head lolled back on the back of her chair. She whispered a request for air. The great crowd in the courtroom had produced a stuffy atmosphere. The judge ordered a recess and ordered the ailes cleared of spectators.

During the recess Dr. Catherine stood beside her mother in the witness box. As the court was about to resume Dr. Wynekoop, who had been reclining in the chair, sat up straight while Dr. Francis McNamara, jail physician, felt her pulse. The questioning continued:

Q.—When Rheta went downtown did you give her any money? A.—Yes, two $1 bills and two 50 cent pieces.

Q.—Did you leave the house after that? A.—Yes.

Q.—What time about was it. A.—About 10 or 15 minutes after Rheta came in from the shopping.

Q.—Was she there when you left the house? A.—Yes.

Q.—About what time was it when you came back? A.—I was back about 5 o'clock.

Attorney Smith asked the witness to raise her voice.

Goes for a Walk.

Q.—Where did you go after leaving the house? A.—I walked to Madison street as far as Spaulding.

Q.—Do you walk fast or slow? A.—Rather slowly.

Q.—Where did you go after reaching Madison and Spaulding? A.—I went to a postal station at Albany avenue.

Q.—What did you purchase there? A.—Some 1 cent stamps.

Attorney Smith then introduced a roll of 1 cent stamps and asked the witness if those were the stamps to which she referred. She answered in the affirmative.

Q.—Did you stop at any other place? A.—I went to Newman's hardware store, west of Kedzie avenue.

Q.—Then where did you go? A.—I took a Madison street car and alighted at Hamlin avenue.

Q.—Did you go to the Garfield Park Community hospital? A.—Yes, I went to see a patient on the third floor.

On the way out, she said, she met a neighbor in the lobby.

Q.—Did you go home then? A.—Yes, I walked.

Q.—What time did you arrive at home? A.—Five o'clock.

Enters the House.

Q.—After you entered the house did you go downstairs? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then what did you do? A.—I went to the dressing room downstairs.

Q.—Is that the room you usually go to during the day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you observe anything unusual at that time? A.—No.

Rheta at that time was dead on her operating table, although she said she did not know it.

Q.—Were the doors of the operating room open or closed? A.—Closed.

Q.—Did you observe this? A.—Not particularly, but I would have noticed if they were open.

Q.—How long did you remain in the basement? A.—Just long enough to take off my wraps and go to the dressing room.

Q.—Then did you go upstairs? A.—Yes, I called to see if Rheta had returned. I received no answer, so figured she was not home.

Q.—Did you go to the kitchen then? A.—Yes.

Q.—And did you start to prepare dinner? A.—Yes.

Q.—And what time was that? A.—Almost 5:30 o'clock.

At this point the defendant had been on the stand about one hour.

DEFENDANT SHEDS TEARS

Earlier in the day the questioning of the defendant had reached a dramatic climax in which Dr. Wynekoop shed tears. This was after she had been on the stand about an hour. Attorney Smith had guided her through a recollection of the fatal afternoon—her stops at the hardware store and postoffice, her street car ride to the Garfield Park hospital, her return to find the groceries she assumed Rheta had brought home, and her supper with Miss Hennessey with Rheta's empty plate between them.

Q.—You and Miss Hennessey had some conversation about a book? A.—Yes; "Strange Interlude."

Q.—How long did you two talk? A.—Perhaps three-quarters of an hour.

Q.—You were worried about Rheta? A.—I went upstairs to see if she had returned. She wasn't there.

"Oh, I see," reflected Smith. "Then you went to the basement operating room?"

Crowd on Edge.

The defendant said she had to get medicine for Miss Hennessey's acidosis. The women in the crowd breathed faster. The lawyer was bringing her at last to the scene of Rheta's death.

Q.—Which door did you enter—if you recall? A.—I don't remember precisely. Probably the one at the foot of the stairs.

Q.—You had turned on the light and opened the door—did you see the body of Rheta?

"Object," said Dougherty suddenly. "He knows these leading questions are improper."

"Well then, what did you see?" Smith resumed.

Dr. Wynekoop's voice choked with sobs. Reporters shoved back their writing benches and rushed out to bulletin their offices. The clattering of a passing street car almost drowned her reply.

"I saw Rheta lying on the operating table," she choked. "She was covered with a blanket—one hand exposed—body very stiff—some blood on the mouth."

Q.—Anything else? A.—A peculiar color of the face.

Q.—What did that indicate to you? The doctor pressed her handkerchief under her spectacles to dry her eyes.

"Death," she whimpered, weakly. "I noticed the condition of her partly opened eyes—the general relaxation—the pallor. It was a picture of—yes, a picture of death."

She dried her eyes again.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I walked around the table—viewed the body from another angle—wondered what I could do.

Her sobs broke out afresh.

Q.—Did you leave the room? A.—As soon as I could. Somehow, I got upstairs.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I was hardly in a condition to do anything. I sat down. Then I remembered telephoning Catherine.

Q.—Observe anything about your heart? A.—Well, no, except I could scarcely sit down. I didn't observe any heart condition or other condition. I remember a throbbing in my head.

"I see," Smith sighed, and paused. His witness had regained composure now.

Q.—Did you call any one else? A.—Yes, Dr. Chauvet and Dr. Berger. Also Mr. Ahern, the undertaker.

Sees Rheta's Body Again.

Q.—Now, were you down there in that operating room again? A.—Yes. I went down with Mr. Ahern and Catherine.

Q.—You saw the body again? A.—Yes, Catherine lifted the blanket with a pencil. I saw the wound. Then Mr. Ahern said the police must be called.

Q.—And the police came? A.—O, yes.

Q.—What policemen came? A.—Well, I recalled two, who took a typewritten statement.

Q.—You told them you could answer any questions? A.—I did.

Q.—And you answered all their questions? A.—Certainly.

Anticipating Smith's next move, Dougherty rummaged in his brief case and brought forth the statement—state's exhibit 28—in which Dr. Alice set forth all her movements as told in her testimony, excepting the second visit to the Garfield Park hospital which was made late that afternoon. She identified her signature on each of its three pages.

Q.—Do you recall any policeman asking you about your afternoon visit to the hospital? A.—I don't remember any one asking me about that.

Q.—Recall any police conversation about an open back door? A.—I definitely heard something about that—but outside the room I was in.

Q.—The officers asked about the pistol? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell them it was in the desk drawer? A.—Yes.

Dougherty muttered that the defense attorney, by his suggestive questions, was testifying for her, but made no formal objection. Smith went on.

Q.—What was the condition of the drawer—disturbed? A.—Somewhat. Not a great deal.

Q.—Did you speak of the stamps you had purchased at the postoffice? A.—It seems to me I pointed out the stamps, so I must have spoken about it. I don't definitely recall.

Smith then went into incidents of that night and the next two nights to show that Dr. Alice had been without food or sleep until she "confessed" the accidental killing of Rheta on the Friday morning following the death on Tuesday.

Q.—Did you sleep Wednesday night? A.—No, we went to the police station and returned home about midnight. I retired, but couldn't remain lying down. Walker, my girl, and I talked until morning.

Q.—Any breakfast? A.—No, I went to the inquest at 9 a. m.

Q.—Any lunch? A.—No. Lunch was prepared but I didn't have any. I was still nauseated. The others had sat down, but Capt. Stege [Supervising Captain John Stege] came and took us all to the station.

Q.—What happened there? A.—I was quizzed.

Q.—You answered all their questions? A.—Certainly.

Tells of Seeing Earle.

Q.—Did you see Earle there? A.—Yes, he had come home at noon and was taken to the station before me. I saw him with Mr. Gardner, [Rheta's father].

Q.—You and Mr. Gardner went to the undertaking rooms to talk of the funeral of this unfortunate girl? A.—Yes.

Q.—You then went home? A.—Mr. Gardner drove Catherine and I home.

Q.—Anything to eat that evening? A.—Only a cup of coffee.

Q.—Any sleep Thursday night? A.—I tried to lie down, but Capt. Stege telephoned and said he wanted me back at the station.

Q.—You went? A.—Certainly.

Q.—What happened there? A.—I was quizzed again—from 8 p. m. to 3 a. m.

Q.—Did a man with a lie detector come in? A.—A man came in with a machine.

Q.—Did he use the machine? A.—He said my blood pressure was 250 and I would have to take some rest before he could use it.

Q.—Did you hear a policeman say, "Who the hell brought that bird in here with his machine"? [Objection.]

Q.—Did you hear any policeman in the room say that? A.—I don't know whether it was in those words.

Some One Pounding at Door.

Q.—Did you hear some one pounding at the door—some one you later learned was Attorney Frank J. Tyrrell, who had brought a doctor? A.—There was so much confusion there—really, I don't know exactly. I heard some reference to a doctor.

Q.—Well, what was it? A.—Some one said there were plenty of doctors there now to take care of me.

Q.—Was one of them Dr. Hoffman [Dr. Harry R. Hoffman, director of the Criminal court behavior clinic], the man who testified here for the state? A.—I suppose it was.

Q.—Anything said about a lawyer? A.—I said I would like to see my lawyer. A policeman said that could wait until tomorrow—that they were only questioning me.

Q.—Anything said with reference to feeding you? A.—Really, I didn't want any food anyway. I don't remember.

Smith had brought her almost to the point of her "confession" when Judge Miller ordered an adjournment at 12:30 p. m. Dr. Catherine hustled up to the witness stand, supervising the bailif, who picked the witness up bodily by the knees as she clung to his neck and settled her in the wheel chair.

"No pictures; no reporters, either," Dr. Catherine commanded in strident tones. Dr. Alice was wheeled away to lunch while flash bulbs popped.

TRIAL IS RESUMED

When the afternoon session opened, with Dr. Wynekoop still on the stand under direct examination, she appeared to be even stronger than at the morning hearing. Her voice was more audible. She sat erect in her chair.

Defense Attorney W. W. Smith's questions were apparently intended to bring out the defense contention that the defendant's confession had been wheedled out of her under promises that it carried no legal consequences either for her or for her family.

Q. [by Attorney Smith]—Tell the manner in which Dr. Hoffman introduced himself to you. A.—He sat down beside me and said: "I'm Dr. Hoffman. You are known to me, doctor, by reputation. I knew your husband. Your daughter was in one of my classes." In effect, he said: "I'm your friend, and I'm going to help you."

Q.—Did he take your hand in his? A.—I think perhaps he did.

Q.—Did he say Earle had confessed? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you say to that? A.—I said, "O, no, I don't believe that at all."

Q.—Then what did Dr. Hoffman say? A.—He said: "O, yes, Earle has come through. He feels much better now that he has told us all."

Urges Her to Confess.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I repeated that I did not believe it. He then said that Earle wanted me to confess my part in it, or words to that effect. He said: "If you tell your story, you'll feel better, too, just as your son does."

Q.—Did you ask for Earle? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was he brought in? A.—Yes, he came in and sat down on the bench beside me. I turned to him and took his face in my two hands. I said: "Earle, you know I've told everything I know. I couldn't hurt Rheta. I loved her." I thought for a moment he was going to answer me, but he didn't. He left the room and I never saw him again.

Dr. Wynekoop's voice quavered as she made this statement. She took a sip of water quickly and her voice was steady when she resumed her testimony.

Q.—What was Earle's condition? A.—His hair was rumpled, his face pale, his eyes bloodshot.

Q.—Did any man threaten you? A.—In the morning I was threatened.

Q.—Who was it? A.—I don't know. I heard afterwards it was Officer Donahue.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said: "You know who killed her and we'll send you to the chair."

Q.—Where was his hand when he said that? A.—Close to my face.

Q.—Did you have a further talk with Assistant State's Attorney Long? A.—Yes. He said to me: "Now, Dr. Wynekoop I understand your feeling toward Earle. I'm a favorite son myself and I can imagine how you feel. I think you should tell everything you know." I said that I had told everything I knew over and over again.

Quotes Lieut. Blaul.

Q.—Did you hear any one else talking there? A.—Lieut. Blaul said he had never seen a more definite case. He told me it must have been done by some one in the family. [This reference was to Police Lieutenant William Blaul.]

Q.—What did you say? A.—I told him it must have been done by some one outside the family. It couldn't be any one of our family.

Q.—Did you have a talk about fixing up a story that Rheta was chloroformed, then shot, with Long? A.—Yes. I can't give you all the words, but he told me that the coroner had reported that death was due to the anesthetic. I said I thought it had been due to the gunshot wound. He said, no, that was not so. Then he began talking about how convenient it would be for me to say that I had administered an overdose of the anesthetic by accident. I agreed with him, but I said I had not don so. He said: "It wouldn't involve you in any manner except for indiscretion of judgment." I said I couldn't say it.

This was the longest single speech the witness had made on the stand. She continued steadily:

"Capt. Stege and Dr. Hoffman said that the story must be finished up. Dr. Hoffman said why not build up a story as Long had suggested. So piece by piece we built up a story."

Show Confession to Her.

Dr. Alice's confession, already introduced by the state, was shown to her and she identified her signature to it.

Q.—Were you made any promises about this statement? A.—I asked if I made such a statement if it would release my family. Dr. Hoffman said that it involved me only.

Q.—Anything said about you being held? A.—Capt. Stege said that if I made such a statement I probably would not be held even for indictment; that it involved no crime.

Q.—You had had nothing to eat up to this time? A.—No.

Q.—And no sleep? A.—None.

Dr. Wynekoop went on to relate how she was taken from Fillmore police station, where she had been questioned, to the Racine avenue police station in a police wagon. She seemed aggrieved as she told of being placed in a cell.

Q.—Was there a bed in the cell? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you lie down? A.—I took my shoes off.

Q.—Did you disrobe? A.—No.

Q.—When you were in the cell did any one tell you that Earle confessed. A.—Yes, they said it was in the papers.

Q.—Were there any policemen around? A.—Yes, four or five policemen.

Q.—Did any of them say anything about Earle's confession? A.—Yes, they did tell me about it.

Q.—After that were you taken out of the Racine avenue police station? A.—Yes, I was put in an automobile with four or five policemen and taken back to the Fillmore station.

Q.—Was it following that trip that you talked to Dr. Hoffman? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Stege around all that night? A.—I don't remember having seen him.

Denies the Confession.

The witness told of the session in the office of Prosecutor Dougherty in which he heard her denial of her confession to the Criminal court alienist.

Q.—Did you see Dr. Hoffman on Saturday, Nov. 25? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where were you at the time? A.—In the state's attorney's office in the Criminal Court building.

Q.—Who was present? A.—Attorney Crowley and Mr. Dougherty.

Q.—By Attorney Dougherty, you mean the assistant state's attorney in charge of this prosecution? A.—Yes.

Q.—What time of the day was that? A.—I can't tell exactly but I think it was about 9 in the morning.

Dr. Alice said the night before she had slept in the Racine avenue station and it was the first sleep she had had since the tragedy.

Q.—What happened when you arrived at the state's attorney's office? A.—Mr. Dougherty started to ask me questions.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I told him, "before I answer your questions I think I should see Dr. Hoffman."

The witness said that Dr. Hoffman was sent for and the questioning held up pending his arrival.

Q.—Well, when Dr. Hoffman arrived did you request Attorneys Crowley and Dougherty to leave the room? A.—I do not know if I requested them, but they did leave the room.

Tells of Conversation.

Q.—Relate the conversation you had with Dr. Hoffman. A.—I told him we only had a few minutes to talk. I told him I was fearful of the situation. I said, "I intend to stand by my statement, but I do not know how to do it." I told him he should help me.

Q.—Go ahead, doctor, and give us all the conversation. A.—I told him I would be asked a lot of questions and I would not know how to answer them. I told Dr. Hoffman I never even saw the gunshot wound and that I had never given an anesthetic alone in my life. I told him to tell me what to say. I said, "I have to know because they will be coming for me soon."

Q.—Did Dr. Hoffmen say anything? A.—About that time the attorneys came in and Dr. Hoffman said, "She said she didn't do this."

Q.—Was your son Earle released after that?

At this question Dr. Wynekoop choked and seemed about to weep. She shook her head slowly in replying to the question and finally said, "No, he wasn't."

Earle Leaves Jail.

Q.—When was the next time you saw your son Earle? A.—The day he left the cook county jail.

Q.—Was he held and charged with this murder? The state objected.

Q.—Is the statement you made and signed after talking to Capt. Stege and Dr. Hoffman true? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Was it true at the time you made it? A.—No sir

Q.—Is it true now? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you love Rheta Wynekoop? An objection to this question and to one asking if she had ever said "an unkind word to Rheta" was sustained by Judge Miller. However, during the time Prosecutor Dougherty was making his objection the witness was shaking her head to indicate that she had never spoken crossly to her daughter-in-law. She had answered, very softly, "Yes, sir," to the question of whether she loved Rheta.

Confers with Associates.

Attorney Smith indicated he had finished his direct examination. While he conferred with his associates to determine whether he had overlooked anything, Prosecutor Dougherty held a whispered conversation with Burdine Hugh Gardner, father of the slain Rheta. Smith, however, had decided to ask a few more questions.

Q.—Doctor, did you have any conversation with Dr. Hoffman or Capt. Stege regarding the other two bullets? A.—Yes; I asked them how I should account for those other two bullets. Stege said, "Let that ride."

The witness said she had previously learned from the police that three bullets had been fired from the revolver with which Rheta was shot.

Q.—Now, doctor, one other point I overlooked. Was anything said about where the gun was held when Rheta was shot? A.—Yes, I said to Dr. Hoffman, "I understand the gun was fired right against her body." He said it was. I said I couldn't stand to say that, I couldn't say that.

The defense attorney then introduced some formal exhibits after Dr. Wynekoop identified them. One of them was a letter she had written and the other was a receipt, dated Oct. 9, for some morphine.

Q.—Now, doctor, have you seen Assistant State's Attorney Long since that time at the Fillmore station when he told you that story you have related? A.—No.

As a court bailif brought the witness a fresh glass of water Attorney Smith announced he was through with his direct examination. A recess was taken to allow the witness to recuperate for the ordeal of the cross-examination.

2 MORE CHARACTER WITNESSES HEARD IN WYNEKOOP CASE

Two more character witnesses took the stand for Dr. Alice Wynekoop before she herself began to testify yesterday morning. The first was Charles Ward of Evanston, who identified himself as a loan officer for Northwestern university. He said he had known the defendant for many years and had often visited at her home. When asked concerning Dr. Wynekoop's reputation for truth, veracity, and as a peaceful and law abiding citizen, he replied: "Very good."

"We called off all the other character witnesses in response to your honor's suggestion," Attorney Milton Smith then told Judge Miller, "but one woman came anyway. We'd like to put her on."

This last character witness proved to be Mrs. B. F. Langworthy of Winnetka, a well known club woman. She said she had known Dr. Wynekoop for 30 years and answered "good" to the formal questions concerning the defendant's reputation.

Notes of the Wynekoop Trial

The sixty choice seats, leather-upholstered, massed in the front of the courtroom and reserved for the aristocracy of courtroom hangers-on, were the subject of many spirited squabbles during the day.

Dr. Wynekoop, resting on the witness stand during a morning recess, was one of the interested spectators of such a contest between two stout women. Investigation revealed that the battle for possession of the seat was between the third cousin of a bailif's wife and the sister-in-law of a precinct captain. While they were arguing, a third woman of physical prominence, identified as the next door neighbor of an alderman, grabbed the disputed place and held it triumphantly.

Among those displaced by these members of the Bailifs' and Deputy Sherifs' I-gotta Drag club, were Walker and Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, son and daughter of the defendant. Walker clung precariously to a place by the door, and Catherine was almost lost in a crowd by a window.

There were only two men, both of small stature, in the sixty reserved seats. Now and then they cast fearful glances at the wave of corpulent femininity which threatened to engulf them.

The dignity of the proceedings was somewhat marred whenever the courtroom door was opened. The strong language of police mingled with the outraged yells of the populace endeavoring to enter sent a blast of sound into the courtroom.

At least 500 persons jammed the corridors outside the courtroom at 2 p. m. Not one was admitted, the courtroom already having been jammed to capacity. The disappointed curiosity seekers set up a roar each time some favored personage was permitted to enter ahead of them.

The rythmic chewing of gum by at least a hundred jaws accompanied the defendant's testimony. Now and then a vibrant crack of moist chicle punctuated a statement by the witness.

To a male reporter the congregation appeared to be garbed in a most garish fashion. Loud reds, screaming blues, dazzling oranges, and yellows were among the most popular colors among the curious women who attended. In contrast was the somber black dress and hat of the defendant and the quiet gray silk gown worn by her daughter, Dr. Catherine.

A few distinguished guests were admitted to the courtroom through the judge's private entrance to chambers. One of these was Attorney Frank J. Loesch, the veteran head of the Chicago crime commission.

"I came up to see the show," he remarked as he took a seat near the judge's bench.

The wives of three judges attended the afternoon session. They were Mrs. Emily Miller, wife of the presiding judge; Mrs. Ross C. Hall, whose husband now presides in the Appellate court, and Mrs. George F. Rush, whose husband is now sitting in the Criminal court. Mrs. Bertha Miller, mother of the presiding judge, was also present.

MOVE TO RENEW FREEDOM OFFER TO PHILIPPINES

President Backs Program for Concessions.

BY JOHN HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—[Special.]—In compliance with the request expressed by President Roosevelt in a special message today, Democratic leaders in congress prepared to rush through to enactment at this session legislation extending the terms of the Hawes-Cutting bill for Philippine independence.

Not only will the new administration measure reoffer to the Filipinos the chance for freedom they failed to take last year, but it will provide for even more complete relinquishment by the United States of military rights in the islands than was provided in the earlier act.

At the suggestion of the President the United States will plan to retain no military bases or reservations in the islands. And such naval bases and coaling stations as are retained will be granted to the United States subject to negotiations to be undertaken by the American government and that of the new republic.

Amendment Advocated.

In his message President Roosevelt stressed the continuing obligation of this country to grant freedom to the islands and advocated the amendment of the former bill in respect to the military and naval bases as a method of removing at least some of the difficulties in the way of the Filipino people's acceptance of the American formula.

The Hawes-Cutting act, as originally approved, Jan. 17, 1933, provided for a program of progessive action which would result in independence for the islands in from 12 to 14 years, with a ten year trial period during which a temporary Filipino government would be in power under the tutelage of the United States.

The act required, however, that as the first step in the program the Philippine legislature should call a constitutional convention within one year from the date of the act's approval. This as the result of political disagreement, the insular legislature failed to do and the act became a dead letter a month and a half ago.

New Bill in House.

Under the new bill introduced in the house today by Chairman John McDuffie [Dem., Ala.] of the insular affairs committee the Philippine legislature will have the time for calling the convention extended to next Oct. 1. Committee consideration of the bill will commence next Monday, Mr. McDuffie announced.

In his message the President declared in part:

"Over a third of a century ago the United States as a result of a war which had its origin in the Caribbean sea acquired sovereignty over the Philippine islands, which lie many thousands of miles from our shores across the widest of oceans. Our nation covets no territory; it desires to hold no people over whom it has gained sovereignty through war against their will.

"In keeping with the principles of justice and in keeping with our traditions and aims, our government for many years has been committed by law to ultimate independence for the people of the Philippine islands whenever they should establish a suitable government capable of maintaining that independence among the nations of the world. We have believed that the time for such independence is at hand."

Nevertheless, he said, to cut the Philippines loose immediately would be an injustice "little short of a denial of independence itself." To impose more immediate or severe restrictions on Philippine imports, he asserted, "would reflect discredit on ourselves."

Brookfield Fire Chief Faces Assault Charge

Fred B. McDowell Sr., chief of the Brookfield fire department, was named in a complaint charging assault and battery signed yesterday by Richard C. Brown, manager of the Brookfield News. Police Magistrate John H. Erhardt of Berwyn, who received the complaint, said he probably would issue a warant for McDowell's arrest today. Hearing was set for March 6. Brown charged that McDowell, who is head of the Civil Works administration in Brookfield, struck him after an argument in the suburban fire station where he had gone to obtain a list of CWA employés.

FRANCE ARRESTS STAVISKY WIDOW IN BOND SCANDAL

Swindler's Check Book Stubs Are Recovered.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 2.—Mme. Arlett Simon Stavisky, mysterious and beautiful widow of Serge Stavisky, was arrested by agents for the surete general [secret police] today in connection with the $60,000,000 Stavisky municipal pawnshop bond scandal.

Mme. Stavisky was taken into custody after the recovery of incriminating stubs from her husband's checkbook. The stubs revealed the distribution of checks for millions of francs to persons believed to have been on Stavisky's pay roll.

The checkbook evidence was presented to former Premier Albert Sarraut by Chief Bony of the secret service. Bony was recently suspended for failing to bring to the bar of justice "high personages" connected with the collapse of the Bayonne pawnshop swindle which led to bloody street rioting and the overthrow of two governments.

Identity Kept Secret.

The identity of the mysterious "personality" who presented Stavisky's checkbook stubs to Chief Bony is being kept a secret by the police. They admitted they feared reprisals if his name was made public.

The police declared Mme. Stavisky turned over the stubs to a friend on the day Stavisky was found dead in a lonely hideaway in Chamonix. The police said Stavisky killed himself, but this version of the swindler's death is doubted by others, who insist he was shot "to get him out of the way."

The recovery of the Stavisky checkbook stubs was dramatic. Bony telephoned Sarraut that a "personality" in possession of the stubs was in his house. Sarraut and Minister of Justice Cheron visited the residence and induced the mysterious individual to turn them over.

Widow's Promise Recalled.

As a result of this important recovery, Bony was permitted to resume duty temporarily.

It was recalled that Mme. Stavisky promised on Jan. 8—the day she was told her husband was dead—to reveal the names of those who had visited in the Stavisky home. She said she would mention "even cabinet ministers."

The list of names on the checkbook stubs has not yet been published, but it was divulged that the notation of one stub covering 100,000 francs reads as follows: "Order Bureau Queuville Agriculture."

Denies Receiving Money.

Henri Queuville is now minister of agriculture. He immediately issued a statement denying he had ever received any money from Stavisky or his agents, or that he was minister of agriculture on Nov. 16, 1932, when the check was issued.

Mme. Stavisky was the indirect cause of a duel in January. Deputy Henriot charged in the chamber of deputies that former Minister of Foreign Affairs Paul-Boncour and former Minister of Education de Monzie had visited her in jail several years ago.

The charge led to a duel between De Monzi and Henriot.

Mme. Stavisky is Stavisky's second wife and the mother of his two children. They were married in 1926 shortly after they were arrested in a raid on a gay dinner party in a Paris suburb.

BABY IS ABDUCTED; GRANDMOTHER AND MOTHER ARE SLAIN

Dallas, Tex., March 2.—(AP)—Giles S. Boggess, 43, an unemployed tailor, confessed in a signed statement tonight he had shot to death his wife and mother-in-law and abducted his 2 year old daughter.

Boggess, in the statement made to police and witnessed by newspaper men, said he was angered because his wife refused to return to him after an estrangement and declined to drop the divorce suit she had filed.

The wife, Mrs. Gladys Boggess, was 39 and her mother, Mrs. Julia Woodward, 76.

The shooting occurred at the home of Mrs. Boggess' sister, Mrs. W. H. Fortson, where Mrs. Boggess, her mother, and the 2 year old daughter, Martha Julia, had been living since Mrs. Boggess and her husband separated at Bonham about a month ago.

Boggess' statement said his son, Earl, 9, and a friend accompanied him to the Fortson home. After the shooting, he said, he told them to drive to Bonham with the girl and leave her at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Boggess.

Boggess said he came to Dallas today to see his wife and plead with her to drop the divorce suit, set for hearing next Monday.

"I asked her to come back to me, for the sake of the child," he said, "but she refused."

PLAN TO DISBAR LAWYERS GUILTY OF FEE ABUSES

John D. Black, president of the Chicago Bar association, announced yesterday that disbarment proceedings would be brought against lawyers deemed guilty of unethical practices in receivership and foreclosure cases as soon as specific instances were called to the attention of the grievance committee of the association.

"I will use all my influence with the bar association to expedite hearings before the grievance committee in instances where lawyers are charged with unprofessional conduct in these cases," Mr. Black said, "but the charges must be made. In the past attorneys have been loath to press charges against their colleagues, but it is only through the full cooperation of the bar that we can do away with whatever abuses exist."

The bar association Thursday night made public two reports on unethical practices of attorneys in receivership and foreclosure cases. These involved excessive fees for receivers' attorneys, collusion between law firms in receivership cases, and instances where attorneys begin litigation for their personal benefit.

IMMIGRANTS OF WORLD FOUND TO BE GOING HOME

GENEVA, March 2.—(AP)—Immigrants throughout the world are going back to the "old country," the international labor office reported today, but said this was a healthy, not a bad sign of economic conditions.

Migration figures indicate the return to more normal condition the report asserted, while the most recent statistics show signs of improvement in different parts of the world.

"In the United States net immigration of 132,000 in 1929 became net emigration of 470,000 in 1932," the report said. Similar conditions existed in Mexico and Argentina.

JOHN O'CONNELL NAMES STREWL AT KIDNAP TRIAL

Tells of Abduction for $75,000 Ransom.

Albany, N. Y., March 2.—[Special.]—John J. O'Connell, ex-artillery officer and nephew of Ed and Dan O'Connell, Albany political overlords, took the witness stand here today and identified Manny Strewl as one of the kidnapers who held him for $75,000 ransom last July.

"That is the man right there," he said, leveling an accusing finger at the defendant after telling the jury how a man he said was Strewl had come to the room where he was being held captive and told him he would need a "go-between."

Strewl greeted the "identification" with an outburst of profanity and had to be restrained by court attachés.

Before "putting the finger" on Strewl, O'Connell recited the details that led up to his kidnaping on the night of July 7.

He told of meeting his sweetheart, Mary Fahey, on that evening and of going with her to a roadhouse, where they consumed a bottle of soda.

Forced Into Automobile.

After that, he said, he returned to his home at 14 Putnam street and was confronted by a man with a gun when he got out of his automobile.

O'Connell nervously adjusted his dark blue tie.

"I started to fight, but it wasn't any use," declared O'Connell. "Two men swung at me and the next thing I knew I was in their auto and being driven away.

"I guess it was about an hour later when we arrived at a house I couldn't see because a bandage had been placed over my eyes.

"It was extremely warm and the bandage slipped a little. I was placed on a bed and shortly a man came in and said he had been appointed to fix things up for me. I could plainly see his features as the result of the bandage being loosened.

He Points Out Strewl.

"Do you see that man here?" asked Prosecutor Delaney.

"Yes, that's him right there," O'Conness replied, pointing dramatically at Strewl.

It was then that the defendant leaped up and denounced his accuser.

The prosecution produced a surprise witness today in Sam B. Gross, a knit goods salesman of Toronto, Canada, who told of a conversation he claimed to have overheard between Strewl and one Phil Ziegler, alleged gangster, in a New York City hotel one night in February of last year. Present at the conversation, also, according to Gross, were two men whom he named as Al Fisher and Ben Golinsky and whom he identified, along with Ziegler, as members of the notorious "Purple gang" of Detroit, and John Oley, another Albany beer runner sought as one of the kidnapers.

Gross said he heard Ziegler say to Strewl:

"How old is old man O'Connell?"

To which Strewl answered, according to the witness:

"O, about 50. But what do you care about the old man when we can get young O'Connell. He is the only child among three uncles, and you can get him without the law interfering. You get the man and the hideout, and we get the money. They'll pay anything for him."

AMERICAN ENVOYS TO RUSSIA GET TASTE OF 'CHEAP DOLLAR'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, March 2.—Accompanied by twenty members of the staf of the United States embassy at Moscow, Ambassador William C. Bullitt arrived in Warsaw tonight. He will be the guest of John Cudahy, ambassador to Poland, until he leaves for Moscow Tuesday.

The Americans complained that Warsaw is more expensive than Paris, and when informed that prices in Moscow are still higher they anxiously inquired about the pending bill compensating them for the leanness of President Roosevelt's emasculated dollar.

In Moscow the Soviet State bank officially quotes the dollar at 1 ruble 20 kopeks. Officials of a local Polish-American bank today said they have a large supply of soviet rubles on hand, which they will gladly sell for 2 cents each. They said they regularly supply large quantities of Russian currency to various foreign representatives in Moscow.

Bullitt strongly opposes this practice. He promises his staf that one of his first steps in Moscow will be to negotiate with the soviet authorities for a special rate of exchange for the American representation. The Americans have been ordered not to buy soviet currency abroad.

14 AUTHORITIES FOR CODES SET UP QUARTERS HERE

Investigate and Adjust NRA Complaints.

Code authorities for 14 industries have established quarters in Chicago since the NRA campaign was opened by President Roosevelt, according to F. L. Roberts, regional director of the federal trade of commerce. Of that number, Mr. Roberts said yesterday, eleven have been approved by President Roosevelt, while three are in operation pending final approval. The fourteen are exclusive of other authorized code authorities who have their offices in other cities throughout the country.

Code authorities are individuals or committees who receive, investigate, and attempt to adjust complaints regarding alleged violations of the code agreement provisions governing each industry. Disputes which cannot be conciliated locally are transmitted to Washington for settlement. Alleged violations of a serious nature are sent to the United States attorney general or to the federal trade commission for investigation and possible prosecution.

Compliance Boards Temporary.

The so-called compliance boards which have been handling NRA complaints exist only until code authorities for the respective industries are appointed.

The 11 officially appointed code authorities, the industries they represent, and the addresses of their headquarters, follow below. Where the code authority is a committee, the name of the secretary or the chairman of the committee is given.

BITUMINOUS COAL—John A. Lapp, new postoffice building, 433 West Van Buren street.
FARM EQUIPMENT—H. J. Samelt, secretary, 608 South Dearborn street.
FISHING TACKLE—E. P. Hoyle, secretary, 160 North La Salle street.
MARKING DEVICES—W. S. Lord, secretary, 431 South Dearborn street.
PAPERBOARD—H. S. Adler, secretary, 608 South Dearborn street.

LUMBER AND TIMBER PRODUCTS—Paul Grady, 111 West Washington street.

The Illinois director of the national emergency council of the NRA administration is John E. Cassidy, who has quarters in the department of commerce offices at 201 North Wells street.

5,000 MORE CWA WORKERS LOSE JOBS IN COUNTY

Five thousand civil works administration workers were laid off yesterday, bringing to 32,000 the total discharged in Cook county since demobilization of the army of 100,000 in the county was started last month. In downstate counties 12,500 workers were laid off yesterday.

Frank D. Chase, Illinois civil works administrator, announced the appointment of a board of price review, composed of Louis Balkin, contractor; George W. Blackinton, engineer, and C. I. Hickman, electrical engineer. The board will pass upon all CWA purchases above $100. The bills will be paid if this board finds them reasonable.

Myrt Asks Divorce

Mrs. Myrtle Vail Damerel, Myrt of "Myrt and Marge."

Mrs. Myrtle Vail Damerel, who takes the part of Myrt in the Columbia radio network drama "Myrt and Marge," has filed suit in the Circuit court for a divorce from George Damerel. Mr. Damerel, who now lives in Los Angeles, was a musical comedy star twenty years ago, playing the part of Prince Danilo in "The Merry Widow."

Attorney Robert Eberle filed the suit, which charged the former actor with desertion. The couple have been living apart since May, 1932, it was stated. No claim for alimony was made, but Mrs. Damerel asked custody of her son George, 16 years old, who is now in school in California.

Mrs. Damerel, then known on the stage as Myrtle Vail and her husband met in 1907. They were married the same year in New Orleans. For some years they played in vaudeville as a team. Six years ago Mr. Damerel engaged in the real estate business in Chicago. Mrs. Damerel has been in broadcasting work for the past four years.

BRITAIN TO ADD FOUR SQUADRONS TO ITS AIR FORCE

LONDON, March 2.—(AP)—Plans to add four squadrons to the British air forces were announced today by Lord Londonderry, air minister. Conservatives called the projected increase inadequate. They charged that the government is "gambling with the future of the country."

Estimates given by the minister set the total outlay at $87,800,000, an increase of $675,000 over last year. Of the four squadrons, two would be added to home defense, one flying boat squadron to the overseas strength of the royal air force, and the equivalent of one squadron to the navy's air forces.

After allowing for reorganization of the air arm of the fleet, the strength of the royal air force will be brought to 81 regular squadrons, in addition to 13 nonregular squadrons for home defense. Plans for the coming year include more stainless steel for flying boats and many later improvements in engines and mechanism.

BERLIN POLICE SEIZE WEALTH OF "FOES OF STATE"

BERLIN, March 2.—(AP)—Wholesale seizures of bank accounts, real estate, strong boxes and other property of Communists and other "enemies of the state" were announced today in the official gazette.

About 80 items, including athletic goods, radio sets, bicycles, automobiles and typewriters, indicated that the Berlin police did a thorough job of ferreting out where the "enemies" left their belongings when they escaped across the border during the Nazi revolution.

Among the men whose property was confiscated are Prof. George Bernhard, former editor of the Vossische Zeitung; Dr. Magnus Hirschfeld, director of the famous Institute of sexology which bears his name, and Wilhelm Pieck, former Communist floor leader in the Prussian diet. Prof. Albert Einstein's bank accounts and real estate were confiscated last November.

ROOSEVELT ASKS LAW TO END JOBS OF POLITICIANS

Would Mean Loss of Nash PWA Contract.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today threw his influence behind a law "demonetizing politics" by cutting high party officials off from all federal easy money contracts and from holding federal and political jobs at the same time.

One of the results of the bill which President Roosevelt today urged a committee of congressional leaders to pass would be to outlaw bids such as that entered by Pat Nash, Illinois national committeeman, for construction of a Chicago sanitary district project financed by federal easy money.

Postmaster James A. Farley will have to choose between his cabinet post, his chairmanship of the Democratic national committee and his chairmanship of the New York state committee. Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross will have to drop either her vice chairmanship of the party's national committee or her job as director of the mint.

Could Ask New Bids.

Arthur F. Mullen, the only national committeeman who has consistently ignored all the President's hints about politico lawyers, must choose between representing Nebraska on the national committee and continuing his large and lucrative law practice before government departments. W. A. Julian, treasurer of the United States, will have to quit that job or drop his seat on the national committee from Ohio.

Whether the proposed bill will actually force Mr. Nash to withdraw the low bid which the Nash Bros. Construction company entered for the Chicago PWA project seemed somewhat uncertain. The law, if passed, would come after the filing of the bids and should not affect them, but the bids could be canceled and new ones called for after the law is passed.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who has been considering whether the Nash company shall be allowed its PWA bid, was not one of those attending the White House conference on demonetization of politics. Continuing his independent deliberations on the Nash problem, he repeated today that he has no made up his mind.

Would Hit Committeemen.

President Roosevelt explained today that the bill which he urged congressional leaders to draft would, first, prohibit practicing before government departments by party officials, or others with political connections, and, second, raise the standard of rules which government departments themselves promulgate on such matters.

He said specifically that the prohibition against "practicing" before departments would be broad enough to cover national committeemen being awarded easy money contracts. He did not mention the Nash incident specifically.

Those attending the White House conference were Senators William H. King [Dem., Utah], Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], George R. Norris [Rep., Neb.], James Byrnes [Dem., S. C.], Representative Hatton Sumners [Dem., Tex.], and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr.

HOPKINS REVEALS CWA DEMOBILIZATION PLAN FOR NEXT FOUR WEEKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—[Special.]—The demobilization schedule for the civil works army during the next four weeks was laid out today by Harry L. Hopkins, head of federal relief and the Civil Works administration. At the same time Mr. Hopkins estimated that the number of families on relief rolls dropped from 2,625,870 in December to 2,560,000 in January, a decline largely due to CWA activities.

In laying out the demobilization schedule for CWA up to the close of March Mr. Hopkins ordered 1,104,000 workers dropped from civil works jobs in the next four weeks. The CWA army is to be cut from 2,609,500 to 1,505,500 during that period. Neither of these totals, however, include federal CWA workers.

Illinois, under Mr. Hopkins' orders, will drop 11,000 men each week except the week beginning March 23, when 11,500 are to be let out. The state's CWA force is to be cut from 159,500 to 115,000 by the end of the month. Chicago projects, however, are exempt.

In his report on unemployment conditions Mr. Hopkins said that the number of families in Illinois on relief rolls had dropped from 219,315 in December to 183,163 in January. This trend typical of the whole country, is contrary to the usual seasonal change.

DERN DENIES QUIZ WAS ORDERED ON PLANE 'SABOTAGE'

Washington, D. C., March 2.—[Special.]—Reports that President Roosevelt, through Secretary Dern, had ordered an investigation of charges of sabotage against army planes flying the mail were flatly denied tonight by the war secretary.

Mr. Dern was reported to have announced late tonight that the President had ordered the investigation, and that while he personally did not believe the charges, they would be thoroughly investigated. He informed THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE by telephone that he had ordered no such investigation and had talked to no newspaper man about the rumors, which he admitted having heard.

"I made no such announcement and have ordered no such investigation," said Secretary Dern. "I heard these rumors of sabotage late this afternoon and dismissed them as fantastic. I have not been consulted by any newspaper man on the subject. Whoever wrote that story was merely using his imagination."

The report was to the effect that the President had ordered an investigation and that Secretary Dern had made announcement to this effect tonight. The report continued that reports of punctured gasoline tanks, controls being tampered with, and the presence of water in gasoline tanks were being thoroughly investigated.

Teachers, Parents to Carry Plea to Governor Today

Several hundred teachers and parents will make a second trip to Springfield this morning to carry their "front porch" legislative campaign to the office of Gov. Horner. Under the direction of John Fewkes, teacher at the Tilden Technical High school and chairman of the teachers' volunteer emergency committee, the teachers will urge the governor to use his influence for legislation that will divert more funds to the state school distributive fund and provide greater revenue for Chicago's school system. The teachers and parents will leave by automobile at 4:30 o'clock this morning.

FRENCH, GERMAN OCEAN AIR LINES POOL RESOURCES

Unite for Mail Service to South America.

PARIS, March 2.—(AP)—The hastening of a Paris-New York postal route was seen today in the signing between French and German air lines of a pool for a five day air service to South America.

This accord, which is subject to government approval, narrowed the gap between Europe and South America and apparently ended a race between French and German lines for the rich mail traffic there.

The Air France and Lufthansa companies reached the agreement Feb. 12, and the French air ministry and parliamentary committees were expected to accept it in view of the keen German competition.

Expect to Speed Up Service.

Service from Paris to Buenos Aires will be reduced from eight to five days and with the German lease of a seaplane harbor in the Azores service to New York was foreshadowed.

Under the accord, which would become effective in August, planes would be shared, but the French would get 60 per cent of the receipts for four years with equality established in the fifth year.

A three cornered race among Germany, France and Italy has been underway for the air mail business of South America.

U. S. Involved in Battle.

New York, March 2.—(AP)—The Franco-German air pool announced in Paris today is the latest phase of a commercial battle waged since 1928 between the United States, Germany, and France for air transportation supremacy in South America.

United States air interests are represented by Pan-American Airways, which entered the South American field with international air mail contracts in November, 1930, against the Air France company and Lufthansa of Germany.

The goal of each of the three lines has been to obtain a flying time advantage between South American capitals and, respectively, either Berlin, Paris, or Miami.

U. S. Holds Advantage.

Pan-American, extending its original 252 miles of international mail routes into the system's present 30,980 miles, has held this advantage since 1931 by maintaining a flying schedule of seven days to the United States against nine days to Europe by Air France and Lufthansa.

The present pooling of resources by the German and French companies is regarded here as a combined effort by the two companies to recapture South American air supremacy at the expense of the other competitor serving the United States.

The South Atlantic presents the greatest difficulty to the European lines in attaining this goal. Both Air France and Lufthansa are now developing ships to fly the ocean nonstop and cut the flying time to five days between Europe and South America.

Refuel in Midocean.

At the present time France has test flown two government subsidized ships nonstop and is preparing another. Lufthansa has utilized a midocean refueling ship, the Westphalen, and also is developing equipment for nonstop flights.

Regular European-South American routes, however, are at present part ship and part airplane via the Cape Verde islands, or Bakar, West Africa, to Natal.

Pan-American indicated it was prepared to answer this challenge for flying time supremacy. Three new type clipper ships are under construction, Sikorsky and Martin 19 ton amphibians with a greater size and greater speed than the new ships being developed and flown by Air France and Lufthansa. These ships, it is said, can match the five day schedules to Brazil and Argentina proposed by the European lines.

ENGINE FORCES DOWN ARMY AIR MAIL PILOT ON WAY TO CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O., March 2.—(AP)—A forced landing by Air Mail Pilot McCoy, flying here from Newark, N. J., was reported to Cleveland airport officials today.

McCoy was forced down at the Mercer, Pa., airport, the officials said, when engine trouble developed in one of his plane's two motors.

Another army plane was sent from Cleveland to Mercer to pick up McCoy's load of mail.

Rain and fog forced cancelation today of flights between Cleveland and Chicago.

HEAD OF GENEVA LABOR BODY SAYS NRA IS A SUCCESS

GENEVA, March 2.—(AP)—A favorable picture of the American industrial situation was presented tonight by Harold Butler, head of the International Labor bureau.

In an address before a large audience at the University of Geneva Butler said the reduction in working hours in the United States had not proved to be a barrier to economic recovery, as many had prophesied.

Undoubtedly, he added, this move helped to diminish unemployment.

ARMY CONTRACT COMMITTEE QUIZ VOTED BY HOUSE

Investigation Planned to Cover Wide Range.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—The house of representatives today authorized its military affairs committee to make a full and complete investigation of charges which have buzzed about high officials of the war department.

Warnings that any army officers found implicated in scandal would be court-martialed sounded on the house floor as the resolution of inquiry presented by Chairman John J. McSwain [Dem., S. C.] of the military affairs committee was voted through.

Inquiry Scope Defined.

Indications were that the inquiry would result in a rounding up and airing of all the rumors of war department scandal which have recently been heard in Washington. The resolution calls for an investigation of "the allegations and charges that have been or may be made relative to profiteering and irregularities involving the expenditures of public funds for national defense, the use and disposition of surplus property, and other matters in which the problem of national defense, in whole or in part, is involved."

The terms of the resolution were made broad to include not only the transactions in surplus material and the purchase of motor vehicles now under investigation by the District of Columbia grand jury, together with charges concerning undue profits made on the purchases of airplanes and engines, but also an airing of the fitness of the army air service, its equipment and training.

Air Mail Deaths Cited.

Republican speakers during the brief debate on the resolution demanded that this last investigation be made because of the recent deaths of army flyers in carrying the mail.

Chairman McSwain declared that the inquiry would not be "a fishing expedition," and that the war department should welcome the exploration of charges which now becloud the whole army.

"We do not intend to besmirch any one unless the evidence is there," he said. "But neither will our investigation be a whitewash affair."

OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING.

Tuscola, Ill., March 2.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Owen, pioneer residents of Douglas county, are celebrating their golden wedding today.

Aviation Notes

Robert Minshall, chief design engineer of the Boeing Airplane company, yesterday conferred with officials of United Air Lines here on the operation of a fleet of ten new Boeing transport planes which will be placed in service by the air line in May. The new transports are powered with geared motors, which increase their speed 15 to 20 miles an hour. The first of the new ships is being test flown at Seattle, Minshall said.

A half ton of food was carried to families snow and ice bound on Nantucket islands near Boston last week by an American Airways plane as a regular air express shipment. The families were threatened with famine when heavy ice made it impossible for them even to fish.

FAIR TO PRESENT A MUCH CHANGED FACE THIS YEAR

50 Buildings Give Way to March of Progress.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A Century of Progress of 1934 will present a widely different appearance to the exhibition of 1933, it became apparent yesterday when officials revealed that more than 50 structures have been demolished or are in the process of being torn down to make way for improved ones. The major portion of the demolition has been accomplished.

The main Fair buildings will remain but their colors will be changed. The scene on the mainland will be altered greatly. A large number of cheap constructions already have been reduced to piles of timber or removed entirely, on the sites of which the series of villages previously announced will result in a large area devoted to the picturesque.

A Radically Changed Scene.

On the island the new beach Midway, with its board walk, the new camp for army and possibly navy and marine troops behind the Skyride base, an alteration of what was Hollywood, the German-American building and, possibly, the Casino, will effect a radically changed picture.

A survey of the grounds yesterday and a delineation of demolition work already accomplished or now in progress, made by Al Gonsior, in charge of demolition for the Fair, indicated what the visitor to A Century of Progress will see in the Fair's exterior, beginning June 1.

Going south from the Administration building, the visitor will see the familiar Sears-Roebuck building and Illinois Host building on the west. On the east, the grandstand will remain, from which water sports on the lagoon will be viewed, but the floating theater, as it was, will be missing.

Keep "Sweden" and "Italia."

The building "Sweden," south of the Illinois Host house, will remain, and across from it "Italia" again will stand as the official building of the Italian government. This year it will be augmented by a space 75 feet to the north and 75 feet to the south of the building.

South of Sweden the Czechoslovakian building again will be seen. The restaurant adjoining it has been wrecked. Beyond the Skyride, which this year will be operated by A Century of Progress itself, and west of the Hall of Science, the Llama temple, Japanese pavilion and official Chinese building will remain. The Manchurian railway building to the extreme west is down.

New Swiss Village.

In its place, and skirting the group and fronting the inner driveway just south of the Chinese Republic's building, will be the Swiss village, a concession. To the south of the Hall of Science, opposite the General Exhibits building, the Hall of Religion probably will remain, although no contract has been signed as yet. The Pabst café is being demolished. American Radiator, Firestone, and Sinclair structures will remain. "A World a Million Years Ago" will be not be reopened, but the building will be remodeled for another use.

Beginning at 23d street, the concentration of villages begins. On the west side of the drive going south, the Oasis, formerly Morocco, on an enlarged scale, will be seen. This is followed by Belgium and, probably, the Alpine garden in a new form. The Colonial village, the largest of all, will be constructed south of this. The buildings which last year were occupied by "Miss America," the Whirlplane, and the Battle of Gettysburg are being torn down.

A Parade of Villages.

To the south of the Colonial village on the west side of the drive will be the English village, for which the "Life" and "Funnies" building, the Midway café and the "two-headed baby" have made way. Ripley's building remains.

Continuing south, the Carter House of Magic, and the building where the Rhumba dancers attracted and shocked rural throngs are now wrecked, and all that remains of the Seminole Indian concession is a pile of withered palm leaves. The German Black Forest, a village which will appear to be snow encrusted, will replace these.

On the east side of the drive, south from 23d street, Streets of Paris, reputedly a purified Paris, may be visited. The space occupied by the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company is being held without alteration pending the company's decision as to join the 1934 Exposition.

Enlarge Old Heidelberg.

To the southward, Old Heidelberg will be augmented by a large garden and a Bavarian village, using space occupied by the demolished Winston Racers. Adjacent to it, the Italian village will replace the Cyclone coaster, which will be on the new Midway, and the old whale exhibit space. The whale has departed and its building is down.

The Pantheon de la Guerre will remain, and will utilize space in front of the building, formerly used by games, artists, etc. Next to it Tunisia will be seen, this village replacing Gorilla Villa and the auto scooters. Whether the gorillas and chimpanzees will be back in another location is not yet known.

Where the old Oriental village and Spanish pavilion stood, together with the Lion motordrome, a large Spanish village will be erected. The little adobe house of Mexican cooking will remain, in an enlarged version, south of it. Next to it the old Flying Turns will be converted into a Mountain ride, with artificial snow adding to the general scenic effect.

Midgets to Return.

The Midget village will remain, to be peopled again by last year's tiny occupants. An Irish village is planned for the location occupied by the old Dance ship, used briefly by the late Texas Guinan and her girls last year—now largely demolished—and the old Plantation show.

Fort Dearborn will remain as it was last year, with its restaurant specializing in southern cooking. The Victor Vienna restaurant and all the model homes and planning halls but one, the Moore house, will remain.

The huge 1,100-foot long Ford building extending southward to the driveway which skirts the Mayan building is under construction. Workmen were pouring cement yesterday, and several trees were in across the way in Ford park.

Renew Wings of Century.

The Air Show building is for sale. The Wings of a Century, pageant of transportation produced by A Century of Progress last year, again will be seen in its lakeside building across from the giant Travel and Transport building. The show will be improved and enlarged. South of the Travel and Transport building, prize winning hens from throughout the country again will compete throughout the summer in a national egg laying contest.

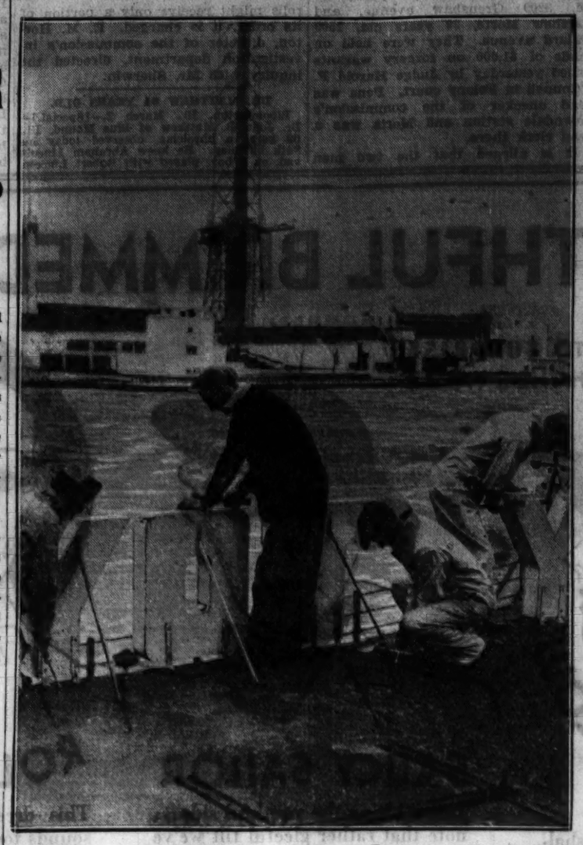
The southernmost entrance to the Exposition grounds will be just south of the model hen houses, at about 35th street, the land occupied by the Days of '49, the 101 Ranch show, Old Mexico, the Ukrainian building, and other features last year, thus being outside the gates. On the west side the Exposition will use this ground for unloading facilities, the east side going to the south park.

Rebuild Enchanted Island.

On the island the Thrill house is to be demolished. The 23d street bridge is to be taken over by a large industry and elaborate plans are being made for public entertainment by the industry. The Enchanted Island will be rebuilt into a new playground for children. The Florida outdoor garden in front of the Agricultural building will be converted into a new garden of some sort. The Dairy building will be taken over by a baking industry.

The principal change here will be in the new beach Midway—on which the Fair will spend more than $60,000 to insure appropriate architecture—and the army camp. Extending over the lagoon south from the 16th street bridge will be a 1,500 foot long fountain of water, two lanes of gushing water arching in the center and extending to a 75 foot circular dome at the far south end. Colored lights will play over it at night.

Working on Fair Project



Workmen remodeling the Toy Town Tavern on the Enchanted Island at A Century of Progress. The work was begun when the legislature recently adopted enabling acts to permit authorities to go ahead with preparations for the Fair.

U. S. COURT RULES SEWAGE MICROBE PATENTS VALID

Holds Royalties Are Due to Process Owner.

The microbes known in biochemistry as bacillus M7, which the sanitary district, the city of Milwaukee, and other municipalities employ by the billions to purify their sewage, received the austere consideration of the United States Court of Appeals yesterday.

The court affirmed a decision of Federal Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger that the city of Milwaukee has no right to use the little organisms without paying royalties to the holder of a patent on the process.

Similar Suits Pending.

A similar suit against the sanitary district is pending before Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, and there are others against Cleveland and Indianapolis, so the opinion may result in the recovery of hundreds of thousands of dollars for the patent holder. The amount of the damages will have to be determined by a master in chancery, but the patentee, Activated Sludge Limited and Incorporated, once offered to settle with Milwaukee for 3 per cent of the value of its $9,000,000 disposal plant.

The patents on the sewage treatment process were obtained in England and the United States by the late Walter Jones, iron founder and justice of the peace of Starbridge, a suburb of Birmingham, but the defendants claimed that Jones stole it from one Gilbert Fowler, a University of Manchester professor and chemist of the Manchester water works.

The court found that the process was the discovery of Fowler and associate chemists engaged in municipal experiments, but that its successful development was due to Jones, who had had wide experience in sanitation and who employed Fowler.

Briefly, the activated sludge process consists of purifying the sewage by rapid oxidation. The sewage is kept in a state of agitation, so that the presence of air in the water makes it possible for the aerobic bacteria to do their work, converting putrescent and complex compounds into simpler compounds which are wholesome. Much of the patent provisions relate to the mechanical equipment for treating the sewage.

In his opinion, written for the court, Judge Will M. Sparks dwelt at length with the scientific background of the process, with the so-called "nitrogen cycle," by which plants feed on nitrates, animals feed on plants, and die, whereupon putrefaction sets in, simplifies the complex compounds and water carries them back into the soil to feed more plants.

Used in Chicago Since 1922.

Milwaukee was the first city to make use of the process, having begun its experiments in 1915. The sanitary district has used the method since 1922 and the $120,000,000 sewage disposal program decreed by the United States Supreme court could not be carried out without it. However, the patents expire next year, so that if the sanitary district loses it will merely have to pay royalties up to that time.

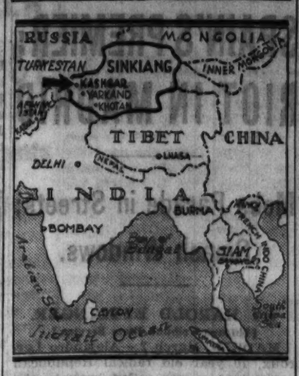
Although the Appellate court sustained Judge Geiger in finding the plaintiff entitled to royalties, it reversed him with respect to an injunction restraining further use of the process.

PLUMBERS BACK BUNDESEN FIGHT ON AMEBIC PERIL

More than 600 members of the plumbing industry in Chicago met last night at 32 West Randolph street and pledged their support to Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, in his efforts to correct old plumbing faults in Chicago buildings and thus eliminate the dangers of amebic dysentery.

Dr. Bundesen was present, as were Joel I. Connolly, chief inspector of the bureau of sanitary engineering; John J. Calnan, vice president of the National Association of Master Plumbers; Charles E. Gawne, president of the Plumbing Contractors' Association of Chicago, and Henry P. Reger, president of the Illinois Master Plumbers.

Britons Slain in Raid



PEIPING, China, March 2.—(AP)—Two British subjects were killed and four were wounded yesterday in Kashgar, eastern Chinese Turkestan, when savage Tungan tribesmen attacked their Turki enemies, dispatches said today.

The Tungans stormed into Kashgar, the capital of Sinkiang province, and then attacked the British consulate, the advices said. When the Tungans entered the British property seeking Turkis they believed to be hidden there it was subjected to a constant crossfire of bullets.

Many Turkis were mercilessly slaughtered, it was reported. The invaders combed streets and made a house to house search, killing their enemies wherever they found them.

The Tungans recently took over civil and military control of south Sinkiang on behalf of the National government.

RUNAWAY SCHOOL GIRLS BACK HOME AFTER HITCH-HIKE

Marjorie Swift, 18 years old, 5524 Cornell avenue, granddaughter of the late George B. Swift, a former mayor of Chicago, and Mary Dickinson, 16 years old, 2970 Sheridan road, who ran away from a girls' school in Aurora on Sunday, were safe in their respective homes last night. They arrived in Chicago on a Chicago and Alton train at 4:30 p. m.

On Thursday Miss Dickinson had notified her parents by telephone from Memphis, Tenn., that the girls had grown tired of hitch-hiking and were willing to return. Funds for their return trip were telegraphed.

Miss Swift, who lives with her grandmother and aunt, Miss Edith Swift, at 5524 Cornell avenue, told members of her household that she had no particular destination in mind when she set out and that she traveled south because most of the big cars were headed that way. Both girls were tired, they said, but showed no other ill effects of their journey.

Tavern Owner Shot When He Tries to Resist Robber

Anton Mikanozich, 45 years old, part owner of a saloon at 2666 East 106th street, was shot in the head, probably fatally, last night when he attempted to resist two bandits in the place. As the robbers ordered him to raise his hands he reached for a gun. One of the men shot him and then fled with his companion. Mikanozich was taken to the South Chicago hospital.

LIGHT CO. MEN OF MILWAUKEE VOTE TO STRIKE

Milwaukee, Wis., March 2 (Saturday).—(AP)—Union employes of the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company and the Milwaukee Coke and Gas company voted at meetings early today to go on strike Monday morning.

The strikes would tie up all street car and bus transportation and deprive the city of electric light, power, and illuminating gas. Walkouts are scheduled to begin at 4 a. m. Monday unless the strikers win recognition of their unions and higher wages.

The vote on the strike came as a surprise at three meetings, attended by members of the electrical workers' local union, the street railway union, the operators' union, and six affiliated unions of which the gas company employés are members.

Union leaders refused to reveal the number of electric company employés who are members of the unions. Merton Sloate, spokesman for the gas company employés, said all except four employés of the gas company are union members and predicted all would leave their jobs Monday unless the strike call is rescinded.

Arraign Young Tannen on Drunken Driving Charge

Los Angeles, Cal., March 2.—[Special.]—William J. Tannen, 23 year old actor of Katharine Cornell's stage company and son of Julius Tannen, actor, today was arraigned on a charge of driving while intoxicated. The prosecution was the outgrowth of an automobile collision last Feb. 3, in which Tannen, another young man, and two girl actresses—all four of the Cornell stage troupe—were injured. Tannen's car knocked down a traffic signal, street light, and mail box.

PRESIDENT SACASA TAKES FULL CONTROL OF NICARAGUAN ARMY

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, March 2.—(AP)—President Juan B. Sacasa today issued a sweeping executive decree by which he takes command of the military situation in accordance with the national constitution.

The president's action, following the slaying of the former rebel general, Agusto Sandino, by national guardsmen last week, reforms the regulations governing the national guard.

Strict disciplinary measures were ordered. President Sacasa, as commander in chief of the army, assumed the sole power as to the appointment, retirement, and transfers of the guard personnel. Gen. Anastacio Somosa, director of the national guard, was ordered to report to the president daily on military matters.

Bomb Explosion Damages Saloon and Perils Family

A bomb explosion damaged the front of a saloon at 671 West 18th street early today. Charles Mikutckis, the owner, his wife, and their daughter, who were sleeping in the rear, were shaken by the blast. Property damage amounted to $100. Mikutckis told police the only reason he could assign for the attack was his refusal to join a tavern association which was being organized to purchase beer out of town and undersell retail competitors.

Stein's tavern at 1413 North Crawford avenue was damaged early today by a bomb explosition. The bomb was placed at the front door. Damage was estimated at $100. Police said that the saloon is selling nickel beer and they believe a price war was back of the bombing.

'YEAR'S RECORD' OF DEMOCRATS IS SUPPRESSED

Story Is Sent to Press, Then Withdrawn.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—[Special.]—Mr. Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican national committee, is so unkind tonight as to have some quite impolite words to say about his contemporary, Mr. Charles Michelson of the Democratic national committee, and about Mr. Michelson's withdrawal from publication of several thousand words of ebullient praise for the Roosevelt administration.

It appears that Mr. Sanders does not want Mr. Michelson to withdraw his several thousand words, because Mr. Sanders thinks they would help the Republican cause much more than Mr. Michelson thought they would help the Roosevelt cause.

Scheduled for Sunday.

Several days ago all the Washington correspondents and many newspaper and magazine editors in the country received copies of Mr. Michelson's masterpiece, entitled: "One Year's Record" and printed on the stationary of the "Bureau of Publicity, Democratic National Committee." It was marked for release to the public on Sunday, March 4, and as the title indicates, conveyed Mr. Michelson's ideas about President Roosevelt's accomplishments in the first year of his regimé.

It may be noted that Mr. Michelson is the well paid propagandist for the Democratic organization, from whose Washington office during the last three years of the preceding administration was directed the "Smear Hoover" campaign.

Yesterday there arrived at the offices of all those who had received Mr. Michelson's "one year record," a much shorter notice, asking that the story be "killed." Mr. Michelson explained that the committee "is anxious to avoid the issuance of any statement which can possibly be construed as partisan propaganda."

Today President Roosevelt made the same explanation, and he disposed of reports that he had ordered the suppression by saying "the committee had decided" upon the action. The committee is composed of members scattered far over the country, and was not known to have met during the last two days.

"Reams of Propaganda."

The unfeeling and crass Mr. Sanders put out 1,000 words today in which he began by saying that the Michelson explanation concerning the committee's anxiety about not appearing as disseminators of propaganda "is putting too heavy a burden upon public credulity." In a fine ironical vein, Mr. Sanders proceeded in part as follows:

"The Democratic national committee itself exercised such self-control in its effort to avoid even the appearance of being partisan that it limited its expenditures last year to a little less than half a million dollars. All this was expended in exploiting this administration.

"Washington is literally cluttered up with Democratic publicity writers and 'public relations men' on the federal pay roll, sending out each day reams of propaganda.

"There has scarcely been a night in the last year (excepting Sunday nights) that one or more spokesmen for the Democratic administration have not been on the air. Practically all of Roosevelt's immediate official family, as well as a number of his intimate advisers in the so-called brain trust are syndicating newspaper articles throughout the country as well as monopolizing the pages of magazines.

"As if this were not enough, the President's intimate friend, Prof. Moley, is publishing a 'house organ' for this administration."

Then Mr. Sanders delivered a bitter blow by saying that "the plain truth" of the matter was that "the record has been suppressed because the ballyhoo it contained about the success of the New Deal would have excited derision among all classes of people."

Question NRA "Success."

The "success" of the NRA, for example, said Mr. Sanders, could not be effectively told by Mr. Michelson in the wake of this week's barrage of condemnation heaped upon the NRA in public hearings in Washington.

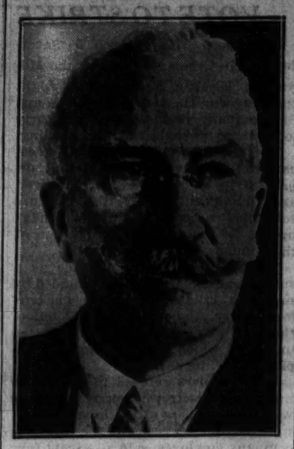
Similarly, Mr. Sanders went on, the "success" of the AAA's farm plan would not hearten the farmer much.

"The farmer's condition today, measured by his purchasing power," the Republican chairman declared, "is worse than it was a year ago."

Only 1,800,000 out of 12,000,000 unemployed have gone back to work in private industry, Mr. Sanders complained. He declared that instead of balancing the budget the country this year is faced with its greatest deficit in history, 7 billion dollars.

Concluding with a suggestion that the list of the Democratic "successes" might be continued indefinitly, Mr. Sanders declared that the withdrawal of Mr. Michelson's "one year's record" was "made imperative by the accumulating evidence on every hand that the great experimentation has failed."

PREMIER AGAIN



Former Premier Alejandro Lerroux, who was named yesterday to form a new Spanish government to succeed his own, which resigned on Wednesday.

[Acme Photo.]

LERROUX AGAIN SPAIN'S PREMIER; RIOT IN MADRID

Mobs Parade in Streets; Smash Windows.

BY HAROLD ETTLINGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, March 2.—Alejandro Lerroux, 70 year old radical Republican party leader, was called back to the presidential palace this afternoon 30 hours after he had resigned as premier and was given the job of forming a new government.

Having apparently yielded to the demands of the right, including amnesty for some of the government's worst enemies, Lerroux tonight announced his third ministry will be completed tomorrow.

According to all indications, the new government will be very distant indeed from the liberal ministries that so far have ruled the young republic.

Shout "Down with Lerroux."

Lerroux's reappointment angered the lefts. Crowds paraded through the streets in Madrid tonight, shouting "Down with Lerroux." The Casino, a fashionable club in the famous Calle de Alcala, was stoned by extremist rioters. Windows fronting on the business thoroughfare were smashed. Police rushed to the scene, but the demonstrators had disappeared. Demonstrators against the government in other parts of the capital were dispersed by the police.

Meanwhile, the clamor for dissolution of the cortes [parliament] was renewed by a significantly large chorus of Republicans. Joining in the cry were parties as opposed as Largo Caballero's Socialists and Miguel Maura's Conservatives.

The Republican newspaper Luz, which is inspired by Maura, issued the following call to Republicans:

"A government of the kind it is proposed to form has nothing in common with the republic. It is therefore the duty of all Republicans to put aside party differences in order to unite in a strong bloc whose sole mission will be to rescue the republic from the hands of its enemies."

Agrarians to Participate.

The Agrarians, headed by Martinez de Velasco, are expected to join the Lerroux cabinet. The Catholics will not participate, but will support the government. The Agrarians, unlike parties of this name in other countries, represent landowners and not peasants. The Agrarians are asking Lerroux to free Gen. José Sanjurjo, leader of the August rebellion against the republic, and other personalities forever blacklisted by the left. For this reason, staunch Republicans are greatly worried.

Actual formation of a cabinet, according to reliable reports, was a ticklish business as far as it went today. The trouble centered around the appointment of a minister of interior, who is the key man for internal political purposes. The Agrarians and Catholics want a strong man at this post to take action against the Marxists if, and when, they revolt.

FORMER RELIEF COMMISSION AIDS HELD FOR FRAUD

Two former employés of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission were held yetserday on charges of stealing $4,750 from relief clients in the last six weeks. Assistant State's Attorney Julius Sherwin said there is evidence that the alleged fraud extended over a period of months and that the sum diverted may reach a high figure. He also indicated that there may be prosecution against certain grocers with whom the two men are said to have dealt.

The men are Hector Pena, 35 years old, 3209 Grenshaw avenue, and Matthew Mertz, 29 years old, 2509 Millard avenue. They were held on bonds of $1,000 on forgery warants issued yesterday by Judge Harold P. O'Connell in Felony court. Pena was head checker of the commission's Lawndale station and Mertz was a head clerk there.

It is alleged that the two men forged the names of certain relief clients on grocery orders and then split the proceeds with the grocer. In other cases, the family on the relief rolls might receive only a portion of its order, it is charged. E. M. Horton, director of the commission's investigation department, directed the inquiry with Mr. Sherwin.

DR. MATTHEW 84 YEARS OLD.

Auto License Office to Be Open Today and Tomorrow

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes announced yesterday that the automobile registration headquarters at 120 South Ashland avenue will remain open this afternoon and from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. tomorrow to assist Chicago motorists in obtaining 1934 licenses. The closing hour today will be 4:30 p. m. Mr. Hughes said that the process of issuing licenses would be greatly speeded if car owners brought their registration cards.

BROTHER PITTED AGAINST BROTHER IN SABATH FEUD

Adolf and Rudolph Seek Same County Post.

BY PARKE BROWN.

At last some real warmth has started to manifest itself in the somnolent local primary campaign.

Brother has been pitted against brother in one of the contests for membership on the Democratic county central committee. Back of it lies bitterness extending over several years, a feud that once led one of the brothers to challenge the voting right of the other as he approached the ballot box.

Long Congressional Record.

On the defensive is Committeeman A. J. Sabath of the Twenty-first ward, better known as a member of congress for fourteen consecutive terms—a record that puts him in third place among the federal representatives in the ratings for continuous service.

The congressman has been a member of the county committee for about the same length of time he has represented the Fifth Illinois district in Washington. He has become a fixture in the inner councils of the Chicago organization—so much so that in many hot campaigns his place as ward committeeman has not even been challenged.

But now comes a brother, Rudolph Sabath, 2006 South Ashland avenue, seeking to wrest the committeeship from the Washington veteran. His formal petition at County Clerk Sweitzer's office was among the last to be filed, and yesterday Democratic groups buzzed with the development.

Rift Starts in 1930.

The story goes back to the local election of 1930, a landslide that tightened the hold of the Democrats on control of the sanitary district. According to Rudolph Sabath, Congressman Sabath promised him the job of purchasing agent for the district. But, instead, the job eventually went to another brother, Morris, since deceased.

For forty years Congressman Sabath had claimed 2006 South Ashland avenue as his residence address. It is the home of Rudolph. The congressman was registered from that address in 1931, but when he attempted to vote in the February primaries Rudolph advanced to the precinct judge's table and challenged the applicant's right to vote. His contention was that Congressman Sabath's residence was not in the precinct but at the Graemere hotel. However, the affidavits of two householders were accepted, and the congressman voted.

It was noted that in the petition he filed on Feb. 9 Congressman Sabath gave his address as 1914 South Ashland avenue, a block north of his brother's residence.

13 Face No Contest.

The late filings, plus some withdrawals during the day, disclosed that only nine Democratic and only four Republican ward committeemen have no contests. The Republicans are Charles Krutckoff, 4th; William S. Finucane, 11th; Paul W. Rothenberg, 24th, and Edward F. Moore, 30th, secretary of the county committee.

The unopposed Democratic committeemen are: Terence F. Moran, 16th; Thomas D. Nash, 18th; John Toman, 23d; Jacob M. Arvey, 24th; John J. Touhy, 27th; National Committeeman P. A. Nash, 28th; Edward J. Upton, 30th; J. Frank Lyman, 48th, and Louis Rixman, 50th.

Both Democratic and Republican headquarters predicted that legal attacks will be made on an unusually large number of petitions this year. Many are said to be defective in one or more respects and it was believed that the large number of entrants—148 Democrats and 199 Republicans—will be cut down materially in the next two weeks.

SENTENCED TWO YEARS AGO, GOES TO CELL TODAY

John Davies, 30 years old, will be arraigned before Chief Justice Sonsteby of the Municipal court today for commitment for one year to the House of Correction on a sentence that is two years old.

Since last October, police say, Davies has been on liberty because a mandate from the Illinois Supreme court, issued when it affirmed his sentence, had been lost or misplaced. This was discovered yesterday by Lieut. John Naughton, of the Scotland Yard detail, after Davies' arrest.

Davies was sentenced to the Bridewell in February, 1932, by Judge Thomas A. Green, for possessing a gun with its number defaced. Davies appealed to the Appellate court, which upheld his conviction. He then appealed to the Supreme court. This court likewise affirmed the penalty, and sent the necessary papers for his commitment to the Appellate court. In turn, the Appellate court was to have sent them to the Municipal court, the court of original jurisdiction.

The mandate papers, it is said, failed to reach the Municipal court. Yesterday Davies was arrested on suspicion by Sergt. Edward Bazarek, who noted on the record that Lieut. Naughton had requested Davies' arrest.

HATER OF FRANCE TO BOOST GERMAN CAUSE IN SAAR

BERLIN, March 2.—(AP)—Alois Spaniol, an anti-French leader in the Saar, was placed today at the head of the new front to boost the German cause in advance of the Saar plebiscite next year. Ernest Hanfstaengl resigned the leadership of the Nazis in that territory, and the Nazi party there was dissolved as Spaniol took command of the new organization.

Only 29 years old, Spaniol was invested with full powers to further the cause of Germany in the Saar throughout the reich. He thus will control all the eligible Saar voters residing outside the Saar on German soil.

Saar voters will decide next year whether the territory will go under French or German jurisdiction or remain under supervision of the league. Spaniol is violently anti-French because of alleged ill treatment he claims to have received from French colonial troops during the Ruhr occupation.

HORNER AND AIDS GET PROTESTS ON PRIMARY FILINGS

Board of Three Hears Objections.

Springfield, Ill., March 2.—[Special.]—Gov. Horner, Secretary of State Hughes, and State Auditor Barrett, sitting as a certifying board, today heard objections to primary petitions filed with the secretary of state. The board met in the office of the governor and was in session through the afternoon.

Authority of the board to hear and pass on objections was questioned, and this may be the basis of mandamus proceedings in the courts later. Owing to the fact that certifications to the county clerks must be made by next Tuesday, the board decided to hear all objections at this sitting and urged that figuments be brief.

Six members of the general assembly were represented among the objectors to petitions. They were Representatives A. O. Galvin and William J. Warfield, Republicans; Harry L. Williams, Arthur Kaindl, and Joseph Rategan, Democrats, and Senator Daniel A. Serritella, Republican. The latter asked that the petition of James P. Brewington be thrown out.

Various Types of Protests.

Galvin charged that Joseph N. Degrazio, who filed for the Republican nomination in the Twenty-seventh district was not a resident of the district. In this case Degrazio questioned the right of the board to pass on his qualifications. Objections to the petition of John Lapaglia were not contested.

Representative Warfield objected to the petitions of Leo D. Dolan, Margaret K. Woods, and George N. McHugh. One objection to the petition of Margaret K. Woods was that it had been prepared in book form and that the sheets could not be properly filed for certification. In most of the cases there were objections on the ground that petitions were not properly prepared, or that they were not certified by the persons who circulated them.

Representatives Rategan and Kaindl attacked the petitions of Samuel E. Goldstein and Eugene J. Savage. Representative Williams objected to the petition of Henry Brooks Jr. on the ground that it contained the names of persons not living in the district and that certification was not made by the circulators.

The board decided to sustain objections to the primary petition of James J. Sullivan, Chicago, who had filed for the Democratic nomination for treasurer. Sullivan consented to this action, and this leaves John Stelle, McLeansboro, as the only Democratic primary aspirant for treasurer.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY ASKS CONFISCATION OF 'HEALTH' COMPOUND

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 2.—(AP)—Confiscation of 736 packages of "Warm Springs Crystal Compound" on the ground it is "common stock salt" was taken today by W. E. Wiles, assistant district attorney, Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught reserved action on the petition.

Wiles asserted the advertising of the compound by the Warm Springs, Ga., Crystal company and the Warm Springs Health Products company of Atlanta, Ga., constituted a violation of the pure food and drug act.

Wiles said the advertising led purchasers to believe the product was a crystal formed from evaporation of Warm Springs water.

KERNER TO FILE REHEARING PLEA IN LIEBER CASE

Petition Includes Points Made by Courtney.

Springfield, Ill., March 2.—[Special.]—Attorney General Kerner's petition for rehearing in the Lieber case which affects innumerable indictments returned by Cook county grand juries, will probably be filed with the clerk of the court next week. In it will be embodied the suggestions of State's Attorney Courtney in support of the motion.

State's Attorney Courtney's draft was received at the attorney general's office today. Mr. Kerner is in Chicago and completion of the motion and citation of authority in support of it will be completed after his return to Springfield Monday. Four propositions have been urged as reasons for reversing the Supreme court's decision and it is assumed that these will be stressed in the attorney general's request that the case be reopened.

Summary of Points.

They are summarized as follows:

1. The reversal of the judgment against Lieber was on a mere technical legal question which did not affect the justice of the judgment against him.

2. In a case such as this where the substantial rights of the defendant have not been violated, the court is not justified in nullifying the judgment.

3. Reversal of the Lieber case would create great confusion and injustice and that courts heretofore have refused to void judgments, where no substantial injustice was shown, when such reversal would cause confusion and injustice.

4. That in instances where constitutional objections to the established practice have been raised, courts have decided in favor of the established practice, where such practice has not been shown to have worked injustice.

It will be contended that in the absence of anything showing that the defendant in this case was deprived of any legal rights to which he was entitled, or that the irregular drawing of the grand jury was prejudicial to his defense, the judgment should have been permitted to stand.

KERNER GETS PETITION.

All other work was sidetracked in the Chicago office of Attorney General Otto Kerner after he received the petition of State's Attorney Courtney asking a rehearing of the Lieber case. Mr. Kerner examined the petition and announced he would present it to the high court next week. He said he was well satisfied with the manner in which the petition had been prepared. The state's attorney and his assistants, Wilbert Crowley and Albert Woll, did "a very good job," he said.

Chief Justice Warren H. Orr of the Supreme court granted a stay of mandate to prevent the decision from taking effect until the petition for a rehearing has been considered. The court's decision endangered the legality of approximately 700 indictments in cases pending in the Criminal court.

Prepare for Drive to Win Votes for Merger of Parks

A campaign to acquaint citizens with the advantages of simplified government and win their referendum votes in the April 10 primary in favor of consolidating Chicago's 22 separate park districts into one park district with one governing board of five commissioners, will be launched on Thursday evening at the Palmer house. The meeting, the purpose of which is to form a civic groups committee to participate in the campaign, was called by Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the Civic Federation and Bureau of Public Efficiency.

The referendum was authorized by the general assembly two years ago. On Thursday the measure was amended to strengthen the provisions of the act so that those portions of some of the small park districts whose boundaries extend outside the city limits will be included in the referendum. Mr. Sutherland is executive secretary of a subcommittee recently appointed by the Chicago recovery administration to plan the campaign for consolidation.

Tells Benefits of Plan.

Just what the unification means was told yesterday in a bulletin issued by the civic federation. Among other things it points out that it will reduce the number of separate bodies now levying taxes within the city from 27 to 6. Those six then would be the city, board of education, county, state, sanitary district, and the one united "Chicago park district."

"The adoption of this act by a majority of those voting on the question will be a first long step toward simplifying Chicago's maze of local governments," the bulletin said. "It will remove 21 of the obstacles which now stand in the way of a uniform, reasonable tax limitation for all governments in the city.

Would Unite Districts.

"It will unite in one park district under one board of five commissioners to be appointed by the mayor with the concurrence of the city council. The administration of 119 parks, comprising 5,282 acres, responsibility for which is now scattered among 114 park commissioners selected as follows:

"Seven Lincoln park commissioners now appointed by the governor of Illinois. Seven west Chicago park commissioners now appointed by the governor of Illinois. Five south park commissioners appointed by the Circuit court judges. Ninety-five commissioners elected, five each, by 19 small park districts."

The consolidation, the bulletin set forth, would reduce the excessive overhead costs which now result from the "needless multiplication" of park administrations, each with its own headquarters staff, and accounting and legal services. In a report made two years ago by E. O. Griffenhagen and associates for a legislative committee, it was declared that the cost of park operations could be reduced by $1,500,000 annually at once by consolidation.

It was the recommendation of this committee, headed by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, that resulted in the adoption by the legislature of an amended park consolidation bill sponsored by Representative Joseph L. Rategan [Dem., Chicago].

Would Control Expenditures.

The new measure, for the first time, would place the park expenditures and finances under statutory budget control provisions. It would require a referendum on all future park bond issues and would make possible unified park planning and development in the city. Approval of the merger bill by the voters in the referendum, would mean a real expression of home rule for Chicago in that it would remove two-thirds of Chicago's legislators from downstate influence, which is now exercised through Lincoln and west park patronage, the civic federation bulletin pointed out.

Another important feature in the bill is the limitation of the future bonded debt to be incurred by the new Chicago park district to only 1½ per cent of the taxable value of property in place of the present 5 per cent limit for each of the 22 separate park bodies.

Opponents of the measure are principally the small park boards and political influences who decry the loss of patronage and loss of the loose financial methods of administering the park systems.

O'Keefe, Former Lake Co. Politician, Seriously Ill

John O'Keefe, chairman of the Democratic central committee in Lake county for many years, is seriously ill of a nosebleed at the Home for Aged and Crippled Railroad Employes in Highland Park, of which he is superintendent. The nosebleed began on Feb. 22. Mr. O'Keefe's physician, Dr. Grover Q. Grady, said yesterday the bleeding had stopped temporarily, but he could not be sure there would be no recurrence.

Taxi Strike Ends in Paris; Government Reduces Taxes

PARIS, March 2.—(AP)—Settlement of Paris' 30 day taxi strike was announced today. Beginning at 8 a. m. tomorrow, 15,000 taxis of the city will start running again. The chauffeurs' syndicate said it had "received satisfaction in eighty-five demands," while the government announced it had agreed to reduce gasoline, parking, and operating taxes.

RELIEF BOARD BOOSTS COSTS AS FUNDS DWINDLE

Adopts New Schedule for Social Workers.

BY HUGH SEXTON.

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission yesterday approved allocations that will virtually exhaust its funds on hand by the end of this month. The commission also fixed a standard for social work that will stabilize the costs at the present level. This level is higher than last year's costs. It was revealed that Illinois has only $20,000,000 in sight for relief for the rest of the year and funds are being spent at a rate of $5,200,000 a month.

The allocations that were approved were $3,563,980 for Cook county for the current month, and $1,627,385 for downstate counties.

In Cook county $3,142,224 of the total allocation is to be spent for relief and $421,755 for salaries and administrative costs. The allocation is planned to care for 90,785 families—about 12,000 more families than were on the rolls last month—and 25,000 single persons in the shelters, an increase of 3,532 over the shelter population of last month.

Will Exhaust Funds by July.

At the end of March the relief commission expects to have about $900,000 on hand of the $10,000,000 obtained in February through the sale of tax anticipation warants. The commission has $20,000,000 more of tax anticipation warants to sell to provide relief funds for the remaining nine months of the year. That fund will be exhausted by July at the present rate of spending.

The relief commissioners were informed that 32,000 CWA workers in Cook county have been laid off to date and that there has been no appreciable increase in relief applications due to these layoffs except on Feb. 26 and 27, just after some workers who had formerly been on the relief rolls were discharged. On those two days 300 of the workers applied for relief.

New Schedule Adopted.

The relief commission adopted unanimously the new schedule fixing the standard for social work. Under this schedule the number of employés of the agencies administering relief in Cook county will be standardized at present levels. The schedule was prepared by Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of relief for the commission, who took over the administration of relief in Cook county last November to reorganize it on a more economical basis. The new schedule will perpetuate conditions under which administrative costs of the commission in January increased 3 per cent over December.

In a study of the Cook county agencies providing relief Mr. Reynolds found that the 1,915 employés engaged in unemployment relief service are only 11 more than the number which he considers necessary to care for the present number of families on the relief rolls. A week ago Mr. Reynolds was quoted as saying that the unemployment relief service was overstafed by 500 employés, according to statistics in his possession. He did not explain yesterday what had changed his opinion of the condition of the unemployment relief service.

Finds Field Staf Short.

Mr. Reynolds found the field service division of the Cook county bureau of public welfare understafed by 300 employés. For this agency he considered 1,221 workers essential, although only 921 are now on the pay roll. In the suburban, rural, and city-wide service of the county bureau he found that the staf of 233 employés is 188 short of the number required for maximum efficiency.

Mr. Reynolds received authority to discharge 11 extra workers on the unemployment relief service pay roll and to hire 108 workers for the field service division. He is to make further studies of the agencies of the bureau of public welfare before adding employés to their pay rolls. This authority was granted to him by the commission despite the fact that the unit cost in social workers' salaries in Cook county increased 91.7 per cent in the year ended last Oct. 31, while the number of families receiving relief decreased 13.5 per cent.

The condition of the relief commission's finances was learned yesterday when a reporter insisted upon attending the weekly meeting of the commission despite the fact that these meetings had been closed to reporters previously. After discussing the situation with commission members, Robert J. Dunham, chairman, recognized the reporter's contention that relief commission activities should be open to the public.

She's Single Again

THELMA TODD.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 2.—(AP)—Thelma Todd, blonde movie comedienne, was granted a divorce in less than 30 minutes today from Pasquale de Cicco, theatrical agent. She charged cruelty.

The blue eyed former schoolmarm from Massachusetts answered "yes, yes, yes," to her lawyer's questions. Some of these questions were:

"Was your husband cruel to you?"

"Did he call you harsh and opprobrious names?"

"Was he surly, rude, unpleasant?"

"Did he nag and quarrel until your highly nervous temperament was affected?"

"Were you profoundly affected by this treatment?"

After she decided to act, the actress packed up and walked out on De Cicco two weeks ago. A week later she sued him for divorce.

Hers was another of those Arizona elopement romances. She and De Cicco were married in Prescott, July 10, 1932.

Miss Todd won the title, "Miss Massachusetts," in a state beauty contest and came to Hollywood.

ASKS U.S. GRANTS TO STATES FOR CHILDREN'S AID

Head of Federal Bureau Reviews Its Work.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Miss Grace Abbott, head of the United States children's bureau, advocated federal aid to states in programs benefiting children in an address before the midwest conference of the Child Welfare League of America held in the Medinah Michigan Avenue club last night.

Miss Abbott pointed out that it is almost impossible for some communities to care for their children adequately. The old idea of local responsibility is dying out, she said, and the state is coming in more and more to help meet the local problems.

For Pooling of Resources.

"Too often a local community will consider not what is best for children, but what is cheapest for the taxpayer," she added. "If we are going to get the proper balance in a local and state program the resources of both must be pooled for what is best for the child."

Miss Abbott reviewed the work of the children's bureau since its organization 22 years under a charter granted by congress "to consider all problems of child life in America." Studies were made of child labor and methods of enforcing the child labor law, and causes for dependency, methods of treatment and other factors were investigated.

Lack of Coöperation.

Earlier in the day Charles W. Areson, executive secretary of the Cleveland Humane society, pointed out that relief for needy children had so far been only partly successful due to lack of coöperation on the part of both state and federal relief agencies.

The Rev. M. F. McEvoy, director of the Catholic Social Welfare bureau, Milwaukee, declared that there is a place for both private and tax supported agencies in child welfare work, adding that if private agencies are obliged to accept federal or state help, it should be on a contract basis rather than as a subsidy.

WATCHMAN SHOT TRYING TO STOP HOLDUP OF CAFE

Eugene Rossi, 52 years old, 811 South Oakley boulevard, a special uniformed watchman, was shot three times and probably fatally wounded when he heroically tried to stop a robbery early today.

He was making his round of inspection of stores in the vicinity of the county hospital when he noticed a gunman holding up ten patrons, some of them medical students, and Nick Maggos, owner, in the University restaurant at 1824 West Harrison street.

Rossi drew his revolver and dashed into the restaurant. The bandit heard him entering, wheeled around and fired three shots. Rossi fell, struck in the neck, chest, and hand. The bandit got away with $105 in loot.

COMPLETE 13 RELIEF NURSERY SCHOOLS FOR CHILDREN OF NEEDY

Facilities for the care and training of 250 children between the ages of two and one-half and four years have been completed in 13 nursery schools by the Federal Emergency Relief administration, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Rose H. Alschuler, who has acted in an advisory capacity in getting the new project under way.

The nurseries are being established in 30 states and the District of Columbia as part of a program of care for the children of needy and unemployed parents, which may be largely expanded. Arrangements have been made to provide lunches for the children in the Chicago nurseries, Mrs. Alschuler said. Beds and blankets soon will be supplied to enable them to take a nap and spend the entire day at the schools.

From one to three teachers, who received special training for their task, are assigned to each school, receiving salaries of $100 a month.

The schools, of which two are for Negro children, are located in the more needy areas of the city. Many of the educational toys used by the tots were made by FERA carpenters in the workshops of the McPherson Elementary school. Discarded school furniture was refashioned into wagons, doll buggies, wheelbarrows, and miniature railway cars.

Police Hunt Relatives of Amnesia Victim, 50

Hyde Park police were trying last night to find relatives or friends of a man about 50 years old who was brought into the station Thursday night suffering from amnesia. His clothing is of good quality and his manner and speech, police say, are indicative of good breeding. The man has only faint recollections of his past. He remembers, however, that he has a 4 year old grandson named Robert, and he also remembers that he lived on the north side of Chicago while Carter H. Harrison was mayor.

COUNTESS' SUIT ASKS $300,000 OF ITALIAN CONSULS

Poetess Charges Damage to Social Standing.

Countess Lisi Cipriani, who describes herself as a daughter of the late Giuseppe Cipriani, famous Italian patriot, yesterday filed a $300,000 damage suit in the federal courts against Giuseppe Castruccio, Italian consul general in Chicago and his three predecessors since 1918, charging that they have "sought to isolate her from society and destroy her reputation and good name."

In a thirty page declaration in which she sets forth her charges in great detail, she describes herself as a descendant of an ancient and noble Italian family, as a poetess, author, artist, and educator. The bill, which she filed "per se" [for herself], names as defendants in addition to Sig Castruccio, Giulio Bolognesi, and Leopold Zunninni.

Charges Conspiracy.

The declaration recites that these men, while acting as consul in Chicago, entered a conspiracy with the members of the Italian legation in Washington, to destroy her social standing. The conspiracy, she relates, began at a time when she was carrying on war propaganda work for the Italian government in the United States.

She relates that the defendants in the suit sent out word that she was not an official representative of the Italian government, but merely "a spy and an adventuress."

The history of the events which immediately preceded the conspiracy, the countess' bill declares, begins on Feb. 7, 1917. On that day, it is stated, she was appointed by the Italian government to conduct "war propagandization work" in the United States.

She recites that she journeyed to Italy and visited front line troop positions collecting material for lectures and writings.

When she ultimately was prepared to return to the United States to begin her active work, the bill asserts, she was informed by officials that the propaganda fund had been exhausted and that she would be paid only 5,000 lire, an equivalent of $350. Nevertheless, she related, she returned to this country and carried on her work until she was discredited by the Chicago consuls.

Gives Deputy Instructions.

After filing the suit in the office of the clerk of the United States District court, the countess, a tiny and spare little woman of 50 years, walked into the office of the United States marshal to arrange for service of proper papers upon the defendants. "You must be very careful," she warned the deputy marshal to whom the work was assigned, "that you do not serve Sig. Castruccio in his office. There he is immune and you might find yourself in serious trouble if you insist upon serving him there."

Countess Cipriani's name became prominent when in 1903, while a young faculty member at the University of Chicago, she became engaged to Prof. John M. Manly, an English instructor.

Much publicity was given to the matter at that time. Later the countess, who now resides at 5486 Greenwood avenue, published a volume of poems.

Testimony in the trial of Roger Touhy and two of his gangsters mentioned one Joseph Silvers as an employé of the Dells roadhouse in Morton Grove as the person who pointed out John Factor to the Touhy gang as a subject for kidnaping. Louis Silversmith, part owner of the Dells, pointed out that Silvers was a guard at the place and that the evidence in no way involved him [Silversmith].

MALOY AID SHOT BY UNEMPLOYED FILM OPERATOR

Fights Union Bosses in Downtown Street.

Thomas E. Maloy, czar of the motion picture operators' union, and Dr. Emmett Quinn, one of Maloy's lieutenants, encountered Clyde Osterberg, an operator out of work and formerly a rebel member of the union, yesterday afternoon on the corner of Wabash avenue and Congress street. When the shooting was over Quinn, who is an official of the union, was nursing a wounded thumb and Osterberg was arrested.

The last time Osterberg encountered Maloy and Quinn it was Osterberg who was bruised and battered and Quinn who was arrested. Osterberg said yesterday that Maloy and Quinn flashed pistols on him and when Traffic Policeman Michael Haran, who was stationed on the corner, pried the two union officials off the prostrate form of Osterberg the unemployed operator demanded that Maloy and Quinn be searched.

Union Officials Searched.

They were searched after Policeman Haran had taken Osterberg's revolver, which had been fired from the latter's coat pocket. No guns were found on the union leaders. Osterberg contended that they had time to pass the guns to members of their union.

When asked whom he had intended to shoot, Osterberg said:

"Well, Quinn got his hand up in front of Maloy."

Later he said he hadn't intended shooting, but had his hand on the trigger of the revolver in his overcoat pocket and that when the union bosses seized him and clasped his arms, the gun discharged.

Osterberg is the son of a former official of the janitors' union and at one time he was a close friend of Maloy, although he never obtained a regular union membership, but worked on a permit. Then he broke away with about 200 operators and organized an independent union.

Witness in Killing Inquiry.

When Fred Oser, an operator, was killed in Maloy's office by Ralph O'Hara, an assistant to Maloy, the union was investigated by the police and the state's attorney, and the federal government investigated Maloy's income. Osterberg was among those questioned who were said to have given important information.

Osterberg said yesterday that he had abandoned the independent union and was trying to regain his former employment as an operator and wanted to talk to Maloy and Quinn about a job. They said he had "hollered copper" when he had the last fight with them, according to his story, and they started to abuse him and threatened him with pistols before he wounded Quinn.

He was charged with assault with intent to kill.

3 GANGSTERS CHARGED WITH KIDNAP PLOT

St. Louis, Mo., March 2.—(AP)—Three reputed members of the Cuckoo gang, Herman Tipton, ex-convict; Carl Fiorito and Jerome Crets, were charged today with extortion and attempted kidnaping.

Two alleged extortionists and associates of the three men, Norman Godier and James V. Griffin, were shot to death by detectives when they came to the home of Michael Accardi, bootlegger, Monday night to demand money.

Tipton, reputed head of the gang, surrendered.

The attempted kidnaping charge is based on Accardi's statement that he was accosted last Saturday by Tipton, Crets, Fiorito, and Godier, who took $150.

Monday night Godier and Griffin went to Accardi's home to demand more money and were slain by eight detectives.

JEWELER'S BODY HUNTED IN CANAL AFTER AUTO DIVE

Find Identity by Tags; 2 Other Deaths.

Firemen yesterday dragged the north branch of the sanitary district canal at Peterson road near Lincoln avenue for the body of Michael L. Werner, 65 years old, 2442 Eastwood avenue, the owner of three small jewelry shops, whose car late Thursday night plunged through the bridge railing and down the embankment into the river.

The identity of the victim was traced through state license plates which he had purchased Thursday. Police said Werner had been driving on Peterson road, a four lane thoroughfare, and evidently did not see that the bridge narrowed to two way traffic lanes, crashing through the railing. His car was almost completely submerged in the canal. Werner's wife, Alma, said she last saw her husband Tuesday morning when he left to make one of his bi-weekly trips to his shops in Capron and Genoa City. The third establishment is in Palatine.

This death and two others raised the motor death toll in Cook county to 201 since Jan. 1. The other victims:

Joseph Basile, 33 years old, 11620 South State street, a newsdealer, Died at the Roseland Community hospital from injuries incurred on Feb. 16, when his automobile crashed into a parked machine and overturned at 119th and State streets.

Unidentified man, about 50 years old. Died in the county hospital of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile while crossing Ashland avenue at 46th street Thursday.

Lincoln Losty, 6050 Eberhardt avenue, was the driver of the car.

BID OF FORMER GOVERNOR FOR OWN FARM WINS

South Bend, Ind., March 2.—(AP)—Warren T. McCray, former governor of Indiana, late today not only won the right to bid for the purchase of his 2,513 acre farm near Kentland, Ind., but his bid of $130,000 was accepted by Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick, subject to formal confirmation March 10.

The bid of Arthur Baxter, Indianapolis financier, which had been accepted tentatively in a federal receivership sale held at Kentland Tuesday, was exceeded by Mr. McCray. Attorneys for Baxter attempted to prevent McCray from resuming bidding in court here today, but were overruled by Judge Slick.

JURY GETS STORY OF $45,000 LEVY ON LAUNDRIES

Money Diverted to Capone Gang, State Charges.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber yesterday presented the jury in the racket conspiracy trial with a documentary "straw man." By the testimony of later witnesses he hopes to knock it over and prove that the Chicago laundry industry paid tribute to Capone gangsters through the medium of the laundry drivers' union.

The "straw man" consisted of the accounts rendered by the union of disbursements of a fund of more than $45,000 collected in 1932 and 1933 from members of the Chicago Laundry Owners' association through a dollar a week checkoff on their trucks. According to the accounts this money was used for organizing price cutting hand laundry operators. The prosecution contends that the accounting was false, however, and that Murray Humphreys and other Capone gangsters got most of the money. Humphreys, indicted in the case, is a fugitive.

State Charges Conspiracy.

The organization of the Cook County Hand Laundry association is one of the principal acts which, according to the prosecution, constituted a criminal conspiracy. Charged with participating in that alleged conspiracy are Attorney Aaron Sapiro, whose "stabilization plan" for the laundry industry included the organization of hand laundries; Marshall Rose, field secretary of the hand laundry association; members of local 712 of the Laundry and Dye House Drivers' union, and Ald. Oscar F. Nelson, the union's attorney; T. Henry Klein, president of the Chicago Laundry Owners' association, and Morris I. Kaplan, attorney for that association.

Others of the eighteen defendants are charged with the commission or abetting of racketeering practices in the cleaning and dyeing and carbonated beverage industries of the city.

Samuel R. Futransky, a laundry owner and former treasurer of the laundry owners' association, identified the weekly reports on disbursements of the organization fund made to the association by George L. Knott as vice president of the union. Knott is a defendant in the case.

Shows Payments to Union.

He also identified scores of checks drawn on the special account in which the association deposited the truck assessments contributed by its members. Scores of these checks, read to the jury by Prosecutor Raber and his assistant, Thomas G. Bugan, showed that between August, 1932, and April, 1933, the union, directly or through Knott, received a total of $39,100.

The largest single item on the accounts rendered to the association by Knott was for "investigators." As collections from laundry owners increased their salaries jumped from an original level of $25 a week to $50 and finally to $100. Knott himself drew $200 a week for a short period as "organizer" and Rose got a salary.

Union Officials Named.

Two of the "investigators" were Walter G. Nolting and Sam Hurt, officials of the Inside Laundry Workers' union, the charter of which, a witness charged earlier in the week, was purchased for $1,500 by Murray Humphreys after Nolting had obtained it. The prosecution charges that this was not a legitimate union, but merely an agency used to picket recalcitrant power or hand laundry owners' plants and force them to join the Sapiro trade associations.

Prosecutor Raber sought to cast doubt on the validity of the accounts by the testimony of Futransky. The witness admitted that he had never asked Knott as to the number of hand laundries enrolled as a result of the drive, or what the men mentioned in the reports did to earn their $100 a week salaries. Futransky also said that while he had heard reports of violence in the organization drive, concerning which a number of prosecution witnesses have testified, he had never investigated the reports.

Then on cross-examination Attorney Floyd E. Thompson, representing Ald. Nelson, got from Futransky a description of a meeting of laundry owners called last April by State's Attorney Courtney.

"Mr. Courtney told us to stop paying dues to the association and said that if we didn't he could indict us," said Futransky.

"Didn't he also tell you that Humphreys and Frank Nitti [cousin of Al Capone] were running your association?" asked Prosecutor Raber.

Futransky admitted this, and that the state's attorney had told the laundry owners to "clean house," but said he didn't recall that the state's attorney charged that Humphreys and Nitti were getting the money from the truck checkoff.

Refense Balks Answers.

Defense attorneys' objections kept the name of Humphreys as a participant in union affairs out of the record of another witness' testimony, but they did not keep the questions of Assistant Prosecutor William E. Crawford in this regard from the ears of the jury.

The witness, Orville Fox, owner of of the Banks Linen Supply company, 1235 North Wells street, was obviously unwilling to talk, and when he demonstrated his unwillingness Judge Finnegan refused the request of the prosecutors that they be allowed to put leading questions to the witness.

Assistant Prosecutor Crawford asked Fox if Humphreys and "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn had not appeared with Jean Franks, union business agent, who is a defendant, when a strike was called at the Banks plant in September, 1931. Defense objections saved Fox from answering.

ELIHU ROOT ASSAILS PENDING AMENDMENT AGAINST CHILD LABOR

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—Opposition to the proposed child labor amendment to the constitution was expressed today by Elihu Root, former secretary of state. Mr. Root in a statement bases his criticism chiefly on the grounds that the law is a violation of the principle of local self government. He wrote:

"I am strongly against the proposed child labor amendment to the constitution. This amendment would confer upon congress the power to exercise upon the people of any state compulsion as to the way in which they should bring up their children.

"Nothing can be conceived more essentially belonging under the right of local self government than the right to regulate family relations. Such a change in our fundamental law cannot be adopted without a repudiation of the principle of local self government upon which our system rests.

"The Supreme court of the United States has declared time and again that the maintenance of that principle of local self government is essential to the preservation of our system of government. Reason confirms the statement.

"Our country is too vast, too varied in the conditions and local interests of life for any part of it to be governed in its local affairs by representatives of distant states, unfamiliar with local conditions and trained to different views about the conduct of life."

Honor Ex-Judge Cutting on His 80th Birthday

Attorney Charles S. Cutting, who retired as probate judge of Cook county in 1913, celebrated his 80th birthday yesterday by lunching with a group of his friends at the "judge's table" in the Union League club. There was a huge birthday cake with 80 candles on it. At the table were Federal Judges James H. Wilkerson, William M. Sparks, and Evan A. Evans, and Attorneys Finley P. Mount, Carl Latham, William Tracey Alden, Edwin Lobdell, Nathan G. Moore, and Frank McCullough. Judge Cutting's only reply to their demand for a speech was: "My appetite improves with age."

TARIFF MESSAGE STIRS PROTESTS BY REPUBLICANS

Oppose So Much Power for President.

New York, Republican leader of the house, said:

"This latest request of the President for exclusive power personally to regulate the tariff is the most outrageous demand for authority ever voiced by any executive in the history of the country. The President is seeking to make out of the entire tariff question a purely personal matter.

Such extensive powers in the hands of an unscrupulous executive could be used to destroy any industry or any part of the country."

Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], who will have charge of the bill in the senate, said that the President's tariff proposal constitutes a vital part of the Roosevelt program.

"It is in keeping with the party's platform pledge and the candidate's campaign promises," he continued. "It will obtain quick results and present to the President the means whereby he may cope with what other governments are doing.

Part of Studied Plan.

"As stated by the President, 'the successful building up of trade without injury to American producers depends upon a cautious and gradual evolution of plans.'

"Every one knows that the President has the welfare and interest of America at heart, and that the broad powers conferred on him in the suggested legislation will be used to the advancement, rather than injury, of American interests. The proposed legislation is to meet an emergency. The trade agreements will be terminable at the expiration of three years. They may be terminated sooner.

"The tariff rates can not be increased or lowered or reduced more than is now authorized by law to the tariff commission. If the President should be compelled to wait for congressional action to ratify each trade agreement the whole plan would be destroyed. World conditions are changing so rapidly and other governments are moving so quickly that it is necessary, if our interests are to be protected, that the President be authorized to act promptly and effectively."

Must Encourage Reciprocal Trade.

In his message the President said that permanent recovery is dependent upon revived foreign trade and that "American exports can not be permanently increased without a corresponding increase in imports."

Other countries, he pointed out, are increasing their foreign trade by reciprocal treaties, and the United States, he contended, must do the same or lose to rivals promising markets abroad.

To protect American trade against foreign discriminations, the President said, it is necessary to give prompt effect to tariff bargains and this could be done only by the executive without the necessity of referring the agreements to the senate for ratification.

Provisions of Bill.

The administration bill provides:

"Section 350 (A). For the purpose of expanding foreign markets for the products of the United States (as a means of assisting in overcoming domestic unemployment and the present economic depression, in increasing the purchasing power of the American public in the present emergency, and in establishing and maintaining a better relationship among various branches of American agriculture, industry, mining, and commerce) by regulating the admission of foreign goods into the United States in accordance with the characteristics and needs of various branches of American production so that foreign markets will be made available to those branches of American production which require and are capable of developing such outlets by affording corresponding market opportunities for foreign products in the United States, the President, whenever he finds that any existing duties or other import restrictions are unduly burdening and restricting the foreign trade of the United States or that the purpose above declared will be promoted by the use of the powers herein conferred, is authorized from time to time:

"[1] To enter into foreign trade agreements with foreign governments or instrumentalities thereof; and

"[2] To proclaim such modifications of existing duties and other import restrictions, or such additional import restrictions, as are required or appropriate to carry out any foreign trade agreement that the President has entered into hereunder.

No Change Over 50 Per Cent.

"No proclamation shall be made increasing or decreasing by more than 50 per centum any existing rate of duty or transferring any articles between the dutiable and free lists. The proclaimed duties and other import restrictions shall apply to articles the growth, produce or manufacture of all foreign countries, whether imported directly or indirectly, provided that the President may suspend the application to articles the growth, produce or manufacture of any country because of its discriminatory treatment of American commerce or for other reasons; and the proclaimed duties and other import restrictions shall be in effect from and after such time as is specified in the proclamation. The President may at any time terminate any such proclamation in whole or in part.

"[b] As used in the section, the term 'duties and other import restrictions' include [1] rate, form and classification of import duties, and [2] import limitations, prohibitions, charges, and exactions other than duties.

"Section 2A, subparagraph [D] of paragraph 369, the last sentence of paragraph 1402, the provisos to paragraphs 371, 401, 1650, 1687, and 1803 [1], and section 336 of the tariff act of 1930 are repealed. The third paragraph of section 311 of the tariff act of 1930 shall not apply to any treaty or agreement concluded pursuant to this act.

"[B] Every foreign trade agreement concluded pursuant to this act shall be subject to termination, upon due notice to the foreign government concerned, at the end of not more than three years from the date on which the agreement comes into force, and if not then terminated shall be subject to termination thereafter upon not more than six months' notice."

CHIEF POINTS MADE IN TARIFF MESSAGE SENT TO CONGRESS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

High lights of President Roosevelt's message to congress asking authority to bargain for trade agreements and tariff rates with other countries:

"You and I know that the world does not stand still; that trade movements and relations once interrupted can, with the utmost difficulty, be restored."

"World trade has declined with startling rapidity . . . to approximately 70 per cent of its 1929 volume. Our exports in 1933 were but 52 per cent of the 1929 volume."

"This [decline in exports] has meant idle hands, still machines, ships tied to their docks, despairing farm households, and hungry industrial families."

"I am requesting the congress to authorize the executive to enter into executive commercial agreements with foreign nations and to modify existing duties and import restrictions in such a way as will benefit American agriculture and industry."

"Legislation such as this is an essential step in the program of national economic recovery."

"If the American government is not in a position at a given moment rapidly to alter the terms on which it is willing to deal with other countries it cannot adequately protect its trade against discriminations and against bargains injurious to its interests."

"Other governments are to an ever increasing extent winning their share of international trade by reciprocal trade agreements."

"From the policy of reciprocal negotiation which is in prospect, I hope in time that definite gains will result to American agriculture and industry."

STATE WITNESS NAMES HIS PALS IN LOOP SLAYING

CRIMINAL COURT.

Henry, Williams, robbery, sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary under the habitual criminal act; Charles DeBayne, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Michael Feinberg.

A confessed bandit, Sigmund Ehrle, 26 years old, yesterday took the witness stand before Judge Walter P. Steffen in the Criminal court to tell a jury how three of his former pals embarked on the trip during which they allegedly shot and killed John Merck, a loop handbook operator.

Ehrle said he was invited to accompany the others in the robbery of the gambling place but, he said, refused. Some hours later he heard the others say that "if Tuttle hadn't lost his head we wouldn't be in this jam." Leon Tuttle, 23 years old, accused as the actual slayer, insisted that "he had to do it," the state witness testified.

The other defendants are Theodore Grove, 24 years old, and Harry Dobkin, 25 years old. Harvin Mart, 19 years old, who the state declares was the fourth man present at the murder, testified for the state Thursday. Lieut. Otto Erlandson of the homicide squad testified to the confessions obtained from the defendants and their companions.

SCHOOL ENGINEER REPORTS LOWER EXPENSE FOR 1933

John Howatt, chief engineer for the board of education, reported yesterday that the school board's economy program had brought a reduction of $127,963 in expenditures for coal, gas, electricity, and telephones in the public schools for 1933 as compared to the previous years.

A comparison of the expenditures for 1933 with those of 1932 follow:

	1932.	1933.	Savings.
Coal	*164,077	*152,076	$ 51,200
Electricity	$375,145	$312,617	62,528
Gas	74,361	66,964	7,397
Telephones	65,350	58,493	6,838
Total			$127,963

*Tons.

The economy was effected through rigid inspection and supervision, Howatt explained to James B. McCahey, president of the school board.

BRITISH TEXTILE MAKERS WINNING IN U. S. MARKETS

New Design Policy Chief Weapon.

en of the western nations, gave evidence that it had seen and realized what was happening.

The great French designers scurried across the channel, in person or by emissary, to discover what London had to offer. Not that they feared that the Paris throne was tottering—the illusion that the French are the style originators by divine right is too deeply implanted and too widely accepted to be challenged in so brief a space. But the British had created something new, and the whole world beats a path to the door of a practical inventor.

How the shifting status of Great Britain will affect the import and export markets, and how materially this swing away from Paris may influence the destiny of nations, world events of the moment faintly suggest. All these things are pieces of one vast pattern in the tapestry of world history. Each fits in somewhere.

Launched as Recovery Move.

The "Buy British" campaign, for instance, was launched as a determined, coördinated effort to improve industrial conditions in the United Kingdom, long before the repudiation of French war debts; before the amount of the French gold reserve was revealed to a startled world; many months, of course, previous to the Stavisky pawnshop scandals that precipitated the rioting in the Place de la Concorde within recent weeks.

Nevertheless, the British campaign was inevitably augmented by the situation between France and America, making it the psychological moment for British products of a superior grade to find a ready market in the United States. England has profited in her trade relations with this country almost in direct ratio with the setbacks France has suffered, and largely because of them. But there was another and a most important, basic reason for the success of the British invasion of our domestic field.

Succinctly stated, it was, that the English are injecting into their textile products, which have always been superior in the wool and worsted line, that artistic element upon which France has erected so firm a reputation as monarch of the style realm, an element which the American business man has supinely accepted as the French prerogative. Not only America but other nations as well.

Search for Beuty in Design.

More simply phrased—England recognized the fact that designers of clothing, who set the styles for the world and thus create volume through copies of those styles, are searching constantly for their greatest requirement—beautifully patterned and skillfully woven fabrics. There rests the whole structure of the garment industry. Therefore the master minds of the campaign went scouting throughout the world for craftsmen, artists, creators who could produce such fabrics. They found them. They hired them. They gave them carte blanche.

The cloths these artists turned out have justified the faith of the English. British tweeds are traditionally good—and have been traditionally ugly and unwieldy for the garments American women prefer. Their sturdiness, their dull patterns, do not appeal to the average American woman. And that was precisely the woman to whom the "Buy British" movement was to be carried—but not by name.

Because the new materials will not be sold to the average English woman—she would gladly buy the old ones. Just as leading French styles are worn by only a fraction of a percentage of French women—your typical French woman is garbed ubiquitously in an indiscriminate black dress, uniformly attractive. It was for the American woman that these artists created newer, lighter, more delicate textiles—and they had only to be shown to be seized upon by every designer who learned about them.

Retain British Imprint.

Since the designer finds inspiration in his cloth and these inevitably suggested phases of English life, the new style consciousness was born when they emerged from the sewing rooms, definitely British but trimmer than the English woman ever has worn. But then, these are export goods.

What is it going to mean to England, to France—this bid for America's garment patronage? Let's take a look at the records.

To within the last year England exported practically no lingerie or women's wear to this country, no millinery and no silk. The one great clothing item which figured in her American exports was wool and worsted goods, of which she sold us $14,132,000 in 1928, $15,443,000 in 1929 [the peak of the boom years], $7,498,000 in 1930, and only $3,174,000 in 1931.

France Profits by Reputation.

France, on the other hand, was scoring with a clothing and lingerie export business, based on its position as the world's style capital, of $13,120,000 in 1928, $13,325,000 in 1929, $7,329,000 in 1930, and only $3,666,000 in 1931. There were other items, notably silk fabrics. The 1928 total was $13,321,000; in 1929, $11,669,000; in 1930, $8,517,000, and in 1931, $5,122,000. For millinery the totals ranged from a peak of $1,295,000 in 1928 to $609,000 in 1931. Wool fabrics brought more American dollars to France, notably $5,224,000 in 1928, which dropped to $2,492,000 in 1931.

Balanced against the French figures for clothing and lingerie, millinery, silk fabrics, and wool fabrics, more than double the English peak year for the one item of wool and worsted goods, of $15,443,000. It is doubtful whether at the outset even the diplomats who directed the organization of improving British products dreamed that they might challenge France some day in this field.

Carried forward on the same principles by which such marked progress has been achieved of late, with gradual raising of the artistic and manufacturing standards, Great Britain may confidently expect to continue to reap a harvest abroad because she has chosen to build on a firm foundation of quality.

FAKE DETECTIVES GET $377.

Two robbers, who posed as detectives to gain entrance, early yesterday obtained $377 in rent receipts from Mrs. Anna Collis, agent for the building at 1164 North Dearborn street. She was forced to tell where the money was hidden in her apartment.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farm

PIGGIES GO TO SCHOOL

March 1, 1934.

THE suckling pigs are "going to school" today. They have to learn to eat from a trough just like "grownups." It's quite a picture—seeing these little squealers crowding up to the trough, each trying to get his or her nose in the food and going after its meal just like the big, grunting hogs. They are becoming well accustomed to this new method of taking nourishment. Moreover, all of the 85 little fellows came through the cold weather in fine style.

The little pigs have had to divide attention with the dogs on the farm today. First Clarence Thurow's [the farm manager's] smooth haired fox terrier got into a fight with Guenther's terrier. It was quite a mixup while it lasted. But even the most unbiased observers had to admit that Clarence's dog took the count. The next dog episode came when a neighbor's dog killed a young opossum in the woods. [Rawlings has seen quite a few opossum tracks in the snow recently.] He keeps after them with traps, which are always set, because last year they killed some poultry.

Sleezer and Johnson are working around the barns today doing several odd jobs. First the cattle sheds had to be bedded down. Then they had to run the little gas engine and the pump to provide sufficient water for the stock. Another job was that of placing an extra hay manger so that it would be easier to feed the cattle. The steers cleaned up 1,500 pounds of clover hay, 500 pounds of alfalfa and 1,500 pounds of soy bean hay today.

Two old sows had an unexpected outing today. Somehow or other the gate to the pig pen swung open and the two sows decided to go places and see things. But they were rounded up all right. Right now there are more sparrows than hogs eating in the pig pen. These birds gather in large flocks around the yard, coming right down to eat with the live stock. Going to have to reduce this sparrow population around the barns. There are too many for the good of more desirable birds.

The effect of the dry season is being noticed now. Some of the springs on the farm do not have as heavy a flow of water as they once had.

State's Attorney D. C. McWhirter of Kendall county stopped by today to report seeing an eagle soaring over the farm. He was certain that it was an eagle and not a big hawk. But not much bird life is to be seen around the place these days. The bluejays are pretty noisy in the morning and a cock pheasant was seen flying over the boundary fence this afternoon. Except for these birds, the pigeons and sparrows around the barns, and an occasional crow, there isn't much bird life to be observed around the orchard or barnyard, right now.

Clarence is looking over some of the eroded spots in the pastures figuring where seedling locust trees will be planted a little later. The idea is to plant these trees and other growth in the eroded places to keep the rains from washing down the slopes.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday, including 1932, were $335,913, making a total of 109,934,482 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 22, 1933. The day's collection of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for four years follow:

	1928.	1929.
March 2	$ 10,368	$ 35,753
Uncollected	15,904,080	46,462,017
	1930.	1931.
March 2	$ 68,836	$ 117,317
Uncollected	64,044,515	61,043,323

The day's collection of 1932 real estate taxes totaled $103,701. The collections of 1932 personal property taxes were $187,819.

County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough announced yesterday that mailing of 1932 tax bills to the city townships will be started next week when extra forces will be employed to rush the bills into the mails. So far only the taxpayers in the country townships and in two city townships, South Chicago and Hyde Park, have received bills. The mailing is expected to be completed by March 15.

The Chicago Real Estate board is expected to go to court within two weeks to file a friendly action to have the deadline for payment of personal property and the first real estate installments set for April 15, allowing the taxpayers thirty days' time to pay after they have received their bills. The March 1 deadline, set by law, could not be followed because of delay in mailing the bills.

Tells How He Would Like to Die and Falls Dead

Denver, Colo., March 2.—(AP)—Roman Engle, 64, a barber, was shaving Max Mannison today. They were discussing illness. "When I die," said Engle, I want to go just like that!" He snapped his fingers. He barely uttered the words when he collapsed beside the barber chair. He died in a hospital a few minutes later. The coroner said it was a heart attack.

CHEMISTS HELP BUSINESS WITH NEW PRODUCTS

ature's Materials Used in Novel Ways.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Wilmington, Del., March 2.—[Special.]—One trail to recovery is blazed by the inter-relationship between modern industries in many fields and the diversified chemical concerns which, during the depression, have been busier than ever in their research laboratories discovering new and improved products. The industrial chemists are in a degree remaking the world, as it were, using nature's own building materials in new ways.

Cellulose, the building material of plant life, is being transformed into smokeless powder, rayon stockings, dresses, washable wallpaper, fountain pens, tooth brushes, automobile lacquers, and new style washable bookbindings and myriad other products.

Chemists Get Problems.

Manufacturers in varied lines in seeking to develop improvement in product which will stimulate demand and create markets are quite in the habit of turning over some of their knottiest problems to the chemists. Nonshatterable glass, for instance, has been made possible by the cellulose laboratories.

The safety glass is made by laminating a sheet of transparent plastic between two sheets of highly polished plate glass. Under a heavy blow the glass may crack, but the pieces do not fly, for the plastic binder holds them in place.

The Dupont company, known for more than a century as a maker of powder, began in 1802, when, with the support of Thomas Jefferson, E. I. Dupont de Ne Mours, a young Frenchman who had learned to make gunpowder in the French government factories, built a powder mill on the banks of the Brandywine near Wilmington. It has been the great maker of explosives.

Made War Explosives.

It manufactured nearly half of the explosives used by the United States and the allies in the world war, but from the date of its founding until the world war, less than 5 per cent of its output was for military purposes. More than 95 per cent of the explosives were used in commercial or development fields, such as coal mining, railroad building, highways, quarrying, land clearing and so on.

Coal mining alone consumes 300 million pounds of dynamite in a normal year, and no less than twenty million pounds are used for agricultural purposes annually.

Expansion of the company into the diversified chemical field finds its cause in the basic raw materials from which modern high explosives are made.

Nitrocellulose is the basis of smokeless powder. Cellulose forms the walls of the cells in plant life. Wood paper pulp and cotton are almost pure cellulose. When cellulose is treated with nitric acid the chemist gets nitrocellulose or gun cotton, and this is the fundamental material for many of the lines of manufacture in which the Du Pont company is engaged.

Wide Array of Products.

Varying treatments of nitrocellulose yield a wide array of products, such as smokeless powder and the enamel on automobiles, photographic film, fabricoid out of which are made purses, bookbindings, luggage, and upholstory of furniture and automobiles. Fabricoid is an impervious fabric with a cloth foundation and a lacquered face, which can be made to simulate the hide of any animal or the skin of any reptile. The Du Pont company began making in 1910, and in the depression years it has developed new and improved uses, such as decorative wall coverings, tablecloth which looks like damask yet is soil proof.

Since 1915 Du Pont has been a factor in the pyroxylin plastic field. The word plastic popularly conjures up the idea of clay or other material that can be molded, but in the chemical industry and the trade world the word now identifies a class of products not found in nature but which are of man's making.

Plastic Industry Grows.

There are said to be at least 350 plastics and in the aggregate they represent an industry which grew from a $14,000,000 status in 1914 to 219 million dollars in 1928.

Smokeless powder and pyroxylin plastic have the same foundation, nitrated cellulose. But in the case of a plastic, the nitrocellulose is dehydrated by alcohol, then treated with camphor, giving a product with none of the properties of smokeless powder.

The plastics are ordinary in every day life, in toilet articles, bathroom fixtures, tooth brushes, and fountain pens.

One of the "depression babies" has been the perfection of a new kind of building material, in which the crystal structure and variegated colors of marble are reproduced photographically on a sheet of plastic which is then placed between two sheets of glass.

New Major Items.

Rayon and cellophane likewise are made from cellulose. The Du Pont company now ranks among the largest manufacturers of rayon, the "first man-made fiber." It makes the yarn and supplies the textile manufacturers. Under processes perfected in the depression years some of the rayon yarn is now being spun in filaments more delicate even than those of the silk worm.

Cellophane is made in practically the same way as rayon, except that it is formed into sheets while rayon is made into thread. The Du Pont chemists developed a process to make it moisture proof a few years ago and at once it found a market in the wrapping of merchandise. A new line of fabrics in which cellophane is used is being placed on the market as a "depression baby."

Cut South Dakota General Property Tax 31 Per Cent

Pierre, S. D., March 2.—(AP)—A reduction of 31.43 per cent in South Dakota general property tax levies for 1933 as compared with 1932 was announced today by W. C. Welsh, state tax director. This year's tax bill is the lowest since 1917.

PRESIDENT FREES SOLDIER HELD ON SPY CHARGE

Reverses Conviction by Army Court.

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt has reversed the conviction of Corporal Robert Osman of Brooklyn, who was found guilty in August, 1931, of communicating military secrets to persons said to be communists.

Osman, who was sentenced to two years at hard labor and to pay a fine of $10,000, was tried and convicted at Fort Sherman, in the Panama canal zone. In October of last year he was brought to Castle William, Governor's Island, pending the ruling on his appeal. His father, Joseph Osman, a laborer of Brooklyn, was unable to pay the fine, and this meant that the corporal would have to work it out in an army prison at the rate of $500 a year.

Charges Bias Against Osman.

The announcement that the President had reversed the decision of the army court was made by Louis Waldman, who has been acting as Osman's counsel.

Waldman appealed the case to the war department, as provided in the articles of war, and argued the appeal on Nov. 9 at Washington. He contended that the trial was unfair. He contended that the court was prejudiced.

He also said that Col. Buchanan, Osman's superior, according to the record of the trial, had warned Osman of his rights because of "what I [Buchanan] thought of his birth and, at that time, mental limitations." This, Waldman argued, showed a bias against Osman on account of "his birth." Osman is a Jew.

Case Full of Mystery.

Osman's case was the first ever brought before the board of review of the army in behalf of an enlisted man.

The case itself was full of mystery. Osman was accused of unlawfully possessing copies of one of the canal fortifications. It was reported that the copy had been given by him to communists, whose nationality was not divulged.

The charge was made when a letter was returned to Osman. In it was the copy of the fort plan. It had been sent to a Miss Frema Karry of Brooklyn.

ENLISTED MAN ON STAND AT OCKER COURT MARTIAL

San Antonio, Tex., March 2.—(AP)—An enlisted man was called to the witness stand today at the court martial of Maj. William C. Ocker to support charges that the veteran army flyer had made derogatory remarks about his superior officer, Lieut. Col. H. B. Clagett, commander of Kelly field.

The witness, Sergt. Daniel Towns, testified he heard Maj. Ocher tell Maj. Clyde C. Johnston, senior flight surgeon, last Sept. 29 that there had been "collusion" between Clagett and Johnston relative to a physical examination which had deprived Ocker of flying status.

The witness said he took notes of the conversation because of the unusual character of the incident and out of loyalty to Maj. Johnston.

Maj. Johnston testified yesterday he still was of the opinion that the 58 year old Ocker, oldest pilot in the army in point of service, is not physically equipped to operate planes and that he would not fly with Ocker unless he received specific orders to do so.

Singer Promised Divorce if She Gets Witnesses

Superior Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday promised Mrs. Nadine Andrews Harris, 25 years old, a radio singer, a divorce decree if she can produce witnesses to testify to two acts of cruelty. Mrs. Harris, who is known as Deane Janis, appeared in court yesterday and charged that her husband, Richard, a broker, had struck her several times and once threatened her with a revolver. Her attorney, Ross Lee Laird, explained that he had been unable to notify her witnesses yesterday. Judge Sabath said he would sign the decree as soon as the two necessary witnesses appeared to corroborate Mrs. Harris' story.

VIENNA, Ont., March 2.—(AP)—Reports today said the school in which Nancy Elliott, mother of Thomas A. An old house in which Edison's grandfather lived has already been removed to the Ford museum.

MRS. MASSIE IN CHICAGO AFTER RENO DIVORCE

Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie, central figure in the Honolulu assault case which held the attention of the nation in 1932, arrived in Chicago yesterday en route to New York from Reno, where she obtained a divorce from Lieut. Thomas H. Massie of the navy. Lieut. Massie and others were charged with the murder of a native who was alleged to have been one of Mrs. Massie's attackers.

Mrs. Massie appeared to be happy as she walked with a friend, Woodey Wallner, from a Chicago and North Western train to a taxicab to go to a hotel. She told a reporter that she had sought the divorce at the request of Lieut. Massie.

Wallner said Mrs. Massie's collapse in a Reno night club was caused by a nervous breakdown and fatigue, which kept her in a hospital there for several days. He said she would seek a rest at the home of an aunt in New York. She will leave Chicago today.

MOTOR THEFTS DECREASE 46% DURING MONTH

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS

Automobiles stolen, 46; recovered, 28; stripped, 3 [from police records for the 24 hours ending at midnight Thursday].

The number of automobile and accessory thefts last month decreased 46 per cent as compared to February, 1933, Judge Joseph A. Graber of the new automobile court told the Automobile Adjusters' association yesterday at the Union League club. Judge Graber asserted that the decreaze is largely attributable to the campaign against motor car thieves and "fences" instituted by State's Attorney Courtney with the coöperation of police, courts, and grand jury. The automobile court was opened Jan. 2.

Last month's stolen car total was 948 as compared with 1,724 in February, 1933. Only 114 cars were reported stripped in February, as compared to 330 a year ago.

ARMED CLEANING OFFICIAL QUELLS RIOT OF STRIKERS

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—A crowd of about fifty strikers attempted to storm the plant of the Allied Cleaning and Dycing company of Long Island City this afternoon, but was held back by an official of the company armed with a revolver.

The strikers, including many women, threw stones and chunks of ice through the windows of the plant and otherwise damaged the property. When they attempted to rush inside the plant A. Kalowsky, an official, planted himself firmly in the doorway, drew a revolver and held them back. Kalowsky had a permit for the revolver, the police said.

The police were called and two men were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

PERU'S NEW PORT OFFERS CHANCE FOR U. S. TRADE

Lima Resumes Work on Wharves and Docks.

BY C. N. GRIFFIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LIMA, Peru, March 2.—The sum of $699,000 necessary to complete the modern wharves and docks at the Port of Callao, Lima's outlet to the sea and premier port of the republic, is now available it was announced today. Work on this project, which will represent a total investment of $7,416,000, has been at a standstill for three years.

The completion of the port is expected to result in a heavy increase of Peru's export and import trade. American business men here say there is plenty of opportunities for the United States to gain a large share of this new trade.

When the régime of the late President Leguia, who signed contracts for the work, was overthrown by the Sanchez Cerro revolution of August, 1930, the work was nine-tenths completed and had cost, up to that time, $6,717,000.

Connected by Highway and Rail.

The Cerro de Pasco Copper corporation, one of the largest exporters through the port, and the Frederick Snare corporation, the original contractors, have assured the money to complete it.

Lima will be connected to its new maritime terminal, which is eight miles away and is perhaps the finest on the west coast of South America, by two wide concrete motor highways, an electric tram line, and a steam railway. The Port of Callao is the gateway to the rich mining and grazing region of Cerro de Pasco.

It is estimated that seven months will be required to complete the work. Two rock-fill breakwaters, totaling 3,630 yards in length, have already been constructed out into Callao bay, enclosing an inner harbor or basin of nearly 700 acres. This inner harbor is served by four reinforced concrete wharves, each 205 yards long.

Value of Money A Factor.

The foreign commerce of Peru in 1933 marked the highest figure recorded since 1929. The total value of exports and imports was 359,638,229 sols, as against 517,555,830 sols in 1929. [A sol is currently worth about 24.75 cents].

Exports showed a marked upward trend in 1933, totaling 256,960,572 sols. This, however, was 78,120,888 sols less than the 1929 exports. Imports also showed an appreciable gain over those of the two preceding years, but fell short of the figure for 1929 by 79,796,717 sols.

On the other hand, the average value per ton of exports in 1933 was lower than in 1929. This indicates the decline in the value of the sol in foreign exchange and the decline in the value of Peruvian export products in the world markets. The average value per ton of exports for 1933 was 120.98 sols as against 155.34 sols in 1929. The value per ton average of imports for 1933 was 397.96 sols as compared with 302.10 sols in 1929.

JAPAN PLANS TO TAKE CONTROL OF FOREIGN TRADE FOR FIVE YEARS

[Copyright, 1934, By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, March 2.—A bill investing the government with extensive powers over foreign trade has been drafted for submission to parliament.

It establishes a trade council including representatives of business which will advise the government when necessary on measures to defend Japanese trade against prohibitive or discriminatory tariffs or quotas. It also gives the government powers to alter tariffs without reference to the legislature.

The bill provides for control of both imports and exports, its aims being described as the maintenance of a balance of fair trade. Its duration is limited to five years.

SIFT 'THREATS' ON CHAPIN WITNESS IN BAR SHOOTING

San Antonio, Tex., March 2.—[Special.]—While Mrs. Mary Chapin, 33, went before a grand jury today to give her version of yesterday's barroom shooting and clubbing of her husband, Huntley Chapin, 28, the district attorney investigated alleged efforts to intimidate a witness to the assult on Chapin.

Attempts by telephone to influence J. W. Yeager, the witness, were claimed.

Examining trials Tuesday were set for Walter Baker, slot machine man, and Frank Nixon, proprietor of the bar where Baker allegedly shot Chapin in the foot. Nixon is charged with having struck Chapin. He recently was sued on an eight hundred dollar claim by Mrs. Chapin's sister here.

Chapin, well to do artist of Taos, N. M., and Buffalo, N. Y., is recovering in a hospital. Mrs. Chapin, novelist, is the former wife of B. G. Dahlberg, Chicago manufacturer.

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers. I will give him a corrupt and servile house of commons. I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office. I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence. I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him, to purchase up submission and overawe resistance; and yet, armed with the liberty of the press, I will go forth to meet him undismayed. I will attack the mighty fabric of that mightier engine. I will shake down from its height corruption and bury it beneath the ruins of the abuses it was meant to shelter."
—Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

THE FUTURE OF NRA.

The meeting of the code authorities in Washington may well mark a turning point in the development of NRA. It is still too early to foresee with any assurance what the new course will be, but the alternatives are beginning to become apparent.

Perhaps the administration will conclude that it has gone too far too fast. Certainly that is the fact and a retreat in the face of overwhelming evidence that NRA has been attempting to do the impossible would not be as ignominious as to persist in the effort to hold ground which is inherently untenable. A sensible retreat would confine the codes to regulating minimum wages and maximum hours. There are economic theorists who would object that even such codes would cause more difficulties and injustices than they would cure, but at any rate most of the theoretical and practical objections to the trade agreements would disappear if the codes were modified as suggested and competition in prices and market areas were restored to full vigor.

An alternative course which many of the government functionaries appear to favor would mean not less but more vigorous interference with prices and markets. Gen. Johnson's twelve recommendations for changes in NRA are calculated for the most part to increase the trustification of American industry and commerce. For example, his third recommendation calls for "uniformity of wages and hourly rates in competitive industries." Oil is a competitor of coal, but the labor factor in the oil industry is relatively unimportant, while in the coal industry it is all-important. How are wages in the two industries to be equalized? The effort to equalize these essentially unequal industries will end in a frank division of the market between them, the elimination of all incentive to progress on the part of either, an immense incentive to bootlegging in both and loss to the consuming public, which will be obliged to pay needlessly high prices for fuel.

This kind of market control can be achieved, if at all, only by the most severe kind of enforcement. Gen. Johnson's seventh plank calls for "a much improved method for securing prompt and effective compliance." Obviously, the "much improved method" is not going to be less rigorous than the present enforcement, because if it were the enforcement would be neither more prompt nor more effective. NRA is pumping water uphill, and, as the hill is to be raised, it is not conceivable that the capacity of the pump can be reduced. The general's "much improved method," if it is to work, must be more summary and more arbitrary and the penalties must be more severe than any as yet contemplated.

Industry represented by the code authorities may resist these changes, but as the gentlemen now assembled in Washington represent, in large part, those big businesses which stand to benefit most through NRA, there is a considerable probability that the general will have his way. Certainly the recent experience of prohibition suggests strongly that the trend will be in the direction of sterner enforcement. When prison sentences failed to keep people from selling and buying contraband liquor the governments sought to enforce the law through life sentences and murder. The end product was repeal. We may have to go through another period of governmental savagery before we discover that NRA is economically and morally just another bigger and less defensible prohibition movement. It is the second or more fanatic stage of enforcement to which the general is now looking forward.

SCRAMBLED REASONING IN SPRINGFIELD.

In the closing debate on the Chicago school bills in the lower house at Springfield, Representative Le Roy Green of Rockford gave his jaw a substantial workout. He said, among other things, that "if Chicago would pay its back taxes we wouldn't be in this position." He was referring to the shortage of money in the state's distributive school fund.

Some sophomore could earn the gratitude of the people of Illinois if he would whisper in the Hon. Mr. Green's ear the simple truth that Chicago pays no taxes. Neither, for that matter, does Rockford or any other municipality. Individuals pay taxes. Governments collect and spend them.

The reason that taxpayers in Chicago and elsewhere are in arrears is that the tax eaters have forced the rates so high that the earnings of property are frequently less than the taxes. As the tax eaters continue to raise the rates to appease their voracious appetite for money to spend, more and more property falls into default and less and less taxes are collected.

Property owners in Chicago, as in Rockford, pay their taxes when they can. Some progress was made in catching up with the arrears on hotel properties last year in Chicago because A Century of Progress brought business to the hotels. That was a windfall. In the long run the only remedy for tax delinquencies is a reduction in the rate of expenditure by the governments to accord with the capacity of the people to support the governments.

The Hon. Mr. Green ought to know that, and presumably he does. Some time he and others like him will have to abandon their misstatements and appeals to passion. The sooner they do so, the better.

GOVERNMENT AND RAILWAYS.

The statement in Mr. Eastman's report to the President that government ownership of railroads is the logical and only practical solution of railway ills has given fresh impetus to the demand that Uncle Sam "take the throttle." The somewhat dubious argument that merely because many other governments have found it necessary to take over national railway systems the United States should blindly follow is now supplemented by the half truth that Mr. Eastman, appointed by the President to study the question, concurs in that solution. Mr. Eastman was an advocate of government ownership of railways long before he became coördinator.

The least understandable attitude of these government ownership advocates, and also of Mr. Eastman, for that matter, is the frequent reference to Canada's national railway system. Developments on the other side of the border would make the most ardent advocate hesitate if he took the trouble to study them.

During the late nineties and in the early years of this century, after railway construction in the United States had come to a standstill, Canada embarked on an ambitious scheme to increase population through railway extensions. The government itself entered the construction field to help complete three transcontinental lines of railway. Much of the capital came from London. Unfortunately population did not promptly follow the rails, and when capital sources dried up in the post-war depression the dominion discovered that the industry of less than nine million people would not support nearly forty thousand miles of first-track railway—4,385 miles per million citizens, as compared with only 2,108 miles per million people in the United States. The government was forced to take over the surplusage, using the Grand Trunk system, which had gone bankrupt trying to finance its ambitious Grand Trunk Pacific project, as a nucleus, but even with this relief Canadian industry was still supporting 2,143 miles per million population of privately owned tracks, as compared with 2,108 miles per million people on this side of the line.

We wonder if Mr. Eastman would not be willing to admit that our railway systems have been subjected to a little too much government experimentation and paternalism under the guise of regulation—as an instance the "heads I win, tails you lose" recapture clause under the terms of which the government took half of all railway earnings in excess of six per cent. Such schemes do not tend to encourage capital support.

Mr. Eastman has clarified his views on public ownership of railways to some extent recently. In an address before the Washington Transportation club he said, "Public ownership will come, if at all, just as it has in other countries, through failure of private capital to support the enterprise under private ownership and operation." We therefore construe his previous statement as a warning to railway management rather than a conviction that government ownership is either desirable or inevitable. As a private enterprise the railways offer a potential, if not probable, leadership back to prosperity, while as a government institution they would become our greatest liability.

EXPLAINING THE POST-DISPATCH.

Among the beneficiaries of the guaranties of the newspaper code who accept its charter of a free press and support the federal administrators in their attempts to get rid of it is the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, to which the United States is "that paradise for the rich man the Russians say it is and that hell for the poor man which we know it is."

The opinion implies dyspepsia or malnutrition. It suggests that before the heads of the St. Louis writers are examined the medical men take a look below the collar button. They may not be getting enough to eat. Poor and insufficient food may drive them to despair, a reproach to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The trouble is in the pay roll. The employés need decent pay. They cry not for liberty but for meat and potatoes. They hope that government by codes will get them subsistence wages and they will trade in a charter of freedom for a square meal.

If the Post-Dispatch would give its employés decent wages they would not be hungry Socialists in shiny pants subservient to Gen. [Cracking Down] Johnson and wondering when they eat.

DESPERATE REMEDIES.
[The Washington Post.]

Lieut. D. O. Lowry of the recently militarized air mail service died yesterday when his plane crashed near Deshler, O. The ill starred craft, bound from Chicago for Cleveland, had been winging through thick weather; there was heavy fog and some snow along the route south of Toledo. Lieut. Lowry nosed into a wood. He seemed to have known his danger before it was wholly upon him, but he thought first of his duty; to save the mail bags he was carrying he threw them out—then it was too late to save himself. He maintained the high traditions of the army as a pioneer in the postmaster general's hazard of new fortunes. Was he a martyr, too?

Three other officers, it will be remembered, were killed during the scant preparations for the shift to the new form of air mail operation. Those who asserted that there is a big difference in the type of risk between normal army flying and normal air mail flying appear to have been only too correct. A mounting death rate concentrates attention upon the question of whether Mr. Farley's remedy is not more dangerous than the still imperfectly diagnosed disease for which it was applied.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

A WOMAN VISITOR out at one of the movie lots in Hollywood was asked by the producer, "Do you like the movies?" The visitor didn't think it would be nice and ladylike to say right out, "No, I think they're lousy," so she faltered, "Well, I—er—that is—I don't go to many movies." "Now, come on," insisted the producer. "Why don't you like the movies?" "Well, if you must know," said the woman, "it's because they are so much poorer and unconvincing in every way than the books from which they are made." "Books! Books!" snorted the producer, "who the hell reads books any more!" Maybe he's right! Maybe he's right!

THE HARBINGER.

The hurdy-gurdy man has come,
I hear the old refrain,
"When you and I were young," and then—
"Kiss me! Kiss me again."

The hurdy-gurdy man has gone,
But filling all the rooms,
Inebriating, steals the scent
Of rain-washed lilac blooms.

Oh, is it spring in that far land
Where you so long have been,
Dear Love? And can you hear my cry
"Kiss me! Kiss me again"?

THERE'S TO BE NO STANDING at the bar in Illinois. Which takes away one of the greatest delights of polite drinking. What a joy it was to see an old time barkeep twist the bar spoon around in a cocktail. Amateurs have to resort to a shaker to mix cocktails, but the old time barkeep would pour everything into a high glass, put in the ice, and then, picking up the long handled bar spoon, would deftly stir it with a spinning motion that it was thrilling to watch. And now if they're going to mix our drinks in another room—well, we might just as well go home and get out the old cocktail shaker.

PANAMA is a dumb country! After Panama declined to sell the Canal Zone to the U. S. we simply said: "Oh, yes, you will. Here's ten million dollars for the thing, and we'll give you $250,000 annually in gold." Now, the other day, when the U. S. handed a check for the money to Panama, she up and snootily returns it. Not that she was afraid it would bounce back, but under the treaty which she so reluctantly signed it was provided that the two hundred and fifty thousand was to be paid in gold. But the American congress a year ago decreed that all obligations of this country or its citizens to pay in gold were outlawed. And Panama, the dumb cluck, says: "But you said in the treaty you would pay me in gold!" Well, suppose we did? What of it? We've changed our minds, that's all. Not that we would call a treaty a scrap of paper, as Germany did. Oh, never. That was very wrong of Germany. But it would be all right for us. It depends entirely on where you sit. Now, listen, Panama; you see, it's like this—oh, what's the use! A country so dumb as that couldn't understand the thing in a million years.

FROM THE PICTURES it would seem that most of the lady hunger marchers are fat. Being English, they would pick out the fattest ladies they've got to adorn the front row of a propaganda picture of the hunger march. And yet we say they have no sense of humor!

FORESIGHT.

I have forgotten your face.
Yes, even the sound of your voice
And the feel of your cheek against mine . . .
But . . .
In an untilled corner of my heart,
As a provident dog might bury a bone,
I have hidden the unforgettable eloquence
Of your silence, against the foreseen hunger
Of an uncertain tomorrow.

ROSA ZAGNONI MARINONI.

DAVE HUTTON wept great salty tears when a decree of divorce was granted him from Aimee Semple McPherson. Which is a record or something. Usually in Hollywood they are so busy getting married again they don't have time to weep.

HYPOCRISY was given another deadly blow yesterday—this time in dry West Virginia. The legislature decreed that the law permitting the sale of liquor by drug stores on physician's certificate could be made a little less drastic. So now in West Virginia a man can go into a drug store and simply say, "I'm sick!" and the druggist could sell the man all the whisky he wanted. Which is much better than being obliged to keep a pet snake down cellar and prodding him around with a stick in order to persuade him to bite. But it looks as though there would be an awful lot of sickness in West Virginia from now on. But it's better to be sick than to tell a lie. And not so much danger at being caught at it.

THE ARMY is fighting like mad against the plan advanced by congress to have all the U. S. air forces, army, navy, and marine, united in one great air force. It really would be a fine idea in the next war (touch wood, cross your fingers, and have your pacifist organization throw a scare into your congressman) to have our army, navy, and marines fight only the haughty foreign foe instead of each other. And they might get the job over quicker.

WINTER WARMTH.

My Love, while I live will I ever know
A warmth as sweet as the candle glow
Of your smile through the crystal snow.

HEADACHES.

There are several kinds of periodic headaches. The term migraine is now used to designate the group. When a person has the headache habit, and is very anxious to break it, the first step which can be called intelligent is to try to discover what kind of headache it is. Once a diagnosis of migraine was about as far as he could go. Now it is often possible to go a step farther. There are constipation headaches, bilious headaches, allergy headaches, pituitary headaches, and a fair number of others. The method of relief from the thralldom of his habit depends on the type of the headache.

Located near the base of the brain, and in a part of the skull near the upper back part of the orbit, is a nest-like bony walled cave called the sella turcica. In this cave or nest a very important structure—the pituitary body—is located.

This powerful gland has many important duties to perform. It is active at certain times and inactive at others. Activity calls for an increased blood supply. A gland filled with an extra supply of blood requires room. The pituitary cannot swell much without pressing against the bony walls of its nest. There are those who hold that pituitary headaches are like toothaches caused by the efforts at swelling of soft parts held rigidly within bony walls.

Within limits it is possible to do something by way of prevention of pituitary headaches, and therefore it is desirable that we recognize headaches of that character. Headaches that are very closely related to sex phenomena, such as puberty, menstruation, pregnancy, and change of life, are under suspicion of being pituitary. But we need additional evidence.

Dr. Beulah Cushman thinks the oculist may be able to supply the need. A very careful study of the visual field by a competent person will show certain peculiarities that are thought to be distinctive of disorders of the pituitary. The visual field is limited, especially in that part that points toward the inner corner of the eyebrow. Glaucoma gives a somewhat similar limitation of the visual field, but a test of the tension of the eyeball should rule out glaucoma. This affected zone in the visual field may show some sort of color blindness rather than an absence of all vision.

This method of helping in the diagnosis of pituitary headache is something the patient may avail himself of through competent medical service. It is not a test that he can make on himself. In some cases of pituitary headache operation to split the capsule of the pituitary, or to relieve the pressure in some other way, has afforded relief. Other headaches of the pituitary kind have been relieved to some extent by the use of gland extracts and other treatment.

QUITS DRINKING.

A woman writes: Before the new year I quit drinking. This is the longest I have been sober in seven years. My nerves are terrible and I look worse than I did before. I also take five or six sedative tablets a day, but that does not steady them. Can you give me a diet for cleansing my system, especially the kidneys?

REPLY.

Eat whatever you please, provided it agrees with you. Diet is not a factor in breaking the drink habit. You should be able to get on without any sedative by now. From this on your task is building up character and morale.

THUMB CRACKS.

M. S. E. writes: What is the cause of audible cracking of the thumb upon waking in the morning? Sometimes it is quite painful on moving it. At other times it merely cracks.

REPLY.

A very moderate arthritis.

GOOD AGE FOR MOTHERHOOD.

D. K. writes: Is it safe for me to have my first baby? I am going to be 31 in a few months.

REPLY.

Age 31 is an excellent one in which to become a mother. Many thousand babies are born to mothers of that age and older. The risk is somewhat greater than at age 22, but not much.

FIRE DEPARTMENT VACANCIES.

Chicago, March 1.—[Friend of the People.]—How many vacancies are there on the Chicago fire department at present? Should all vacancies be filled from the standing list before the new list is put up? A. P. R.

I wish to inform you that the number of vacancies in the position of fireman [fire department] will depend entirely upon the number appropriated for in the new annual budget for 1934, now under consideration by the city council.

With reference to the matter of filling vacancies, I wish to quote you the following excerpt from section 9 of the appropriation bill, which is self-explanatory: " . . . In case of any vacancy in any position herein appropriated for, the head of the department in which such vacancy occurs shall not be required to fill such position if in his judgment and discretion there is no necessity therefor; . . ."

Can she will her estate as she pleases or [4] is my stepfather entitled to a portion of the estate? 5. If she leaves no will how do we share [my stepfather and I]? 6. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BONDHOLDER.

River Forest, Ill., Feb. 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me [1] the position of a real estate bondholder who elects to hold one or more bonds in default, either as to principal or interest. Some of the holders have deposited their bonds with a bank as trustee, and accepted only a certificate of beneficial interest. 2. Is any individual action possible? If so, is it likely to produce any beneficial individual result? E. H. M.

1. He will be entitled to his share of the proceeds of the foreclosure, if that is what you mean to ask.
2. Most trust indentures contain express wording against such separate action. We suggest that you ascertain the wording of your papers.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KAUNAS, Lithuania.—The unofficial state of war which has existed between Lithuania and Poland since the Poles occupied the Vilna district in 1920 is still delaying the progress of economic recovery in northeastern Europe.

Although Lithuania imports Polish products, it is still impossible for firms in these two countries to communicate with each other except through some office established in a neutral city. For more than 13 years there has been no railroad, telegraph or postal communication between the two countries. Diplomatic relations do not exist.

During these years, however, Vilna has been a source of income for the Lithuanians. They have organized "a society to win back Vilna" from the Poles. This society conducts considerable propaganda work and agitation among Lithuanians residing in America. They are urged to send money to their mother country to help strengthen it for this task. The president of the society, Prof. Birzchishka, has just returned to Kaunas from a visit to Poland. He declared that during his stay in Vilna and Warsaw he established contact with certain Poles who are engaged in scientific and cultural work. He said he avoided political discussions and meetings with Polish political leaders. He refused invitations extended by the Poles to deliver a lecture over the Vilna radio station and also declined to give interviews to representatives of Polish newspapers.

According to the professor, there is no hope of Poland returning Vilna to Lithuania. Instead he found the Poles are of the opinion that eventually German pressure upon Lithuania will force Kaunas to appeal to Poland for help. The details of the Vilna "putsch" were not discussed in the press or by political leaders. He also reports that the Lithuanian population of the Vilna district are combating efforts of the government to make them Polish adherents.

Although a number of important Lithuanians visited Poland during the past year and these visits have been returned by the Poles, the prospect of settling the Lithuanian-Polish conflict is distant.

The newspapers in both Lithuania and Poland are carefully watching the moves of both governments. According to official circles in Kaunas, the Poles have succeeded in organizing a news service in Lithuania although the Lithuanian government has repeatedly refused to permit Polish newspaper men to live in Kaunas.

Recently Lithuanians noticed that the official Polish newspaper, the Gazeta Polska, has published reports from Kaunas which often contain information only known in government circles and considered confidential. The Gazeta Polska signs these articles "from our own correspondent." Who this correspondent is remains a mystery and the Lithuanian political police has been instructed to discover his identity.

FOR ICKES.

Berwyn, Ill., Feb. 27.—"A New Dealer Describes America," appeared in your editorial columns of Feb. 27. I read this editorial and I read your quotations of Secretary of the Interior Ickes. I agree with the truth of Mr. Ickes' portrayal of the American scene; I agree that private enterprise has exploited the hopeful European immigrants; I agree that this nation has suffered virtual and actual slavery to exist within its confines; I agree that "long hours for inadequate pay" has been the lot of thousands here in America. In fact, I find nothing in Mr. Ickes' remarks that cannot be substantiated.

The only question this editorial raised was what in the world was THE TRIBUNE trying to prove [or disprove] by printing it? Certainly the Roosevelt administration, of which Secretary of the Interior Ickes is a very important cog, has achieved tremendous results in eradicating the social ills referred to.

Despite THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, I am one reader who is for Roosevelt and the New Deal. J. K. M.

EXPLOITED.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Could it not be arranged to have the Hon. Mr. Ickes, and perhaps some of the other New Dealers, make a few more speeches like his of last Saturday night?

As the son of one member of "the innocent hordes" enticed to this brutal country by the lures and wiles of "exploiting capital" I am convinced that all the wishful preaching of Mr. Ickes is based on scant truth. Let's hurry this New Deal along so we can again get down to facts and reality.

Where did all those exploited children live? The census records do not reveal the astounding figures that I expected to find. But, of course, the last census was not compiled by New Dealers. Let's burn all the records and use only the facts given by Mr. Ickes and his coworkers. AN EX-NEW DEALER.

THE ARMY AIR SERVICE.

Midlothian, Ill., Feb. 24.—I really think that Mr. Farley is entitled to a lot of credit for the opportunity he has afforded the public to note the weaknesses of one of its major defense organizations, that is, our air service. If the United States army air service cannot even carry mail without such casualties as have occurred within the past week, how can we expect adequate and efficient service from it in time of war?

Would it not be a good idea to draft the men who organized and developed the privately owned air companies, placing them in charge of the United States army air service so they may organize the same thoroughly and efficiently?

Last, but not least, it might be well for the federal government to take the lesson to heart and clean up its own house before it attempts to dictate to business in general how the latter should manage its affairs. M. E.

AT THE COUNTY HOSPITAL.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Today I brought some flowers to a patient at the Cook county hospital. As it was my first call there, I asked the officer at the gate where to find the party. Without even looking at me, he shouted second elevator and something else which no earthly being could understand. He acted so mad that I did not dare to ask him the second time, but after a useless hunt back and forth I finally had to gather courage to again ask him. This time he really was mad, and if it had not been for a nurse I think I would have had to bring the flowers back undelivered.

Do you think that man could be taught to act like a human being, or should one consider the source? G. CARLSON.

A CONTRITE VOTER.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—As one of several million independent voters who, in 1932, repudiated the discredited Republican leadership and helped usher in what was vaguely called the New Deal, I have learned my lesson, and I wonder if others don't share my change of view. After twelve months of the promised Utopian era of planned economy I confess my complete disillusionment.

I believe that many of the ambitious schemes of our alphabetical burocracy have been conceived in madness, in disregard of natural law and common sense, and can only result in unrest and suspicion, thus retarding recovery. It is scant consolation to reflect that the New Deal experimenters vivisecting the body politic are obviously determined and resourceful. The involvement has been such as seriously to jeopardize the liberties of a free people which are of paramount importance to ourselves and our posterity. I believe there is a real menace in the encroachments of a paternalistic government in partnership with business which cannot be condoned by any presumption that there has been a mandate of the people expressed at the polls completely to revamp the political and economic structure of the nation.

The man of practical affairs knows not to butt his head against a stone wall or to defy natural laws. Yet this does not deter men of sublimated learning from espousing theories of economics so palpably unsound as to cause a schoolboy to laugh in derision.

Certain New Dealers exhibit a keen sensitiveness to honest criticism and it is interesting to reflect that it is not uncommon for some to resort to abuse when short of argument. The New Deal, and NRA in particular, faces rather stormy weather within the next few months because the disaffection is growing and will soon become articulate. E. F. R.

SPEAKING OF TECHNICALITIES.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—A grand jury, which is by no fault of its own selected by a process which is technically in error, but with no suspicion of fraud or collusion, cannot vote a valid indictment.

A legislature which by its own acts renews and perpetuates itself fraudulently can pass valid laws although its power is tainted at the very source.

"No mandatory provision of the statute can be waived on the ground of expediency." This, however, is not true of the constitution, apparently. NOISY.

THE PAY OF JUDGES.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—It may interest the twelve judges who have refused to accept the salary cut along with other employés to know that their action was discussed at some length at a neighborhood meeting and that the discussion was anything but favorable to them. In fact, the consensus was that these men should be retired from office at the expiration of their terms. Records have been made toward that end. The opinion seems to be that these men very gracefully accepted an increase in salary on the ground that the higher cost of living warranted it, but now that the pendulum has swung the other way they refuse to go along.

It would be interesting to know just what the earning capacities of these men were in private practice. C. L. MCCORMICK.

TWO MEN'S WORK.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Your editorial, "Motor Licenses in Illinois," convinces me that two members of your editorial staf sometimes overdo themselves. One couldn't be so dumb. WALTER J. DUGGAN.

MUNICH, Germany, March 2.—"The union of Germany and Austria remains our final and definite goal, which we shall never relinquish, but we shall carry on the struggle by legal means provided in international agreements. We want a revision of these agreements, but I repeat we shall take only legal steps to obtain it."

Thus spoke Dr. Theodor Habicht, "inspector general" for Austrian Nazis, today in an interview with THE TRIBUNE correspondent at his headquarters in Munich.

In a broadcast over the government controled radio stations recently he demanded a 50-50 division of power in Austria between Nazi representatives and other parties. He suggested leaving the chancellorship in the hands of Engelbert Dollfuss or any other man the present holders of power may want.

To Resume Propaganda.

"We insisted though that the formation of the government should be left for the people to decide and that they should be asked to express themselves in a national election," Dr. Habicht continued in his interview. "Our forces are so numerous that they would have won hands down.

"To date we have received no reply whatsoever to our concrete offer. Now we will resume propaganda throughout Austria along the same lines with which we fought in Germany and finally won. The conflict in Austria is an internal political struggle and the fight will be waged by Austrian Nazis themselves."

Dr. Habicht declared he would adapt Nazi principles to Austrian needs. The question of Jews, for instance, which is different from the same question in Germany, he said, would be "settled on the basis of international agreements."

Against Return of Hapsburgs.

"The Nazis must reject the plan of a Hapsburg restoration because it would prevent an Austro-German union and because the Hapsburgs all through history opposed Germany and destroyed the German empire," he added.

Dr. Habicht asserted that Dollfuss had negotiated with him behind the backs of other cabinet members.

"Owing to the intervention of foreign powers the negotiations failed," he concluded.

SOCIALISTS FACE TRIAL

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, March 2. — Before the Criminal court of Vienna next week 20 Socialist leaders, including the first president and first chancellor of the Austrian republic, will be placed on trial.

The first president was Karl Seitz, ousted mayor of Vienna. The first chancellor was Dr. Karl Renner, who signed the treaty of St. Germain and founded the Arbeiters' [workers'] bank.

Some of the Socialists are charged with high treason. Others are accused of formenting the recent civil war and supplying the Schutzbund [Socialist semi-military force] with arms.

Today the prisoners were removed from the Central Vienna prison to the prison of the Criminal court before which they will appear.

General Is War Prisoner.

Besides Seitz and Renner, the arrested Socialists leaders include Gen. Koerner, commander of the Schutzbund and a high officer in the imperial army during the war. Gen. Koerner will be charged with treason along with six commanders of the Schutzbund.

Among other Socialist leaders to be tried are Herr Emmerling, vice-mayor of Vienna, and Dr. Robert Danneberg, who was head of the capital's municipal finance department.

Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss and his cabinet met today to decide what should be done with the dissolved Socialist unions. Late tonight the cabinet agreed to form a universal workers' union to include industry, mining, commerce, traffic, and free vocations. It is to be divided into two groups of workers and employés.

The Socialist unions at one time had 700,000 members. The cabinet explicitly stated that membership in the new universal union is not compulsory. However, it indicated that state and private enterprises will only accept new workers if they are members of this union.

To Form Youth Organization.

The ministry of social welfare has been charged with the formation of a youth organization. It will embrace boys between 14 and 18 years of age and will be patterned after the lines of Premier Mussolini's ballias. Here, as in Italy, the aim will be to create new political ideas in the mind of the coming generation.

Robert Hecht, government adviser and expert in constitutional law, today announced that the Austrian constitution had been superseded by a "natural law." He declared that leaders were bound to defend the state without regard to legal—even constitutional—limitation.

HIGH COURT OF GERMANY SAVES 10 FROM BEHEADING

BERLIN, March 2.—The German Supreme court which withstood the open Nazi pressure brought to bear on it in the reichstag fire trial today again put its foot on the policy of indiscriminately making "heads roll in the sand" when it overruled ten death sentences passed against communists by the criminal court at Dessau.

The Supreme court ruled the verdict of the Dessau court contained a glaring defect, that the defendants had been kept from attending the session at the scene of the crime and two experts had been left unsworn.

The ten defendants had been convicted of the joint murder of a Nazi storm trooper.

DEMANDS HUMOR

MRS. MARIAN HAHN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Marian Hahn, 21 years old, 8022 Normal boulevard, told Circuit Judge Walter J. La Buy yesterday that she wanted a divorce from her husband, William, because he had no sense of humor. Questioned by her attorney, Norman Becker, she related that one month after their marriage in August, 1931, her husband slapped her because she laughed at a radio skit which he did not enjoy. She added that on other occasions when she laughed at jokes told by friends he said he saw no comedy in them and later struck her. The judge granted her a decree.

HELP US IF NAZIS CROSS THE RHINE, PARIS TO LONDON

Tells Britain This Is Her Price for Disarming.

PARIS, March 2.—(AP)—Unless Great Britain agrees to help the French if the Nazis march toward the Rhine, France will refuse to give up a single soldier or gun, the government decided today.

This firm position will be emphasized in a note being drafted by the superior council of national defense. Taking the stand that Nazi Germany imperils the very existence of France, the government contends no country would be able to disarm on the basis of the British plan.

Speed Defense Plans.

The government meanwhile was speeding new plans to strengthen its national defenses. Bills authorizing a naval building program and the construction of reservoirs to hold adequate reserves of fuel oil were introduced to parliament. The bills already have the approval of finance committees in both chamber and senate.

The cabinet agreed that Chancellor Hitler's demand for rearmament of Germany would not be granted unless assurances were made that new armaments limits shall be observed and England agrees to come to the defense of France if need be.

Premier Gaston Doumergue gave Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, a document written by Marshal Henri Petain, minister of war, outlining "the recent heavy German effort to rearm" and indicating that the reich was ready for anything after April 1.

Doumergue took the arms question out of diplomacy and put it in the hands of the defense council.

This body is launching a land, sea, and air armaments program, anticipating that a meeting of the steering committee of the world disarmament conference at Geneva April 10 will seal the fate of the conference.

Britain Is Alarmed.

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

LONDON, March 2.—The opinion that Europe is face to face with the most serious disarmament crisis since Germany pulled up her stakes and left Geneva last October was expressed tonight in an authoritative British quarter.

The indication of the American state department that the United States was in complete accord with the British government's views on disarmament gave only a glimmer of hope in the situation, for London has known for some time that Washington supported the British arms proposals.

No such encouragement, however, was evident on the European continent as a result of Capt. Anthony Eden's recent tour of the capitals. The lord privy seal and arms experts returned home without tangible results.

No New Plan Offered by U. S.

Contrary to reports, published abroad, that the United States had taken a new initiative in disarmament negotiations, American Ambassador at Large Norman H. Davis today said that "the United States is not offering any new plan as far as I know."

Mr. Davis, who is in London en route to Stockholm, interpreted the American policy as one of waiting for European governments to settle their political differences and resume arms discussions.

(The British disarmament plan recognized Germany's demands to rearm, proposed consultation among the powers if a signatory nation violates the projected treaty by manufacturing forbidden armaments, and suggested a compromise of between 200,000 and 300,000 as the size of the German army.)

DE VALERA DENIES JEWISH BLOOD RUNS IN HIS VEINS

Religious Question Is Raised in Dail.

BY HUGH CURRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, March 2.—President Eamon de Valera, replying to charges of his enemies that he is a "communist," today raised the religious issue in the dail eireann. He denied that there is "a single drop" of Jewish blood in his veins.

"There is not, so far as I know, a single drop of Jewish blood in my veins," he declared. "I do not want that disclaimer interpreted as an attack upon the Jews, but since there has been from the opposition benches all this dirty innuendo, and since a suggestion has even been carried to God's altar, I say that on both sides I have come of good Catholic stock. My father and mother were married in a Catholic church and I was baptized in a Catholic church."

De Valera was born in New York of a Spanish father and an Irish mother.

Push Ban on Blue Shirts.

The president's unusual statement was made during debate on the government's bill to ban the blue shirt organization. The dail passed the bill on second reading by a vote of 80 to 60. Final reading of the bill is expected next week, when it will go to the senate. There stiff opposition is expected. The opposition has sufficient strength to prevent the measure from becoming law for 18 months. President de Valera's only alternative then would be to call a general election on the issue of abolishing the senate.

During today's debate De Valera renewed his proposal of last night for the establishment of a composite army to preserve order, provided the present forces proved inadequate. The president again expressed his fears that a civil war is imminent in the Free State. He said the same political strife which led to the war of 1922 existed today, and that war was inevitable unless steps were taken to stem the present trend of developments.

"If I had my way," he said, "all arms held by the Irish republican army and others would be handed in and a cross would be put up to the Prince of Peace, such as is in the Andes, as a pledge that never again would Irishmen fight Irishmen. I would place all these arms on the spot outside on which stands now that monstrosity, the monument to a British queen."

Refers to Queen Victoria.

He referred to the statue of Queen Victoria at the entrance to the parliament grounds.

Recalling the taunt hurled at him recently that he is maintaining a "Spanish vendetta" in Ireland, De Valera said warmly that he had given his life to Ireland and "loved every blade of grass in the country."

Former President William T. Cosgrave, replying for the opposition, scouted De Valera's offer of a complete force as not seriously meant. He cited what he called the "malicious treatment" of Gen. Owen O'Duffy, blue shirt leader, who, Cosgrave charged, was dismissed as head of the police without cause and now was refused a pension. He said he regarded the bill to ban the blue shirts as an extension of this policy.

French Cabinet 'Too Busy' to Think of U. S. War Debt

PARIS, March 2.—(AP)—The Doumergue government has been too busy with domestic affairs to take any position on the war debt question, Foreign Minister Barthou told the foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies today. "The government not having considered the debt problem," he said, "I am not in a position to indicate its attitude.

GLORIA SWANSON AND MATE DENY DIVORCE RUMOR

LONDON, March 2.—(AP)—Michael Farmer today added his firm denial to that of his wife, Gloria Swanson, that they are to be divorced. Farmer admitted he was caught off his guard by the rumors and disclosed that he telephoned his actress wife in Hollywood "just to make sure."

"She assured me that there was nothing to the story," Farmer said. "I couldn't believe it, but I telephoned just to make sure."

Farmer expects to return to Hollywood in three or four weeks. He has been abroad for a month visiting the couple's three children—one, Gloria's; one, his own; and one adopted. They are attending school in Switzerland and remain in Europe the year round. Farmers "separation" from his wife, he explained, is an annual affair merely to see the youngsters.

CHINA REFUSES TO RECOGNIZE MANCHU RULER

Urges Forces Be Sent to Recover Lost Land.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, March 2.—The Nanking legislative yuan [council] in a long session today under the chairmanship of Sun Fo passed four resolutions pertaining to the coronation of Henry Pu-yi as Emperor Kang Teh of Manchukuo.

The first consisted of a manifesto reaffirming China's policy of nonrecognition of Manchukuo.

The second urged the national government to send a punitive force to recover the Manchurian provinces.

Urges War on "Traitors."

The third recommended the severest punishment of Chinese and Manchu "traitors" participating in the Manchukuo government.

The fourth ordered the circulation of a manifesto throughout the land declaring that the Manchu dynasty was overthrown in China in 1911 as the result of the unanimous will of China's 400,000,000 people. The manifesto also said that the coronation of Pu-yi in Manchukuo does not mean restoration of the Manchu dynasty but is purely the result of arbitrary actions of the Japanese army.

Meanwhile, the Nanking government strongly protested to Tokio against Japanese military maneuvers at Tientsin staged to celebrate the coronation. The government charged that Japanese troops had penetrated Chinese territory for a distance of 30 miles and conducted field actions with a sham battle in glaring violation of the Boxer protocol under which Japanese and other foreign troops are stationed in north China.

Japanese Conduct Maneuvers.

Reports of foreign observers from Tientsin said Japanese troops, divided into two armies, marched across the country to the vicinity of the town of Chinghai, located on the grand canal, and conducted maneuvers without previous notice to Chinese authorities. The Japanese announced their intention of continuing the field actions for four days.

Prefers Ham and Eggs.

[Copyright: 1934: By The Associated Press.]

HSINKING [Changchun], Manchukuo, March 2.—Shark's fins, octopus tentacles, and lily roots may be all right for the average Manchu, but give Emperor Kang Teh ham and eggs any day.

Big banquets and rare native foods irk the youthful ruler who mounted the throne of the new Manchurian empire yesterday, amid traditional pomp and colorful ceremonies.

There is nothing he likes better than to sit down to a meal of such good old American delicacies as flapjacks, baked beans, and apple pie.

Emperor Has Busy Day.

The emperor's day is a busy one, as he gets Manchukuo's construction program under way.

He arose at sunrise today to chant a prayer to Buddha. His breakfast was a light one, consisting of rice, pickles, sweet cakes, and weak tea, prepared by trusted Manchu cooks under the ever watchful eyes of members of his household.

This is, more or less, a regular Manchukuoan morning meal. He doesn't always follow custom, however, and may, any morning, demand ham and eggs.

And no kingly robes for him on an ordinary imperial day. He dressed this morning in his favorite American style sack suit and a soft American shirt. A green fountain pen made by a well known firm in the United States was stuck in the breast pocket of his coat.

REVEAL KELLY'S MOVIE BAN ON RIOTING SCENES

A ban by the city authorities on newsreel scenes depicting mob violence was revealed yesterday when one of the film companies announced it was preparing to contest the censorship in the courts. A canvass of the other companies showed they believed the motion picture censorship ordinance did not give the city authority for such censorship.

Mayor Kelly said he had ordered Sergt. Harry Costello, in charge of the crime prevention bureau, of which the censorship board is a division, to notify companies to cut the forbidden scenes from their film. Mob violence is not educational, the mayor said, and it has a bad effect on immature minds.

Floyd Traynham, of Universal News Reel company, said he had communicated with the New York headquarters of the company and had been told the censorship would be fought "to the United States Supreme court if necessary."

"We have always felt that, in common with the press, we should be permitted to show the public any newsworthy happening which we are able to photograph," Traynham said. The only cut ordered by Sergt. Costello was in a film of this company but the order was rescinded when a review showed the pictures did not come under the mayor's ban.

AGREE ON PLAN TO UNIFY ACTION OF ALL TEACHERS

Unification of activities of all public school teachers under a system designated as the All-Teacher Participation plan was approved last night by a plurality vote among more than 11,000 teachers.

Three systems were placed on the ballots. They were, first, the steering committee plan; second, the all-teacher participation plan, and, third, the united teachers' plan. The respective vote was 2,587, 5,207, and 3,184.

The All-Teacher Participation plan was sponsored by the State Teachers' association. It provides for a central executive committee comprised of eight elementary school teachers, five high school teachers, and two principals. The personnel is to be divided into various units. The executive group will coöperate with existing teacher organizations.

INVITED TO KILL

COM. LOCKER-LAMPSON.

BRITISH M. P. SAYS HE WAS INVITED TO KILL RASPUTIN

Also Claims He Tried to Save Czar.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 2.—Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, member of the British parliament for 25 years, made the astonishing statement today that he had been invited to kill Rasputin, the mad monk of Russia.

Commander Locker-Lampson made his startling disclosure as a witness in the $2,000,000 libel suit brought by Princess Irina Youssoupoff against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, Ltd., producers of the film "Rasputin and the Empress." Princess Youssoupoff claims she was defamed by the picture.

Locker-Lampson's Story.

Commander Locker-Lampson testified that the invitation to kill Rasputin had been extended to him by Vladimir Purishkevitch, duma leader, and one of the actual killers of the monk with Prince Youssoupoff, husband of the plaintiff.

Locker-Lampson was in command of a British armored car unit which served with the Russian forces in the war and knew all the leading personalities of Russia.

He testified that he had seen the film and did not identify Princess Youssoupoff with the character, Princess Natasha, who is represented as a mistress of the monk.

Lockcr-Lampson assumed the rôle of witness in the case "to assist the ends of justice," as Sir William Jowitt, defense counsel, put it. The witness, when asked by Sir Patrick Hastings, counsel for the plaintiff, what the case had to do with him, replied that he "had an interest in fair play and right."

Says He Tried to Save Czar.

"I served in Russia," he testified. "I was actually acquainted not only with Rasputin himself, but with Purishkevitch and others. I was actually invited by Purishkevitch to murder Rasputin."

Then Locker-Lampson testified that he had also been interested in an unsuccessful scheme to save the life of the late Czar Nicholas.

"I got back to Petrograd (now Leningrad) when the revolution broke out," he said. "I was besieged in my hotel there."

Jowitt interrupted, "Was it arranged that you should evacuate the royal family?"

"We had a plot on foot to save the czar," the commander answered.

Lawyer Gets Sarcastic.

Hastings interrupted with the sarcastic remark: "You haven't come here merely to tell us that, have you? You will be in the papers even more prominently now than as a member of parliament. You will be the star line in the evening news and all your constituents will read it. Don't go too far, will you?"

George Tchapline, a former captain in the imperial Russian navy, testified that he considered the parts in the film pertaining to the prince and princess as purely fictional.

The jury was taken to see the film again and it was indicated the counsels' summing up will start Monday.

SCANDAL FORCES TOKIO CABINET MEMBER TO QUIT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, March 3.—[Saturday]—Minister of Education Ichiro Hatoyama resigned this morning as a result of a scandal exposed in the diet recently. Premier Makoto Saito took the portfolio temporarily.

Two weeks ago Hatoyama was charged in the diet with taking bribes. The next day his foes accused him of keeping a concubine and not properly registering the fact, as well as the birth of two sons to this union. Keeping concubines in Japan is not uncommon, but Hatoyama's connection with the education ministry aggravated the criticism.

This was the second forced resignation in a month and brings the cabinet close to a crisis. Kumakichi Nakajima, minister of commerce and industry, resigned when his foes reprinted an article he wrote a decade ago praising an act of disloyalty to the emperor committed six centuries ago.

SATURDAY NEWS OF NEW BOOKS

New Writings, Good and Bad, Weighed Today

Shaw, Mary Mitchell and Stern Are Authors.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"ALL I know is that I must find the way of life, for myself and all of us. . . . I must preach and preach and preach no matter how late the hour or how short the day, no matter whether I have nothing to say." Thus speaks Aubrey in Bernard Shaw's "Too True to Be Good," the first of the three plays in his latest volume, just published by Dodd, Mead & Co.

And in that paragraph, wrenched from his heart as the fog envelops him, Bernard Shaw's hero speaks straight from the heart of his creator. All of his life Bernard Shaw has been trying to find the best way of life for himself and for "all of us," and all of his life he has been impelled to preach and preach, even when what he has to say seems like nothing. And no matter how late the hour in his life, Bernard Shaw will continue so to preach.

Preaching Has Stimulation.

To me that preaching has a stimulation seldom met with in modern literature. Even in "Too True to Be Good," which is plainly neither popular theater nor especially assimilable social doctrine, that stimulation is evident in every sentence. Shaw is almost diabolically skilled with words. Whatever his place as a dramatist in English literature, whatever his place as a social propagandist in English political history, Shaw's place as a writer of brilliant, incisive English prose [no matter what his subject] cannot but grow more lofty with the passage of the years.

I am one of the old-fashioned readers [so the very young today would say] who own the collected works of George Bernard Shaw and find in them, at the end of a harassing day with too many of the other sort of books, a relaxing delight in their sheer skill of writing. Their themes are—I must confess with rereading—dated.

More Words Than Music.

And like all literature of the propaganda type, Shaw's plays are often more words than music. But the sheer skill with which those words are handled always gives me, for one, great pleasure. So much for the Shaw of the past.

For the present, "Too True to Be Good" wasn't much of a success when the Theater Guild produced it—and why is perfectly obvious—but "On the Rocks" caused a furore in London. The preface to it, dealing with the right to exterminate incompatibles and undesirables, is a bombshell. The third play, "Village Wooing," has neither a preface nor has it had a performance. It is Shaw in a light mood.

This Novel a Light One.

And speaking of light moods, nothing could be in a more airy one than Mary Mitchell's "A Warning to Wantons" [Doubleday-Doran], which was the runner-up in the Hodder & Stoughton prize contest won by Janet Beith's "No Second Spring." Miss Mitchell's book has received in England the honor of being chosen by the English Book society and the dishonor of being wallopet by more critics than praised it.

It is the story of Renee de la Vallilere, who had only one letter to lose from her name to fulfil her destiny and whom already at the age of eighteen no man could resist. Her success was unparalleled and no human, man or woman, had ever got the better of her until she met the Duchess Maria, whose fiancé was a strong man with a weak will when it came to Renee.

What happened to Renee was something that you, dear reader, will have to find out from "A Warning to Wantons," but it was plenty.

Stern Novel Disappoints.

G. B. Stern is a gal that I could weep a puddle of tears for. She used to be the bright particular star of one quarter of the English literary firmament. Bernard Shaw, you remember, championed her as the most enchanting literary discovery of the day.

In the last three novels she has been a bitter disappointment. "The Rueful Mating" didn't come off; "Long Lost Father" was a soggy piece of French pastry, and now "Summer's Play" [Knopf] just plops like a beautiful balloon to which a lighted cigaret has been touched . . . no, there isn't even that much bang to it . . . it is like a popover that sinks instead of popping.

The idea is SO good . . . the hatred of the year round residents toward the summer trippers at an English seaside town, the belief of the children of the family that the "Augs" [as they call them from the fact that they come only in August] are a race apart, their serious-minded attempts to investigate the Augs.

But the book is like one of those sad roman candles that ought to have a dozen beautiful bright balls popping from it, but which just sizzles and sputters and goes out. There is a comedy murder [unconvincingly motivated] and a good deal of punning and whimsy one way or another.

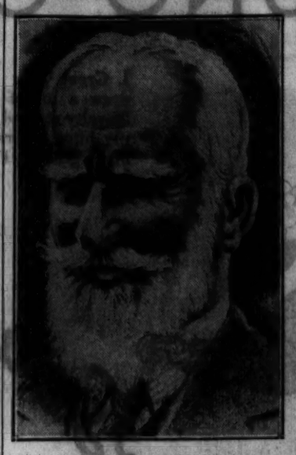
A Novel About Movies.

And while we're on the subject of disappointments we may a well consider "Falling Star" [Doubleday-Doran], Vicki Baum's first novel written in America. Not that it makes us want to cry for the suppression of cruelty to authors by the movies. [The movies, we really feel, are the cause of G. B. Stern's recent fall from her former grace.] Without the movies "Falling Star" would never have been written, and, as far as novels about the movies are concerned, it is probably as good as anything that has been done.

But "Falling Star" lacks the verve and fire and frank and beautiful melodrama of "Grand Hotel," and in that lies disappointment. It is the story of the most popular movie hero of his day and a movie heroine of the silent films resurrected from the utter silence of seven years away from Hollywood and what happened to their love in the scorching, searing Klieg lights.

"Falling Star" is a high melodramatic love story and should please those of Vicki Baum's customers who ask for sensation. The ones it will sadly disappoint are those who found in "Grand Hotel" the kaleidoscopic vividness of "a slice of life." Miss Baum sliced her "Grand Hotel" thick, and it never was baloney. "Falling Star" she slices thin, and sometimes you wonder if it isn't.

NEW PLAYS



Bernard Shaw's new volume of plays, just published by Dodd Mead & Co., includes "Too True to Be Good," "Village Wooing," and "On the Rocks," and inimitable characteristic prefaces to the first and the last plays which have had a success in New York and London. "Village Wooing" is a playlet as yet unacted

Mystery of the Week

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

If you have not yet met Mrs. Bradley you should read "Death in the Wet" (Macrea-Smith), by Gladys Mitchell, whose books stand high in the favor of English readers of mystery stories. Miss Mitchell is one of that group headed by Father Roland Knox and adorned by Dorothy Sayers, John Rhode, and other detective story writers, who meet, write, solve problems for mutual pleasure. They may all be counted upon for agreeable writing and intelligence and among them are the best specialists of the day.

This strange creature, Mrs. Bradley, so competent, so astute, so ugly, so engaging, is a famous crime detector and her creator wields a very subtle pen.

The story of an English school is entertaining in itself, with its set of mildly guilty people, all of whom have reasons to fear the insinuating Mrs. Bradley. A jaunty old villain and a dozen other queer characters from a knightly curate to a maundering landlady add to its qualities.

The murder is an odd one, too, with a very odd motive, and the poor, inoffensive murderee is quite negligible except as the basis for a good story. You will be amused throughout and the last chapter will find you pretty surprised.

Modern Poetry Suffers Under British Attack

John Sparrow Writes a Skilful Book on Verse.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—A minor literary sensation has been caused here by a really skilful book attacking modern poetry. It is called "Sense and Poetry" [Constable], and is written by John Sparrow. Those who have read Max Eastman's "The Literary Mind" have either been delighted or annoyed by its trenchant attack; but Mr. Sparrow's book is quieter and more unanswerable than Mr. Eastman's, and its effect will be less to anger than to demoralize modern poets. It is a very good little book, and it is written by a man who both understands what the poet is driving at and can show that he is driving into the desert. It has already received warm praise from traditionalists; it is due for a spell of condemnation from the moderns; and it is being widely read [for a book of its kind] by all who want to obtain a clear vision of what is being written.

Another book of merit, but this time for those who are less learned in the ways of literature, is called "The Making of Verse," and is the work of Robert Swann and Frank Sidgwick. It is a book for which all who want to know how to make and how to read either verse or poetry will be grateful.

It begins by saying exactly what verse is, and what it is not; and it goes on to explain very amusingly and very plainly everything the beginner has been unable to discover for himself [or herself] about verse structure. Nobody could read it without being able to understand better than ever before what may be called the "rules of the game."

The authors are men of wit and wisdom. The range of their acquaintances with English poetry is extraordinary. One of them is a schoolmaster; the other, whose touch I seem to see everywhere in the book, is a poet, novelist, scholar, and publisher. He has edited a number of collections of ballads and at least two excellent poetical anthologies. His novel, "Love and Battles," had a perfectly Milnian lightness of touch. And his firm, from which "The Making of Verse" comes [Sidgwick & Jackson], is noted for its association with good books.

Although "Magnus Merriman" is the big seller of the moment, and although "A Warning to Wantons," by Mary Mitchell, and Neil Bell's masterful "Bredon and Son" are being widely read, a less sophisticated book is having a warm welcome just now in London. This is Guy Pocock's "Design for a Staircase" [Dent]. This book takes for its theme the lives of ordinary suburban people living in a single apartment building.

All the people are strangers when the book begins, and all have met and learned to know each other when it ends. The same may be said of the reader's relation to the characters, for Mr. Pocock has a light touch and a real understanding of human beings.

A SATIRE

G. B. Stern's "Summer's Play" is a satiric novel about the warfare between the natives and the trippers at an English seaside resort.

Novel of Air Describing New Invention Beats Device by Two Months

"Big Flight" [Little Brown], by Francis and Katharine Drake, is a novel whose plot deals with the invention of a variable pitch propeller which enables airplanes to use the thinner air of the higher altitudes and double their speed with no increase in the power plant.

The authors, who knew of the imminence of such an invention's use were afraid that it might reach the public before their book did.

Literature beat the facts by less than two months. Eddie Rickenbacker in his record flight of 13 hours and 4 minutes from Los Angeles to Newark carrying mail and passengers, used the variable pitch propeller.

Pictorial Survey of Jungle Life Presented by Forest Veteran

F. W. Champion of the imperial forest service of India and author of "With a Camera in Tiger Land," has offered another stunning pictorial survey of animal life in England's great Asiatic possessions. It's called "The Jungle in Sunlight and Shadow" [Scribners], and has over a hundred unusual photographs of tropical fauna and flora, scattered through a book of unusual size and format.

It is the result of years of hardship and danger. He calls it "an attempt to give a genuine picture of life in the jungle as it really it—eager, happy, contented, throbbing life, with but occasional moments of passing fear and unhappiness."

Why La Farge Turned from Desert to Sea

Author Writes Answer to Critic's Question.

Note: When we asked Oliver La Farge, author of the Pulitzer prize-winning novel about Indian life, "Laughing Boy," why he had shifted from Indian stories to the sea in "Long Pennant," he answered in writing. This is his answer:

BY OLIVER LA FARGE.

IN the first place, I come almost entirely of seafaring people, or people who made their living out of the sea, chiefly from Rhode Island. My father used to sail with the Newport fishermen in the '70s and '80s, and my mother knows almost as much about the sea as he does. I was brought up on the shores of Narragansett bay, in an atmosphere of seafaring. Sailing was as natural as swimming. One of my earliest memories is a loose-footed fore-and-aft sail which my father rigged for me at one end of a flat rock, so that I could play at sailing when I was much too small to be allowed out in a boat alone.

I steered with an oar, trimmed sheet and so on, hoisted and lowered sail, anchored and got under way again by the hour. I suppose I was three or four years old. As little boys we rigged sails onto anything that would float. Of course we were taken out in my father's boat right from the start, and went cruising with him when we were fairly small.

The whole village faced and faces the sea. You go out on the bay of a quiet afternoon and let some accident happen—run out your main sheet, jibe unintentionally, carry away something, and when you get in you find half the village knows it.

The big coasting schooners, three, four, and five masters, used the east passage of Narragansett bay as a highroad and anchorage. We were constantly aboard them, until in the last few years they ceased coming. Of course we learned a lot from them.

When I went to Arizona I was 19. At first sight the desert appalled me. When I got used to it it was the sea which interpreted it to me. Because I had been often out of sight of land on the sterile changeful water I was able to "see" the desert, and the desert and sea have always seemed akin to me. But I go out to the desert; I come back to salt water.

Rollins College Seeking Chicago Facts of Founder

Rollins college at Winter Park, Fla., is seeking, in preparation for the observance of its semi-centennial in 1935, biographical data about its founder, Alonzo W. Rollins (1832-1887), Chicago woolen merchant. An old Chicago directory lists Alonzo W. Rollins in business here as early as 1866 on Randolph street. In 1884 he contributed $50,000 which established Florida's first institution of higher learning, which was named in his honor. Information about the life and career of Mr. Rollins in Chicago will be gratefully received by Prof. A. J. Hanna of Rollins.

Five Books Promise Help to Bridge Fans in Winning Games

For the bridge fan who looks to books to bolster his brain there have been five aids and comforts of late—"Defensive Bridge," by E. M. Lagron [Bobbs-Merrill], claimed to be the only book on the subject and aimed to correct the mistakes which, statistics say, cost players five times as many points as their offensive slips: "Karn's Bridge Service," by William Karn [Long & Smith], which, like the famous financial services, is directed toward keeping the public up to date [with supplements] on the serious question of winning; "Win at Contract with Any Partner" [Appleton], which is what every one wants to know how to do; "The Sims Summary of Money Contract," by P. Hal Sims [Simon & Schuster], which will put you in the big money, and "100 & 1 Celebrated Hands in Contract Bridge," edited by Milton C. Work and Oliver Avery Peterson [Winston], in which each hand is bid in accordance with the three popular systems [reaching the same contract] and played before the readers' eyes and supposed to make you wily at your "Work," and "Contract Bridge Omnibus," by Harold Thorne [Holt], which analyses all the systems and compares them, thus making even more eagle your eye.

Dance Tonight for President of Saddle, Cycle

Ralph M. Shaw Honored as Term Expires.

BY JUDITH CASS.

It isn't a hard and fast rule that every retiring president of the Saddle and Cycle club be given a party, but it's become a custom because such parties have been arranged for a number of the outgoing presidents and it's such a pleasant custom that the club wouldn't think of breaking it.

Consequently a dinner dance for Ralph Martin Shaw is being given tonight at the attractive little club which is far enough out not to be a city club and still not so far that it is a country club. Mrs. Shaw will share with her husband the distinction of being a favored guest and since this popular couple is leaving next Thursday for several weeks in Phoenix, the party takes on the aspect of a farewell affair.

Robert Stevenson, the new president, and the other officers and members of the executive committee and their wives will sit at the same table with Mr. and Mrs. Shaw. Darrow Fulton is the vice president but his wife is in mourning so they will not be present tonight. Louis C. Sudler, the secretary, and his attractive young wife, the former Mary Barnes, will be there, but the treasurer, Ayres Boal, and Mrs. Boal are motoring in the south so they won't be among the guests either. The others of the executive committee are Bruce Borland—he and his wife are in mourning, too, so they won't be there tonight—Harold Beacom, Huntly Gilbert, Alexander Kirk, Ballard Moore, Joseph E. Otis Jr., Alfred P. Shaw and John Wentworth.

The George Dulanys have invited a few friends to dine with them tonight in their attractive home atop 936 Lake Shore drive to meet their guest, Mme. George Sebastian of Paris and Tunis, who arrives this morning and leaves tomorrow. Mme. Sebastian spends most of her time in her lovely house at Hammamet, just out of Tunis.

Friends of Opera May Be Revived.

A meeting of great importance to every one interested in Chicago's new grand opera company is to be held at the Arts club Monday, for Mrs. Arthur Meeker, president of the Friends of Opera, has called a meeting of the executive committee to discuss the advisability of reviving their organization. In case it is decided at the luncheon-meeting Monday that it would be well for the Friends of Opera to resume their activities Mrs. Meeker will appoint a committee to nominate new officers and plans will be made for the annual meeting to be held some time this spring.

Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, who headed the box selling committee for the Chicago Grand Opera company this winter, is sailing on the Reliance on March 10 for a three weeks' cruise to the West Indies and when she returns she plans to step right back into the harness and immediately start the work of selling the boxes for next season. Her cousin, William C. Madlener, is accompanying her on the cruise.

The Italy America society has invitations out for a dinner for Dr. Luigi Villari of the University of Siena on Monday, March 12, at 7 o'clock at the Lake Shore Drive hotel. Promptly at 8 o'clock Dr. Villari will speak on "Italy's Foreign Policy." Dr. Villari will arrive in Chicago the night before the dinner and is leaving late Monday night so he will give only the one lecture in Chicago. His mother was English so he speaks English as well as Italian and every one is looking forward with keen anticipation to his talk.

He is the son of a famous Italian historian, Pasquale Villari, and he himself has written several books, including "The Expansion of Italy" and "Russia Under the Great Shadow." He was a member of the secretariat of the league of nations from 1920 to 1925 and in the summer of 1931 and 1932 he was a lecturer at the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass. At present he is a professor of history at the University of Siena. Bernadotte E. Schmitt, who is a personal friend of Dr. Villari's, will introduce him at the dinner.

Mrs. Dudley Root Leaves Tomorrow.

Mrs. Dudley Root is leaving tomorrow morning for New York to sail a day or two later for Mallorca. She will pick up her car on that island, where she has spent much of the last two years, and ship it to Spain to motor to Switzerland to join her daughter, Denyse, who is in school there.

The two will motor to the Riviera to spend Denyse's Easter vacation with Mrs. Root's mother and aunt, Mrs. Peter Dudley and Mme. Jousselin. Mrs. Root's many friends here have been giving so many parties for her during the fortnight she has been visiting the Paget Cadys that she must be looking forward to and in need of the rest that she will have on shipboard as she goes to Mallorca.

Miss Florence D. Bartlett is having such a splendid vacation visiting her good friend, former Judge Mary Bartelme, at her new home in Carmel Highlands, Cal., she has written back that she won't be in Chicago again for at least three more weeks.

The Walter J. Cummingses and their three sons, Walter Jr., Arthur and Edward, who returned to Chicago recently from Washington where they spent the last year, like it so well at the Drake that they are going to stay there until summer. The boys are attending the Latin school, where Walter is in his senior year. They probably will take a house in the suburbs for the summer.

Mrs. Gregory Goes to School Again at 74

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

At 74 Mrs. Robert B. Gregory, daughter of the late William Gold Hibbard, has gone back to school. She is enrolled in a table setting course at the School of Domestic Arts and Science, the Belden avenue college that makes housewives of debutantes and gold coast cooks of housemaids.

"Please don't think it has taken me 74 years to learn how to set a table," cautioned Mrs. Gregory pleasantly yesterday, "but it is a satisfaction to know the reason for the position of the wine glass, as well as some of the other intricacies of table setting."

Mrs. Gregory's study at the domestic science school is an accident. Visiting it recently in her capacity of trustee she became so interested in the table setting course that she remained for the session, then returned the following Monday for another. Since then she's followed it by correspondence.

By this experience and another Mrs. Gregory is convinced that there is something decidedly contagious about the training at the domestic science school. "Take the politeness or my chauffeur here the other day, for instance," she went on to explain yesterday.

"I was lunching at the school with Mrs. Potter Palmer. About to depart, I beckoned to my chauffeur, and he, in turn, motioned to Mrs. Palmer's, who drove up first. I commented afterwards to my driver on his unusual courtesy. 'O, yes,' he said in reply; 'Mrs. Palmer was your guest, Mrs. Gregory.'"

Yesterday Mrs. Gregory and Mrs. Lyman Evans, the president of the school, entertained at luncheon at the school. The menu, prepared by the students, was Norwegian with "fiske," a delectable fish loaf, as the "piece de resistance."

Entertainment after the luncheon was a tour of the campus, which in its architecture is an interesting study in contrasts. There is the Victorian Adams house, the former home of the George E. Adams family, and one of the first "Eastlake" type of dwellings built in Chicago, now the main school building. Directly across from it is the very modern practice house where the students may experiment with the homemaking they learn in the classroom.

It is the Adams house, however, with its high ceilings, carved cherry woodwork, and gracious spirit of hospitality that personifies the school, founded 33 years ago, not for profit. "If enough girls are exposed to this," suggested one of the guests yesterday, "perhaps there will be a general revival of Victorian manners and Victorian families—large families, I mean."

Miss Patricia Norton and her sister Beatrice, Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson, and Miss Louise Clarke are some of the young women enrolled this semester in the homemaker's course which runs the gamut from the kitchen to the nursery school. Business girls take their courses at night while cooks are enrolled in special day and evening courses that they may improve in their chosen profession.

An extra-curricular activity is the needlework guild, which meets every Monday for the day. Enrolled in this group are a dozen matrons interested in the school—as well as in producing a piece of needlepoint or crewel work that will go to posterity. Mrs. James B. Herrick, another school trustee, is one of this group. Others are Mrs. Thomas Beasley, Mrs. Carter Hathaway, and Mrs. Seymour Morris.

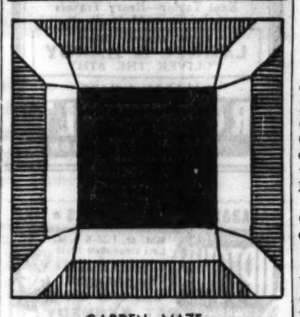
Attractive Quilt's Motif Is Found in Fine Landscapes



GARDEN MAZE.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Early in the nineteenth century this block was first pieced and called "Garden Maze." It suggests most attractive landscaping. Ambitious quilters, not content with one good name, called it, also, "Sun Dial," "Tirzah's Treasure," and "Tangled Garter." However, none of these seem as suitable as the original title.

For a quilt pattern in this design send 5 cents in coin or stamps to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn, and Tribune Tower.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—A party was given this evening for Mrs. John Wallis by her uncle, Henry Bogert Clark.

Miss Roosevelt Will Be Bride at Rites Today

Oyster Bay, N. Y., March 3.—(AP)—The first wedding among the Oyster Bay Roosevelts in 21 years will be celebrated here tomorrow when Miss Grace Green Roosevelt, eldest granddaughter of President Theodore Roosevelt, becomes the bride of William McMillan of Baltimore.

Miss Roosevelt is the daughter of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, former governor general of the Philippines.

The snow banked village was filling up tonight with guests from New York, Washington, Baltimore, and other cities, who have come for the wedding. Workmen have been busy for days digging out the highway between the church and the various Roosevelt homes at Cove Neck, three miles away.

The wedding will take place at noon in Christ Episcopal church, known as the "Roosevelt church." The Rev. George E. Talmage, its former pastor and an intimate friend of President Theodore Roosevelt and all of his family, will officiate.

Plans to have a wedding breakfast and reception at Sagamore Hill, the home of the President's widow, were changed late today when it was found the road leading to the house was clogged with snow and slush.

The breakfast and reception will be held instead in the parish house of the church, which was decorated with smilax and tall palms.

Paulina Longworth, 9 years old, daughter of Alice Roosevelt Longworth, will be the flower girl. She is coming on from Washington with her mother, whose own wedding in the White House is still remembered for its brilliance.

Miss Grace Roosevelt was born in San Francisco, but has spent most of her life in Oyster Bay. Her father's home, Woodside farm, is just under the shadow of Sagamore Hill. She is "Miss Gracie" to the village, which has watched her grow up and which holds all the Roosevelts in affectionate regard.

McMillan, an architect and prominent yachtsman, is the son of Mrs. William Dent Wise and the late Hugh McMillan of Detroit.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., March 2.—[Special.]—The Spanish ambassador and Señora de Cardenas entertained at luncheon today in compliment to Prince Iyesata Tokugawa, former president of the Japanese house of peers, now president of the Japanese Red Cross.

The prince, his son, the minister to Canada, and the latter's daughter, Princess Toyo Tokugawa, were the dinner guests tonight of Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross. A large company were asked to meet the distinguished visitors.

The former American ambassador to Germany and Mrs. Frederic C. Sackett have closed their home here and gone to New York to sail tomorrow for a four weeks' cruise in the Mediterranean, after which they will open their house in Cherokee Park, near Louisville, Ky., for the spring season.

Purdue Co-eds Visit City to Study Hotel Methods

Sixteen Purdue university senior co-eds, students in institutional management, arrived in the city yesterday for a two day inspection of dining rooms and kitchens in large hotels, restaurants and institutions. The group also will visit markets and wholesale grocery houses.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

If you can conceive of God as having a sense of humor—and why not?—you'll imagine Him getting a great kick from contemplation of one southern mountain girl, known variously as Trigger and Spitfire.

Whatever Katharine Hepburn may or may not be as an actress, there's nothing rubber stamp about her. Wherever placed, however cast, she will always be "different." She has more than personality. She has genius.

"Spitfire"—adapted from Lulu Vollner's play, "Trigger"—is, primarily, a character study, though it unreels a good enough little drama by the way. The central figure is a strange, uncultured, primitive, fascinating girl of the Carolina mountains who talks to God as if He were her next of kin, and would as soon throw a rock at an offending fellow man as to look at him. Hymns and cuss words flow with equal flavor and facility from her lips. Her scowl is terrifying and her smile infectious. Her faith is the sort we've been taught can move mountains.

But Trigger explains, people usually pray with the wrong kind of faith. As, for instance, in the case of toothache.

"You pray for the ache to stop and you have faith it ain't a goin' to. . . ."

So efficacious have her petitions to the Almighty proven that the superstitious mountain folk are right certain she's a witch. Especially is old Granny Raines agin her—for it is a well known fact in the community that Trigger done raised Granny from the dead.

"Shucks," snaps Trigger. "Granny just had one of her fits, an' I asked God to bring her out of it, an' He did. . . ."

But Granny has been mad ever since, for, it seems—"thar was I at peace, 'n' she brings me back to trouble agin. . . ." And, later on in the tale, Granny heads a grim group bent on ridding the county of this compleat pray-er.

Two young men, G. Fleetwood and J. Stafford—connected with the construction of a dam thereabouts—come into and change the course of Trigger's life. During which process she puts a flock of kinks into their respective schemes of things. . . .

The wit and insight of this mountain lassie are rapier keen. While she walks with God she is not above putting over a fast one on such as deserve it. She is inconsistent. She is impetuous. She is shrewd, unmercenary, affectionate. Her observations are pat. Says she to the cat, after the episode in which she discovers the man she loves is married:

"One thing about you—when you catch a rat you can eat him . . . I can't. . . ."

She is charitable and she is reckless. She is whimsical, tragic, maddening, amusing, appealing. . . .

No wonder Fleetwood—well—you'll like the casual, romantic note on which the picture ends. . . .

Miss Hepburn has perfectly mastered the mountain dialect.

The vivid young star has splendid support. Ralph Bellamy—I DO like him!—is ideal as Fleetwood. His stalwart steadiness of mind and body prove a faultless foil for Trigger's glancing moods and activities.

The scenery is rarely lovely and has been beautifully photographed. Direction and dialog are all the heart could desire.

All in all—don't be passing up "Spitfire"!

See you tomorrow!

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

We hope this makes you chuckle, too, but perhaps you'll have to say it aloud to get the humor of it. Attorney Roland D. Whitman was coming down in the elevator of a loop department store when the car stopped at the ladies' coats and dresses floor. As the elevator doors were thrown back he and the other passengers heard some one paging:

"Miss Fitts. Miss Fitts."

He learned later that it was two words being repeated, instead of one, and that Miss Fitts is one of the buyers.

Misfits—
Steinish—
Whale—
Pun.

* *

The parents of a vivacious little north side girl are wondering if she is to become a second Gertrude Stein. Paul Paddock reports that the other day when her mother took her shopping, and told that she would be allowed to spend an hour in the playroom of a large department store, she exploded:

"O, goodie, goodie, goodie, goodie, good."

* *

And a shopper, seeing the samples of typewriting done by passersby on machines displayed along the counter of a department store, noted the numerous repetitions of "now is the time, now is the time, now is the time for all good men, for all good men," with many dots, asterisks and other peckings, said:

"I see Gertrude Stein has been here."

"Either she or Frankenstein," retorted the salesperson.

* *

Sigrid Sittig of Lombard says that a couple of weeks ago, just before the snowstorm, there was an epidemic of prairie fires round and about Lombard. Sometimes the racing, crackling walls of flame threatened outlying homes. At such times the fire engine came dashing to the scene. But in preference to its shining equipment the fire fighters armed themselves with worn and charred old brooms before they jumped from the modern red and chromium speed demon.

This is a story about a rector and a whale, and we've been trying to get hold of the Rev. Dr. Frederick S. Fleming, rector of Old Trinity church at Wall street, who is in town, to get details, but so far have not found him. Old Trinity, as you probably know, existed before the United States government. In colonial days the rector of Old Trinity was the rector of Manhattan, and as such was, as we understand it, the supreme power on the island of Manhattan. Well, not long ago a dead whale was washed up on Manhattan. This apparently was an occurrence without precedent and upset the authorities considerably. However, they did as they have done on similar occasions when an unprecedented circumstance has arisen. They dug down into the old laws and discovered that the whale was the property of the rector of Old Trinity. It therefore was turned over to him. What we have been unable to find out was what he did with it.

Helen Szukalska, in a blue Fortuny gown shot with silver, sat at the foot of her table the other evening at a Polish dinner about which her guests are still talking. First there was piroghi, a kind of Polish ravioli, that was so good everybody took a second helping. Then there was a clear red soup mottled with cream that Alice Gade called a refined version of Russian bortsch, whereupon a Pole present, Dr. Stanislas Chylinski, commented that the Russian soup was derived from the Polish soup. Thin, hot cheese sticks were served with the soup. The main dish was called "hunter's stew" and has six different kinds of meat in it, a dish that surely would call any hunter home from the hill. With this course the Polish whisky called Starka, said to be 40 years old before it is bottled, was served. The last course was a handsome fruit compote, with pears, peaches and other fruits surmounted by sour cream. Sammy, at the piano in the drawing room, interspersed Polish pieces with the latest numbers. After dinner a Polish guest danced hilarious mazurkas and a polonaise, while the others tried to learn them, and hot spiced wine was served from an antique silver pot. Perhaps, too, Koko should be mentioned, as Koko, Mrs. Szukalska's great French sheepdog, who looks exactly like Nana, the dog-nurse in "Peter Pan," was a conspicuous member of the party.

THE WILD BIRD

By OWEN JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS.

Barbara Brawne, aged 22, is completely dominated by an adoring though jealous father, who is against every modern idea and improvement. Lynwood, their home, is in the prim and proper village of Oxbridge, a place of intellectual sanctity. Barbara seems predestined to join the ranks of the village spinsters. Her father scares away any would-be suitors. She contemplates rebellion. Gregory Rance, popular novelist, is visiting her cousin, Laurie Chiswick. They are mutually attracted. Barbara overhears Rance asking Laurie about her. He says she is the sort of girl he'd want to marry. Barbara proposes to Rance. But Rance is divorced and her father hates divorce and uses this as an excuse to oppose their marriage. When Barbara determines to marry Rance, regardless, her father has a stroke. Barbara fears he'll kill himself deliberately. She promises him she won't marry Rance without his consent. Gregory goes away and Barbara strives futilely to put him out of her mind. Disbrough, her father's partner, is a frequent visitor at Lynwood. Barbara goes on a visit to Long Island. Brawne worries himself into a frenzy. When Disbrough calls he sends him to propose to Barbara, knowing that their marriage would be only one of convenience. Barbara promises to consider Disbrough's proposal. She receives a letter from Gregory which awakens impossible longings. In desperation she decides to accept Disbrough. It is to be a marriage in name only, Barbara sharing her fortune with him. She writes to tell Gregory.

INSTALLMENT XLII.

A MARRIAGE OF CONVENIENCE.

Barbara had a horrible vision of her father falling stricken at her feet and cried:

"No, no—you don't understand!"

"I understand one thing!" He raised his fist, a fist that shook with weakness and passion. "If that man comes here again—as God is my witness, I'll kill him! If he puts his foot on my property I'll put a bullet in him."

He stood wavering, his hair in disorder, his nightgown white against the shadows, like a disordered spirit from another world. Then suddenly he burst out into a wild diatribe, filled with such unmeasured, hideous accusations that Barbara, frightened, sprang forward, clutching him by the wrist.

"Stop! Father—for God's sake stop! Don't you understand? I'm marrying Allen Disbrough!"

He put his hand suddenly to his heart and sat down weakly.

"I have told Allen so," she said, stiffening as she saw the danger was past. "Yes, I am writing to Gregory, but I am writing for the last time. I love him as I've always loved him, as I always will love him."

"Is that the truth?"

"It's the truth." She met his glance. "This is the end of all things for me. Now leave me. I have at least the right to be alone.

He walled up the door connecting his room with Barbara's.

He took a quick, fluttering breath and struggled to his feet, looked into his daughter's eyes and then hurried away.

"Call Miss Kerrigan. I can't go up the stairs alone."

She went forward and took his arm. They went up the stairs, Barbara holding the candle in one hand, her whole body rigid under the pressure of his hand on her shoulder. She saw him to his bed and returned to the library. Not a word had been exchanged.

She sat a long moment inertly, and then drawing the pad to her, began again:

O my dear. I have just gone through a scene with my father. Such a hideous scene! He came on me as I was writing this letter. All that you say of him is true. I don't blame you—but he is my father. I cannot deliberately be the cause of his death, and just now for one horrible moment I thought he was going to collapse——

She rested her hot head in her hands and stared blindly at the letter. Then with a sudden reaction she began again rapidly:

Gregory, my beloved, I am going to make you a promise. I do it because I love you beyond words, because I want you to know that I have done all that I could humanly do.

My marriage to Mr. Disbrough is nothing but a business arrangement on his part. My fortune for his career. He is not in the least in love with me. He will never be in love with any one or call forth love from any one. It is better so. The conditions of our marriage he has left to me. To belong to him now, feeling as I do about you would be impossible. Not for a long time, for years maybe, will I be anything but his wife in name. Until you marry, or love again, as you must, as I want you to—until I hear from you, I shall be faithful to our memory. Don't think this is an emotional reaction that will pass quickly. It is in my self-respect and the depths of my feeling for you. My beloved, if I saw you again I couldn't go through with this——

BARBARA.

When you get this I shall be married.

She took his letter and lit it at the candle. To read it again was beyond her courage. Then, with her candle in hand, she went through the dark house and up the stairs.

The door between their rooms stood open. She heard her father stir in his bed and cry, "Barbara, come here."

She went forward, closed the door violently, locked it, and taking the key, flung it out of the window.

. . . . . .

Disbrough's answer was, as she knew it would be, a complete acceptance. They were married the day after his arrival, in the library, with only Aunt Abbie and her father present.

The first characteristic thing Martin Brawne did was to wall up the door which connected his room with Barbara's. She had locked it against him. He would never forgive that. His acceptance of her marriage had been simply a choice of evils. She had forced him to it. All the fierce, passionate jealousy which had dominated his life turned to a cold, sullen resentment. He began to lose his grip on life, as though only by the exercise of his will and hatred he had been able to dominate his illness, until he had seen his daughter safe from his enemy.

His eccentricities increased and his hatreds became obsessions. He was forever quarreling with the local authorities over the upkeep of the roads and the extravagance of their appropriations for the lighting of the village. When the tax collectors, in revenge, assessed his stable at thirty thousand dollars, he immediately had it torn down, thereby depriving them of that income. He forced Tony Chiswick, who owned an adjoining property, to pay half the cost of a fence which he constructed for no other purpose than to enjoy his irritation. The Persian cat tribe having increased, he had constructed half a dozen run holes, with automatic shutters, in the back wing so that they could enter and exit without the necessity of having a door opened. He fed them once a day himself, in a dignified ceremony. Of consequence there were always three or four at his heels.

The great period of inflation that was moving to its culmination in the panic of 1929 was his special obsession. As fast as the stock market shot up he sold his securities and placed his funds in treasury notes and Liberty loans. But the market, as though actuated by a special spite, continued to rise. The air was full of the new day that had come. New forces invented by the imaginative genius of the new business leaders. Stocks that were selling at 200 would go to a thousand. Prosperity such as no one had imagined was ahead, and every one hurried to clutch the tail of the kite. A new day, new forces, a new society. But nothing could shake Martin Brawne's conviction of impending disaster. Inflation was but the outward sign of a disorganized society riding to its corrective disaster. Only, the days of mounting prices left him in a worse humor than ever. This subject dominated the conversation at the dinner table. Allen Disbrough listened sympathetically, never venturing a contradiction.

Disbrough, becoming a man of property, had become more conservative than his father-in-law. Barbara was appalled at the few genuine ideas he possessed. Formerly, in the isolation of her existence, his coming had been an event of interest. Living with him day by day and judging him implacably, she soon realized his incapacity for original thinking. He was a legal machine, as inevitable as a cash register, his arguments developed with the certainty of mathematics. She had looked forward to some mental stimulation, if even in the clash of opinions. She found herself, at the end of a few months, profoundly bored by this man of a career who was marching forward victoriously on his carefully plotted way. In her first moment of generosity, she had resolved that at her father's death she would divide her inheritance with him. But she quickly changed her resolution. The respect he showed her was the respect he felt for property. Her strength with him, and her power to protect herself, would always lie in her financial independence.

Doris Blake Answers

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl friend, who has just lost her boy friend, is after mine. He does not care for her. How can I keep her from him.

MARY."

You have little cause for worry, Mary. However, if you want to play safe, arrange your dates so they won't meet.

"Dear Miss Blake: Every time I ask the girl I love for a date she turns me down and goes with some one else. How can I find out whether she likes me or not?

JAY."

Girls do not turn down dates if the young man has the necessary appeal for them, Jay. You have your answer in her refusals.

however, has not yet heard when to expect her granddaughter here. She has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Arthur Sweetzer, in Switzerland for the last few months. Mrs. Sweetzer is not returning with Miss Durham, nor is it likely that her Chicago friends and relatives will be seeing her here in the very near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Durham are in Arizona for the winter.

The Raymond M. Ashcrafts are leaving this morning for a trip to Florida. They will be away about three weeks, leaving their daughter, Miss Jane Ashcraft, in charge of their south side house. Miss Dorothy Grant of Danville, who attended Rockford college with Miss Ashcraft, is arriving at the Ashcraft house Monday morning to spend a fortnight or longer.

The Horace W. Armstrongs and their daughter, Miss Jean Armstrong, who went to Boca Raton about three weeks ago, are expected at home in Winnetka today.

To the surprise and delight of all of the former Dorothy Moorehead's friends her husband, Asaph Churchill Jr., was sent to Chicago on business so she promptly decided to accompany him and here they are . . . staying part of the time with Mrs. Churchill's mother, Mrs. Hirst Moorehead, at the Whitehall. No formal parties are being given for the popular couple because Mr. Churchill's time is far too occupied, but they are seeing their friends and going about a lot in an informal way.

Children's Party Today at Union League Club.

A wide eyed young audience is going to follow the tricks of a magician this afternoon at a children's party at the Union League club. Before the program at 2:30 there's to be a real boys' and girls' luncheon with fruit and chicken and jelly and ice cream and cake.

Little Betty Jane Bennett and her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bennett Jr. of Glencoe, are bringing one of the largest groups of guests. Among them will be her big brother, Robert Bennett III.; James Hughston McBain, son of the Hughston McBains of Winnetka; Stanley Dixon Zaring, the Stanley Zarings' young son; little George Amos Poole IV., son of the junior George A. Pooles of Winnetka; Ellen, Ann, and Mary Ryerson, the young daughters of the Joseph T. Ryersons; Peter, Edwin, and Nancy Krupp, whose mother and father are Dr. and Mrs. Peter Krupp; and Ann, Nancy, and Billy Jacobs, children of the Whipple Jacobses of Winnetka.

Because her brother, Arthur Meeker Jr., has just had another book published, Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer gave a luncheon for him yesterday noon at the Arts club. There were ten guests offering congratulations on "Vestal Virgin," the book.

At an Arts club luncheon Thursday, at which Mrs. Oakley K. Brown was hostess, former Judge Charles S. Cutting celebrated his 80th birthday. Among the guests at this party was the former judge's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert S. Cutting.

Kenneth Foster Will Tell of Chinese Theater.

Appropriately enough Col. George T. Langhorne, president of the American Friends of China, will introduce Kenneth Foster tomorrow afternoon when he speaks to the members of the Chicago Drama league on "The Chinese Theater, Ancient and Modern." The occasion is another of the league's candlelight salons to be held at the Arts club.

Mr. Foster is said to be the only American ever to have acted on the Chinese stage. He taught the Princess Der Ling to Charleston on top of the Great Wall of China.

For illustration of his lecture Mr. Foster will use his famous collection of ancient imperial costumes obtained early in the 20th century when the summer palace in Peking was looted. Living models dressed in these costumes will portray the traditions of the Chinese theater as well as the oriental court life.

Because of the interest in the situation in France a large audience is expected this noon at the luncheon meeting of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at the Palmer house. Paul Scott Mowrer, who until his return to this country a few weeks ago held a Paris newspaper post, will be the speaker.

Dr. Walter Lichtenstein as the toastmaster will occupy the center place at the speakers' table.

Hutchinses to Greet Chicago Alumnae Today.

President and Mrs. Robert Maynard Hutchins will be at home to the members of the Alumnae club of the University of Chicago from 4 to 6 this afternoon at their home on the Midway. The club is a social and philanthropic group, supporting scholarships for girls. Miss Ethel Preston is the president.

Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, who devotes a major part of her time to charity, has consented to serve again as president of the Chicago Church Mission of Help, a social service agency which has for its special job the protection of girls and young women.

Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Miss Lawrence to Co-Star in Stage Play

LONDON, March 2.—(AP)—Douglas Fairbanks Jr., American film player, said tonight that he and Miss Gertrude Lawrence, English actress, had signed contracts to co-star in a new nonmusical stage play written especially for them.

The play will open in Manchester late in April and afterward will go to Edinburgh and Glasgow before coming to London. Then they plan to take the play to Broadway, New York.

Fairbanks laughed noncommittally at the suggestion that he and Miss Lawrence might "be man and wife in real life by then."

They have been seen together often in recent months and their marriage insistently has been rumored as pending.

Fairbanks described the new play as "a romantic tragedy in a modern English setting," but did not say what the title was.

Striped precision in cadet blue wool with stripes of lighter blue, from a Chicago collection. The one color, simple skirt is topped with a separate blouse of navy blue silk, tied with a chin bow. The striped knee length coat is cleverly contrived to slice inches from the silhouette.

You Can Take Your Choice in Coat Fashions

BY RHEA SEEGER.

So far it's a wide open season for coats. Your guess is as good as the gal's next door . . . you can envelop your shivering silhouette in cozy, heart-warming as well as eye-filling tweeds or wools without a scrap of fur any place, or you can wander into a fashion-wise shop and plank down a considerable amount of cash for a royally designed dress parade affair practically submerged under lovely swirls of fox fur.

And there are lots of in-between models with very modest price tags and lesser amounts of fur, but with plenty of dashing sleekness.

There are plenty of plain or one-color coats that are perfect foils for the gayly printed dresses that appear as if by magic during these dull days . . . all kinds of knockout light toned tweeds with swanky fullness cinched into a new position around the front waistline, casual things when you wear 'hem with the proper distinction.

Flocks of new navy blue coats, with and without fur, that ought to please the most critical . . . and while you are inspecting this navy blue collection do look for the stunning smoky-gray fox trimmings. One fitted model is made with a wide belt clasped with a wide pearl buckle and fashioned with one of the newest swirl-around collars. Wide bands of flattering fox ripple around the neckline—it's a collar you can twist and fix any number of ways.

Coat sleeves are as varied as the fabrics and silhouettes . . . you'll find them slim and tailored, some interesting new ideas with deep, almost waist deep armholes, some sleeves that start from the shoulder in wide, full formations and end at the wrist, slender, trim, and flawlessly chic.

Necklines and chestlines mark this year's newest models! Tumbling lengths of ascots still fill in the swagger necklines of street wools, with full bows marching along in second and wide full blown looking revers and lapels, giving that crisp, active, free striding silhouette.

Gentleness in Boy Is No Sign He's Weakling

It's Wrong to Try to Make Him "Rough and Ready."

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"My boy is the gentle type and I'd like to make him more rough and ready," is a feeling that is often expressed by mothers, either in these words or in words much like them.

It's a feeling that often causes parents to have an underlying sense of dissatisfaction with their child. It isn't alone that they think it would be for his good to be rough and ready—it's also that they have a conventional mental image which they call boy—and "rough and ready."

Now I will admit that I think every boy should have the opportunity for lots of vigorous outdoor play, for fun and friends and athletics. He needs them—and if he is going to be rough and ready it gives him his chance—either when he's quite a small boy or later when he gets into his teens, for this quality doesn't always develop early.

But it may be that he's never going to be one of the rough and ready kind. Maybe he's the gentle type. Maybe he's never going to be aggressive or a fighter or an athlete. If he's not then accept him as he is.

I think the life stories of well known men either of today or of the past are among the greatest aids parents can have to help them to accept the temperament which they see showing itself in their own children. For instance, this one as a child, his biography reveals, was physically timid; another disliked school work; another one was always drawing when he should have been studying or doing chores; another spent his spare time bringing home injured animals.

The gentle type of boy may be the exception while he's a boy, but when he reaches manhood his gentleness has its place. He may prove to be the thinker, the musician, the inventor, the poet—the devoted husband and father—or he may be just the understanding soul. And whether they make their mark or not, the world is always the richer for these last. We can't have too many understanding hearts. If your boy is the gentle type that doesn't mean that he will be any the less a man for it.

Wampas Sticks to Plans for Star Selections

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., March 2. — [Special.]—Young screen girls with good looks and intelligence but without contracts at studios are to receive more recognition than ever before under new rules of the Wampas, which will pick none but free lance lasses for their "Baby Stars of 1934." The studios, which divided up the majority of the annual thirteen "baby star" elections in prior years, are not welcoming the innovation and the studios are cutting many of the ties which formerly bound the major producing plants with the guild of the press agents and announcing an intention to proclaim their own "baby stars."

The Wampas [Association of Movie Press Agents] will choose the thirteen girls they intend to honor on the strength of screen tests. The tests will be run off for scrutiny of the membership of the association, who will then vote for the thirteen they believe most capable of making advancement in their film careers. The screen tests must all be made by March 13.

In the meantime Paramount singles out the following six young women, all but one under 20 years of age, for its own "Starlets": Evelyn Venable, Helen Mack, Dorothy Dell, Ida Lupino, Frances Drake, Elizabeth Young. These Paramount girls were selected from balloting on that lot in which directors, writers, executives, and players participated. Twenty young contract actresses were voted on to select the six. Grace Bradley took seventh place by one vote.

Ken Maynard, the only old time cowboy movie hero still galloping to the rescue over the mountain skyline, is back at Universal to make another, "Doomed to Die," with Gloria Shea as his innocent heroine. All the other old timers, Bill Hart, Tom Mix, Broncho Billy, Hoot Gibson, Neal Hart, Art Acord, Fred Thomson, Tim McCoy, George O'Brien, have either died, like Acord and Thomson; retired, like Bill Hart; disappeared from the ken of Hollywood, like Broncho Billy Anderson, or gone into other style films, like O'Brien and McCoy. Buck Jones and Yakima Canutt, for instance, are playing subordinate parts in independents for minor studios, one of Canutt's recent deeds being to pull a savage bear off another actor whom the bear was mangling.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

Mr. Sims is universally acclaimed the greatest living contract and auction player. He was captain of the renowned "Four Horsemen" team of four, now disbanded, and has won twenty-four national championships since 1924. These articles are based on the Sims system, which includes the one-over-one principle which the Sims group of players was the first to employ and develop.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE "ONE-OVER-ONE" RESPONSE.

NOW that you are better acquainted with the nature of this response, you will realize why I object to my system being called "The One-Over-One." To call a complete whole by the name of one of its parts is not only unreasonable but absolutely misleading. Would you call an automobile an "engine" or a set of golf clubs a "niblick?"

The One-Over-One Is a Servant, Not a Master.

The one-over-one is one of several essential features in the Sims system, but it does not dominate it, nor does it exclude other responses when the one-over-one is justified by your suit holding, but some other response seem likely to guide the bidding more deftly.

When the One-Over-One Is Most Valuable.

The one-over-one is most effective in bidding the two extreme grades of responding hands—the very strong ones and the very weak ones. With very powerful hands, the hope of a slam naturally gives one a thrill; but that feeling of elation must not make us impatient in developing the bidding. Accelerate gradually and keep your foot near the brake so that you can pull up in time when an obstacle looms up. The one-over-one keeps the bidding low at the start and so enables essential information to be exchanged long before the danger line of an impossible contract is neared. As visibility increases, the bidding moves faster. The brakes are ready for use when needed—only in contract we call them "minimum responses" or "signoffs."

In connection with very weak hands, this response functions perfectly in steering us generally into the safest declaration for the lowest number of tricks. Many hands which are misfits in their suit holdings will at least give a play for one no trump. If you make a minimum opening bid of one diamond—and remember that our opening bids are not weak in terms of other authorities—and I respond with one spade, also holding a minimum; now you have to make another bid, but with nothing in reserve you say, "One no trump." The signoff signal has been given. It suits me, too, and I will pass unless I have good reason to think that a contract of two spades or two diamonds [both minimum responses to the no trump reply] will be safer. Frequently one no trump will be made where one diamond or one spade would have been defeated.

An Important Defensive Factor.

A second important effect of the one-over-one when both partners are weak is its deterrent effect on the opponents in regard to overcalls, especially when they are vulnerable. Knowing you to be users of this response, they also know that you will employ it on a tremendously powerful responding hand, just as you would on a very weak one. To overcall it becomes very risky—there may be a penalty disaster if the bold overcaller is trapped between an opening bid and a hand which would call for a forcing response in the form of a jump takeout were the one-over-one not available.

At other times an overcall would result profitably, but how can they be sure of it? This risk is not imposed under systems where, if you bid one diamond and I bid one spade, I am proclaiming to the oppenents as clearly as to you the sad news that though I have enough to be unwilling to pass your opening bid, yet I am not at all hopeful because I am prepared to have you pass my takeout. This is almost an invitation to the opponent on your left to inject a bid on slight justification, since you warn him in the very first round of bidding that he is not trapped between two strong hands.

The Old and the New.

Veterans of auction will remember how the weak no trump takout was used to warn opener of a misfit and suggest that he try another suit if his hand could not stand the no trump. In contract, the one-over-one conserves this same advantage but advantageously transfers to the responding hand the decision whether, in weak partnership holdings, the one no trump contract is preferable to that of two in either of two suits that have been bid.

Mr. Sims will answer all inquiries on contract that are addressed to this newspaper. Please inclose self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Tricky Makeup Can Alter Form of Chubby Face

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Molly owns to a chubby face, rather squarish, although she is slight of body. She wonders if there is not some way she might apply rouges that would give a better face shape. She's been working it in circles that cover cheek bone and an inch below.

The placing of rouge really can give the impression of slenderizing or making the face fuller. Molly's squarish facial dimensions might be reduced by using no rouge at all, if she can get away with it, as many can who let the lips bloom sufficiently colorful. But, if she needs cheek color, or feels she must have it, she could try applying the rouge lightly, very lightly, closer to the nose, and letting it fade out, so to speak, before it reaches the temples.

The impression of length is created by putting the rouge fairly high. If the cheekbones are prominent, it is a mistake to rouge them at all. A very light touch, under the cheekbones and around its under curve, is all that should be permitted.

With an oval face, it's worth while trying the rouge toward the middle of the cheek and blending in an up and out direction.

A very thin face, like the very round or squarish face, has to be treated warily with rouge. Often, none is the best bet. If a rouge, with a purplish tone, is used on the extremely thin face, the effect is most aging and sickish looking.

When there is experienced difficulty in applying rouge, or unless one knows just exactly how much to apply and where, I think the paste or cream rouge best to use. The effect is more natural. It is more easily blended with a bit of cream as base if it goes on too heavily.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

When it comes to the use of soap and water the only thing to say about it, we guess, is that some do and some don't. Some women cling firmly to the theory that their skins won't stand it; others are absolutely vehement about the virtues of a scrubbing at least once a day.

Editorially we're neutral on the subject. "Every woman to her pet beauty belief" is our motto. We aim only to help her find what she wants.

The anti-soap and water group, however, have been after us heavily lately by note and telephone about creams. Some want one kind, some another, but there seems to be a terrific demand for a cream that can be used in slathers and slathers without going broke.

Now we have a notion that good cosmetics can't be in the "few cents" class. It isn't possible. But we have found a cream, a liquefying cleanser of good quality, that can be bought in the generous quantity of one pound for a really low price. If you're the sort of woman who practically smothers face and neck in cleansing cream a couple of times a day you might find it the answer to your prayers. You can feel, as you scoop out huge handfuls to slap on, that you're not being terribly extravagant. You'll find it in a Chicago store, sold in pound jars. There are two kinds, the liquefying and the regular slightly heavier cold cream. We personally like the liquefying, but it is entirely a matter of personal preference.

Almost every woman seems to be feeling the winter strain on skin right now and is inclined to use cream more generously than she does in the summer. If she wants, for this lavish use, a cream that is definitly not in the expensive class she, too, might like this one. It's a good cleanser, with lubricating value, too.

BY MARY MEADE.

I've often thought sadly about this business of the blended flour and water mixture which we use so constantly in soups, sauces, gravies, and in a troup of other things in this day by day kitcheneering of ours. So this morning I'm turning up with a suggestion, a way I've found of banishing the bother of dragging forth the flour each day and whacking out lumps just when I need the most speed and the least stalling. I now simply blend a considerable amount of flour and water at one sitting and pour it into a quart jar. Cover it tightly. When flour and water are needed for thickening whiz it forth, shake up, and pour out the desired amount.

'Nother thing. If ever you have a feeling that you need neat, sizey containers with lots of visibility and wide mouths for holding rice, brown sugar, prunes, or what-is-there, then speak up to your grocer and let him supply you with the brand of coffee which comes packed in just such neat glass jars and leaves you the jar for hosts of uses when the coffee is gone.

And who isn't looking for a new muffin with a smart 1934 tang? If you're one who is next time drop a half teaspoon of soft peanut butter into the bottom of each muffin tin before pouring in your own favorite batter.

Or if it's been a batch of griddle cakes and for some mysterious reason the folks didn't call for all the batter to be made into cakes don't be guilty of tossing it, but save it and see what swell corn fritters you can make for tomorrow. Just add a cup of canned corn and a little more flour to thicken. Fry in deep fat or sauté in a skillet.

Which seems to leave baking powder biscuits out in the cold, so here's a tip for their crustnesses. Some day for lunch instead of using water in the batch substitute tomato juice. It gives a most elegant, dainty, pink color and likewise a most elusive tang.

And who was it the other day who was asking for Eggs Stuffed with Mushrooms? Hope she's tuned in this morning, for here 'tis:

EGGS STUFFED WITH MUSHROOMS.

2 tablespoons butter
¼ pound fresh mushrooms or ½ cup canned ones
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup boiling water
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup evaporated milk
¼ cup chopped almonds (if you want them)
Salt and pepper
Buttered bread crums
6 hard cooked eggs
2 tablespoons evaporated milk

Clean the mushrooms, chopping the stems, but leaving the caps whole. Sauté them lightly in the butter, then skim them out, leaving the butter in the pan. Put the flour in with the grease. Blend. Add the boiling water, stirring constantly, and cook until it thickens smoothly. Add the cup of milk and the salt. Add the chopped stems and the almonds to the remaining two tablespoons of milk and mash with them the egg yolks. (The eggs should have been cut in two lengthwise.) Now refill the waiting egg whites with the mixture and place the halves in a buttered baking dish, together with the mushroom caps. Pour the sauce over all and top with buttered bread crums. Heat and brown in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.).

N. U. SEEKS REVENGE AGAINST CHICAGO TONIGHT

GARDEN LOSS ON CARNERA FIGHT NEARS $25,000

Paid Admissions Only 8,624.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., March 2.—Primo Carnera, who retained his heavyweight championship by a 15 round decision over Tommy Loughran last night, and the Philadelphia challenger were about today with no visible marks of their 45 minutes fighting time.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN.

Final checkup of the box office disclosed gate receipts of $44,498.70 or $39,361.60 net, less tax. Of this amount Carnera is supposed to have received $15,744 on a basis of 40 per cent of the net instead of the 37½ per cent announced. Loughran's 12½ per cent was $4,920, which Manager Smith complained would not leave much profit after training expenses. Total paid admissions was 8,624, with a complimentary and official list of 1,200.

Garden Loses Nearly $25,000.

The Garden management, which figured to break even on a $50,000 gate, revised its estimate as expenses were footed up. Renovating the huge arena, which was less than one-fifth filled, cost more than expected. In absence of final statement, loss of the venture was called $20,000 to $25,000.

Carnera expressed himself satisfied with the result, although disappointed that he had not put away his lighter opponent for the count. In his broken English he explained that Loughran was very difficult to hit and that because of the booing of the crowd he was trying to commit no action which could be adjudged foul. Manager Billy Duffy thought the battle, in which the Italian was shown the finest brand of ringcraft by Loughran, would prove of help to him against later opponents.

Loughran Claims Foul.

Loughran, in interviews, thought he had won and was entitled to the decision. He believed he had the better of it on points, but in addition to that claimed he was fouled by Carnera stepping on his feet in the first and twelfth rounds, that such tactics should be counted against the champion.

Chairman McReynolds of the Florida commission revealed today that before the men entered the ring he summoned Referee Shea and told him that if Carnera stepped on Loughran's feet intentionally and examination by a physician confirmed Tommy was incapacitated thereby, the fight would be awarded to the challenger on a foul. Carnera's manager was notified to that effect.

"But Carnera had to put his feet somewhere," commented McReynolds today, "for he has plenty of feet to place. There was no indication he stepped on Tommy purposely or that Tommy was affected thereby."

Verdict Is Unanimous.

Officials and newspaper writers were unanimous that Carnera deserved the verdict. Referee Shea gave 12 rounds to Carnera, one to Loughran, and two even. Judge Latham gave nine to Carnera, three to Loughran, and three even. Judge McLoughlan gave nine to Carnera, one to Loughran, and five even. Your correspondent gave eleven to Carnera, two to Loughran, and two even.

Discussion immediately arose about Carnera's next appearance. Manager Louis Soresi asserted that overtures had been made for the champion to meet Victorio Campolo, Jose Santa, or George Godfrey in South America under the promition of Bertys Perry, who has managed a number of French pugilists. His next American appearance naturally should be against Max Baer if the latter forsakes the movies.

Soresi, Carnera's manager, declared tonight that plans for a match with Baer were definitly off and that he would take the huge Venetian to South America for a boxing tour of the country's capitals. He said that they would probably leave the end of March, and added that he was weary of being given the "run around" by the Garden in negotiations for the Baer fight.

It was also rumored here tonight that a change in the Garden management directly affecting Matchmaker James J. Johnston was in prospect but neither Johnston nor Col. John Kilpatrick would discuss the report today.

GOLDEN GLOVES BOXERS PREPARE FOR TITLE DRIVE

Chicago Fighters Form Minority of Survivors.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Thirty-two amateur boxers, fortunate in qualifying for the final night's competition of Chicago's seventh annual Golden Gloves tournament Friday night at the Stadium, now are preparing for the tests which will determine the 1934 championships. These 32 fighters are fortunate in that they have come through the most gruelling Tournament of Champions in the years that the event has been held.

Just why any one should expect that the semi-finals and finals next week will produce better fights or more closely contested battles is difficult to figure out. For that matter, this anticipation is not necessary. Certainly the windup Friday will be the equal of the 250 matches in the three day Tournament of Champions and that is all that can be asked.

Visiting Boys Improve.

In other years the boys from downstate, or from outlying cities in Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa, have been inferior to the Chicago youngsters. They tried, but they were lacking in ability. The years of experience, however, have borne fruit. This apparently will be the year for the invading squads and it is not even an even wager that Chicago will win half of the eight titles.

Then, too, the scope of the tournament has been increased and this year the lads from out of Chicago swept into the majority of the positions from which the final title drive will be made.

Cleveland has the best record. Not only did six of its eight champions reach the semi-finals, but the squad of eight Ohioans won sixteen consecutive fights before the featherweight and middleweight entries were eliminated. Chicago, however, is by no means out of the race. John Brown, C. Y. O., did not attract the attention accorded the sharp shooting Patsy Urso of Grand Rapids, who whipped Fuscaldo and Sanello on the first night of the Tournament of Champions. Neither is he rated as high in the estimation of many as Jesse Levels of Cleveland, but he is a consistent, hard hitting scrapper who may knock over his highly touted rivals.

Bantams Well Matched.

The situation in the bantamweight class is much the same. Tommy Barry of Springfield and Troy Belini of Cleveland were outstanding, but Ray Harris of South Bend and Joey Minnecci of Waukegan and the C. Y. O. have equal consideration for the diamond studded golden glove. Minnecci is rugged. He has boxing ability and more important he hits with authority. If he connects during any of the three rounds his opponent may wake up in the dressing room.

Chicago certainly has an equal chance in the featherweight class. Irving Goldstein, J. O. Y. champion from Trafton's gymnasium, and Andy Scavini, C. Y. O. champion, will carry Chicago's hopes against Al Nettlow of Detroit and Ray House of Michigan City. Another C. Y. O. champion, Phil Kenneally, is seeking the 135 pound championship. He will be opposed by Aaron Wade, a splendid Negro fighter from Peoria, Johnny Bommarito of Detroit and Frank Bojack of Cleveland.

No Chicago Welterweights.

Chicago is not represented in the welterweight class which in other years has been dominated by Johnny Phagan, Henry Rothier and Billy Celebron. Keith Graves, a member of last year's Golden Gloves squad, may come through to the title but he has ranking competition in Danny Farrar,

WHEN SOX DO A ONE-TWO

All's Well as Cubs Roll On to Catalina

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Herington, Kas., March 2.—The Cubs proceeded campward today in quiet and orderly fashion. Even the morning, noon, and evening advances on the dining car were carried through without any of the noble athletes being maimed in the rush. Manager Charley Grimm was pleased to note that all the young men were eating well, thus proving that there are no invalids in the party.

The four men scheduled to join the tour this morning at Kansas City showed up intact and immediately proceeded to shock everybody by dragging forth a checkerboard and conducting a regular tournament. The four involved in this form of diversion were Pitcher Lynn Nelson and Catchers Rice, Seebold, and Goebel.

Andy's Hiding Out.

There is a persistent rumor that Andy Lotshaw, the eminent trainer, is aboard the train, but as yet hasn't been seen. This is easily explained. Andy's temporary living quarters are located in drawing room A in car 94. Andy is in there somewhere, although not visible. It so happens that the eminent Andrew has in his room enough extra luggage to fill half a baggage car. The room is stacked ceiling high with boxes of baseball shoes, boxes of baseball gloves, boxes of rubbing liniments, boxes of cigars, boxes of gum, and at least a half hundred other articles. The belief is that Andrew will dig himself out before Los Angeles is reached Sunday morning.

Mr. Robert Lewis, the club's traveling secretary, today was awarded first prize for being the most finished article in the party from a sartorial standpoint. Lewis won out mainly because of a coat made with a back which folds up and stretches like an accordion.

Klein Interests Fans.

During the tour through Kansas today Chuck Klein, the former Philly slugger, was the center of interest for the curious fans who came down to the small town depots for a peek. In street clothes, Mr. Klein, despite his heroics with a bat, looks much like any other citizen. The street togs naturally conceal from view the blacksmithlike arms that Klein puts to such good use in smashing baseballs.

Two members carrying more weight than they boasted a year ago are Shortstop Bill Jurges and Third Baseman Woody English. However, their extra poundage was the result of a course aimed along such lines. Jurges was bothered by a stomach complaint last season but has recovered. Eighteen pounds of meat have been added to his frame. English has added eleven pounds to the 144 he carried last year. Woody dieted on chicken, sweet potatoes, raw eggs, and beer.

Simmons, Dykes Defeat Malone, Root-At Golf

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., March 2.—Al Simmons and Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox this afternoon extended their athletic edge over Cub pitchers into a sport other than baseball when they won their challenge match from Charley Root and Pat Malone. Wagers were placed [and paid] on several bases of computation, including match, medal, low ball, aggregate and man to man.

The medal score follows:

Par—out	443	443	545—36
Simmons	654	445	445—41
Dykes	565	533	645—42
Malone	654	545	556—45
Root	653	555	555—44
Par—in	443	444	435—35—71
Simmons	543	855	656—47—88
Dykes	565	533	645—42—84
Malone	574	765	646—50—95
Root	554	655	547—46—90

Babe Herman played a round in the rôle of kibitzer and had a 39 on the first nine, but blew up badly on the stretch, finishing with an 81.

The battle was waged on the 6,760 yard Flintridge course with strict adherence to U. S. Golf association rules. For this reason several contestants turned in scores from 10 to 15 strokes higher than they usually report after informal rounds.

MAL STEVENS IS NEW HEAD COACH AT NEW YORK U.

New York, March 2.—(AP)—Dr. Marvin A. [Mal] Stevens was appointed head football coach at New York university tonight.

A member of Yale's coaching staff for ten years from 1924 through 1933 and head coach from 1928 through 1932, Stevens will succeed Howard [Jake] Cann at N. Y. U. Cann resigned on Feb. 1 under fire of undergraduate and alumni criticism after the Violets had won only two games, tied one and lost four last season. He retained his post as basketball coach.

The terms of Stevens' contract were not made public, but it was assumed to be for one year.

Now an interne at New Haven hospital, Stevens will take charge of football affairs on University Heights as soon as weather conditions permit the start of spring practice.

Court Records Reveal Divorce of La Barba

Los Angeles, Cal., March 2.—[Special.]—Fidel La Barba, retired flyweight boxing champion, was divorced in the Superior court last week, court records revealed today. Mrs. La Barba, the former wife of Billy De Beck, newspaper cartoonist, filed the suit, in which she charged desertion. The couple were married April 21, 1928, while La Barba was studying law at Stanford university.

Kress Reports in Time to See Sox Bear Down

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., March 2.—The Chicago White Sox's first training squad, augmented today by Red Kress, the fluctuating asset, and Conrad Flippen, a college lad who infields, bore down with greater zest in a drill which extended from 10 o'clock till well past the lunch hour. The reason for all the increased earnestness was the desire to be completely set to give the second squad fellows the big run around in their first drill tomorrow.

The feverish session, under a blazing sun that had the thermometer high in the eighties on the playing field, developed two casualties. Pitcher Phil Gallivan has a crop of blisters on his heels and Pitcher John Huck has blisters on the fingers of his pitching hand.

Shea on Way to Camp.

Manager Fonseca received a wire late today from Catcher Mervyn Shea. Shea, a flu victim, reported the disease had given him a break and that he is leaving Sacramento tonight for Pasadena, about a week earlier than he thought he could report.

The Sox boss gave Zeke Bonura a fielding workout at first base. While the big fellow seemed a bit ponderous he was not awkward in the dancing steps around the bag, which baseball folks describe as shifting. Naturally when Zeke shifts 240 pounds of brawn he's really shifting something. Bonura also did quite a little hitting and Fonseca believes he has a good chance to click against many of the American league pitchers. Zeke takes a short stride and never has his powerful frame off balance.

Bocek Gets Attention.

Milt Bocek continues to get his share of attention from Manager Fonseca. Last fall Boss Lew was trying to figure out a good class B team for Milt to start his seasoning. But it seems that word of the Cicero boy's natural flair for long distance hitting has gotten around, and there now are no fewer than five Double A clubs who want Milt.

If Frenchy Uhalt, due tomorrow, proves disappointing, it is possible that Bocek will be kept on the Sox roster. The young man needs frequent work, however, and as he is looked upon as a fine hitting prospect, Fonseca probably will find a spot for him where he can play every day.

Snyder Busy with Weight.

John Pasek is the only catcher ready for throwing to second and other activities required in a regular game. Morgan Snyder, who came to camp fat, has been working diligently enough, but has been so busy reducing his girth that he has had little time to harden his well buried muscles.

SCHMIDT SIGNS FOR THREE YEARS WITH OHIO STATE

Contract for Long Term Sets Precedent.

Columbus, O., March 2.—[Special.]—Francis Schmidt, Texas Christian football and basketball coach, has been given a three year contract as head football coach at Ohio State university, Athletic Director L. W. St. John announced today.

This is the first time the school has signed a coach for more than one year. The unprecedented action came as the result of the unanimous vote of the athletic board.

Schmidt is the third coach Ohio State has had in 20 years since becoming a member of the Western conference. Only Dr. John W. Wilce and the recently resigned Samuel S. Williaman preceded him. The salary agreement was not announced.

Will Direct Coaching School.

Director St. John in announcing the board's action said: "Mr. Schmidt was given a three year contract so that he might have an added sense of security in his new job. He will have an opportunity to develop his teams along his own ideas."

In addition to handling the football coaching job, Schmidt will be in charge of the summer coaching course at the university, starting in July.

The selection of Schmidt is contingent upon the approval of the university board of trustees and President George W. Rightmire, but their approval is expected to be merely a matter of form.

Will Name His Staf.

Schmidt will be given the right to name his staf of assistants, but he has indicated that he will retain the men who worked under Willaman E. R. Godfrey is the present line coach, Floyd Stahl the assistant coach and scout, and Dick Larkins freshman coach. This arrangement may be shifted to make room for Raymond Wolf, line coach and scout at Texas Christian, who may accompany Schmidt to Columbus. Gaylord R. Stinchcomb former half back at Ohio State, also is to be added to the coaching staf in some capacity, according to the report.

Action on the naming of Schmidt was delayed yesterday when a member of the athletic board desired to look further into the record of a western coach whose name had been offered. However, at today's meeting the vote in favor of Schmidt was unanimous.

Started at Tulsa.

Schmidt, a product of Nebraska, coached first at the University of Tulsa. During his stay there, from 1915 to 1921, he won three championships in the University Athletic conference of Oklahoma.

In 1922 Schmidt transferred to the University of Arkansas. During his eight years at Arkansas his football teams won 40 games, lost 21, and tied four.

During his five years at Texas Christian Schmidt's teams won two Southwest conference championships, in 1929 and 1932, and tied for the title last year. He lost only five of 22 conference games.

Talking it Over

Henry Whitaker of Madison, Wis., is captain of the freshman basketball team at Dartmouth. . . . His father was an all-American end at the same school. . . . Glenn Cunningham, Kansas miler whose fire-scarred legs have earned columns of comment, is not bothered by them except in the cold weather, when they ache. . . . George Sauer, Nebraska full back, has been awarded the Lincoln Junior Chamber of Commerce distinguished service medal, which is presented to the citizen under 35 with the outstanding achievement of the year. . . . Sauer's fine influence on the youth of the community was given as the reason for his selection. . . . Les Witte, high scoring forward of Wyoming university's basketball team, is trying for a record of 1,000 points for his college career. . . . He was well over 900 with ten games to go. . . . Athletes are permitted four years of competition in the Rocky Mountain conference to which Wyoming belongs. . . .

Maurice Utt of the Daily Illini submits this item from a recent issue of the student paper: "Activity was at high on 'The Search for Beauty' set in Hollywood when a gorgeous blonde strolled in and nonchalantly plunked herself into a chair. Almost immediately cameras stopped grinding. The director wanted to know if she would like to work in the picture, and was she busy for dinner that night? The cameraman wanted to make a test of her, and was she busy that evening? Then Gil Berry, former Illinois football star, who was a member of the cast in the picture, strode up and inquired: 'Have you met the wife, boys?' And to think I knew her when she worked at Kammerer's, soliloquizes Mr. Utt. . . ."

Stanford university, Columbia university, and the Tournament of Roses association each received a little over $25,000 from proceeds of last New Year's day football game at Pasadena. . . . Bob Harlow, tournament bureau manager of the Professional Golfers' association, is figuring on a summer tournament circuit. . . . Junior chambers of commerce at Columbus, O., and Waterloo, Ia., have shown interest in arranging open money tournaments. . . . Harlow thinks if enough stars will make the circuit, a summer schedule with prize money equal to the winter purses of $71,775 may be established. . . . Present summer fixtures include the National, Western, and Canadian major open meets, as well as the St. Paul, Glen Falls, Hershey, Tri-State, Nebraska, and St. Louis tournaments. . . .

Duane Swanson and Bud Froning, freshman athletes from the University of Iowa who hitch-hiked to the coast with the announced intention of enrolling at Southern California, thereby stirring an intersectional fuss, didn't get into the Trojan stronghold after all. . . . They have minor jobs at Columbia studio and are playing on the studio basketball team. . . . Harry Hampton, golf superintendent of the Beverly Country club, is a rabid hocky fan. . . . He has not missed a Blackhawk game at the Stadium in three years, come zero, blizzard, or auto accident. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—Dean Brownell of Illinois broke the world's pole vault record in the seventh annual indoor track and field meet of the University of Illinois. . . . Charley Paddock was restored to good standing in the A. A. U. and was eligible for the United States Olympic track team. . . . Johnny Evers, acting manager of the White Sox, led the first contingent of Sox to their training camp in Florida. . . . New York lost the annual Army-Navy football game because of theater prices. . . . Officials of the two academies decided to play the game in Baltimore. . . .

WILDCATS FIGHT TO REMAIN IN SECOND PLACE

Haarlow and Fisher to Match Shots.

The Big Ten basketball championship has been decided, but there remains that affair of considerable local moment to be settled between Northwestern and Chicago at the Midway tonight. The Wildcats are after undisputed possession of second place and the Maroons hope for a share of ninth position, but the question is whether Chicago's midseason victory at Evanston was merely the result of Bill Haarlow having a particularly good night.

BILL HAARLOW.

Chicago has won only two games this season, one over Michigan and the other a 36 to 34 decision over Northwestern, in which Haarlow made 21 points for the season record. Two victories is one more than the Maroons achieved in the conference last year, and a second triumph over the north siders will do much to placate Midway followers.

Haarlow Against Fisher.

Northwestern, which has shown unexpected strength this year, is inked considerably at having dropped a game to the Maroons. Haarlow and Lyle Fisher of Northwestern also have a personal scoring battle to wage. Fisher is ahead on points, but Haarlow has a slight lead in average.

The game is the season final for both teams. All of Chicago's regulars will be back next year. Lineups:

8,500 TO SEE BADGERS

Madison, Wis., March 2.—[Special.]—A second position berth in the Big Ten basketball race will be Wisconsin's objective when it meets Iowa before a record crowd of 8,500 in the fieldhouse tomorrow night.

The Badgers have been slow in rounding into shape following their rough and tumble game with Ohio State last week-end. Coach Walter E. Meanwell has given his boys a rest most of the week and hopes to have them ready for what promises to be their toughest engagement of the season.

Install Additional Seats.

Wisconsin must win if it hopes to keep pace with Northwestern in the fight for second place. Both teams have now lost four games, and if the Wildcats defeat Chicago in their final game tomorrow night, then the Badgers cannot afford to drop either the Iowa or the Minnesota game Monday.

The Iowa game will be played before the largest crowd that has ever attended a contest in the fieldhouse. The normal seating capacity was sold out two days ago. An additional 450 seats have been installed and they too have been sold.

INDIANA FACES PURDUE

Lafayette, Ind., March 2.—[Special.]—The Purdue basketball team, which has clinched the Western conference championship, will play its last home game of the season tomorrow night against Indiana. The Boilermakers have been victorious in the last seven meetings between the two teams.

Purdue already has scored 431 points in Big Ten competition, averaging 43 points a game. With two games remaining on the schedule the Boilermakers hope to set a new scoring record. The present modern record for 12 games is 474 points set by Indiana in 1928 when it tied Purdue for the title.

Last Game for Three Players.

Against the Hoosiers, who are intent on clinching second place, Coach Lambert will send the same combination that has been working so smoothly all season. Norman Cottom and Ray Eddy will be forwards; Dutch Fehring, center; Emmet Lowery and Ed Shaver, guards. Fehring, Eddy and Lowery, all seniors, will be playing their last home game.

DE PAUL DEFEATS ST. LOUIS, 40 TO 31, FOR 16TH IN ROW

De Paul university won its sixteenth straight basketball game last night by beating St. Louis university, 40 to 31, at De Paul gym. At half time the north siders had a six point lead, 23 to 17.

Coach Jim Kelly gave the capacity crowd a view of next season's team by substituting freely in the second half. He was guarding against the possibility that the De Paul players might crack under the strain of their long victory string. Score:

ENGLEWOOD AND TILDEN PREP QUINTETS WIN

Marshall Defeats Schurz, 38 to 34.

The race for the lightweight and heavyweight basketball championships of the Chicago Public High School league is drawing near the finish line. Five quarter-final round games were played yesterday and two more will be held today.

Tilden, Marshall Win.

Tilden Tech, Marshall and Englewood were victors in the heavyweight division while the lightweight quintets of Roosevelt and Schurz triumphed and advanced to the semi-finals. Tilden defeated Bowen, 19 to 16, at White City; Marshall won from Senn, 38 to 34; Englewood routed Parker, 26 to 19; Roosevelt triumphed over Schurz, 29 to 20, and Senn handed Marshall's lightweights a 30 to 29 setback.

Marshall's heavyweights now will oppose Lane Tech, which crushed Tuley last Thursday in the semi-final round, while Tilden Tech will play Englewood. The four semi-finalists in the heavyweight division also qualified to compete in a sectional tournament for the state championship.

Lindblom Meets Calumet.

In the last two quarter-final lightweight games today Lindblom will play Calumet at White City and Phillips will meet Hyde Park on the same court. The first game will start at 3 o'clock.

CATHOLIC LEAGUE

St. Mel lightweights won the west division championship of the Chicago Catholic High School league by defeating St. Philip, 26 to 17, at the St. Mel gymnasium last night. It was St. Mel's eleventh consecutive victory and St. Philip's third defeat.

Catholic of Joliet, which clinched the east division heavyweight last week, continued undefeated. Catholic scored its 13th straight triumph, defeating St. George, 40 to 13, at Evanston. Joliet's lightweights, however, suffered their 12th defeat, losing to St. George, 47 to 16.

St. Philip and St. Patrick, leaders in the west division heavyweight race, also triumphed. St. Philip won from St. Mel, 26 to 21, while St. Patrick routed St. Michael, 45 to 6. St. Philip is now in first place with 10 victories and one defeat, while St. Patrick is in second with nine victories and two setbacks.

MICHIGAN TRACK SQUAD TO MEET N. U. AND CHICAGO

Wolverines Favored at Midway Today.

Big Ten indoor track nears its climax at the triangular meet between Michigan, Northwestern, and Chicago at the Midway fieldhouse this afternoon. The climax will come a week from today at the 24th annual championship meet, also scheduled for the Maroon track.

Ward to Race.

Michigan is favored to win today's meet, since the Wolverines have nearly enough strength to outpoint the combined Maroon and Purple teams. Interest will center in the performances of individuals, as an indication of what may be expected in the title meet. Among the stars will be Willis Ward, Michigan, who should win the dash event; Dave Hunn, Michigan's sophomore pole vaulter; Nerse Alix, Wolverine two miler; Jack Fleming, Northwestern sophomore half miler, and Steven, another Purple sophomore who puts the shot better than 47 feet.

Childs Good Miler.

In addition to Ward, Hunn, and Alix, the Wolverines have capable performers in Jack Childs, miler; Lemen and Ellerby, quarter milers, and a good mile relay team. Northwestern, which tied Ohio State for first place in a quadrangular meet last week, should score with Fleming and Steven; Olson in the high jump, Duggins in the 440 yard run and hurdles, Farley in the mile, and Jens in the hurdles.

Chicago will rely on John Roberts, pole vaulter; Roberts and Lee Yarnell in the high jump; Berwanger in the dash and hurdles; Perlis, Smith, and Sills in the quarter mile, and Bob Milow, two miler.

Women Track Stars Seek A. A. U. Titles

Champion and near-champion women track athletes will try for new world records in the Central A. A. U. women's indoor championship meet tonight in the 132d Regiment armory, Madison and Rockwell streets.

Teams from the south and west park districts will attempt to wrest the national team championship from the Lincoln park team.

Annette Rogers, Olympic and Central A. A. U. champion in the 40 yard run and 40 meter run, who also holds the American records for these events, 5 seconds for the first and 5 3-5 seconds for the latter, will be one of the entries.

Doris Anderson and Mary Terwilliger, co-holders of the American record of 6.3 seconds for 50 meters, also will compete. Olympic Champion Evelyn Hall, who holds the world's record of 7.4 seconds for the 50 yard low hurdles, 5 4-5 seconds for the 40 yard low hurdles, and 6.1 seconds for the 40 meter low hurdles, is entered.

In the 40 meter dash Miss Dorothy Davis, 15 year old Wilmette girl, will try for a world's record. Dorothy Metzler and Martha Green are two others in this class who are running close to record time.

In the 50 meter dash there will be three members of the 1932 Olympic team competing—Annette Rogers, Ethel Harrington, and Tydie Pickett.

PURDUE BEGINS FOOTBALL DRILL; 130 MEN REPORT

Lafayette, Ind., March 2.—[Special.]—One hundred and thirty football candidates greeted Coach Noble Kizer this afternoon as Purdue opened spring practice with a light workout.

As only three regulars—Duane Purvis and Jim Carter, half backs, and Ed Skoronski, center—are available, Kizer emphasized the fact that the battle for regular berths on the 1934 team will be wide open.

In order to make it possible for each candidate to show his skill Kizer plans to divide the squad into four teams to play a round robin series of intersquad games for the spring championship.

BADGERS MEET GOPHER TRACK SQUAD TODAY

Madison, Wis., March 2.—[Special.]—Wisconsin's track team, which finished fourth in the quadrangular meet at Evanston last week, will meet the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis tomorrow.

Due to the ineligibility of Irv Rubow of the Badgers, Minnesota is expected to dominate the shotput with Bill Freimuth, who has reached 47 feet. The Gophers are also conceded the 60 yard dash and high jump, in which their marks are considerably better than Wisconsin's. Wisconsin hopes to score enough points in the distance runs and hurdles to offset this. Wisconsin also will be well represented in the mile relay.

Murphy to Officiate at Title Soccer Match

Robert Murphy of St. Louis was named yesterday to referee the soccer game between the Sparta Leaders and the Wieboldt Wonderbolts at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, tomorrow afternoon. Murphy officiated at the first contest between the teams last Sunday which ended in a scoreless tie. The match will decide the Western soccer championship.

Columbia, Mo., March 2.—(AP)—Athletes from five states gathered here tonight for the 13th Big Six indoor track and field championship meet. The field of 90 candidates includes the largest collection of individual stars ever to compete in the annual games. Champions in six of the 12 events in the 1933 meet are in the group.

Michigan Wins from Wildcat Swim Squad

One intercollegiate record was broken as Michigan swimmers defeated Northwestern, 49 to 35, at Patten gymnasium pool last night. The new mark came in the 150 yard back stroke when Taylor Drysdale, Michigan, swam the distance in 1:38.4. The old record of 1:39 was made in 1930 by Dick Hinch, Northwestern, who was among the spectators.

Another fast performance was turned in by Don Horn, Purple breast stroke swimmer, on his lap of the medley relay. Facing a 10 yard handicap Horn completed his 100 yards in 1:05. The world's record for the distance is 1:06.3.

Capt. Art Highland, Northwestern, was high point man with two firsts and a second. Northwestern won the water polo game, 5 to 3.

NOTRE DAME TO MEET OHIO TRACK ATHLETES TODAY

Notre Dame, Ind., March 2.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's track team tomorrow will meet Ohio State, which tied Northwestern in a quadrangular meet last Saturday.

The meet should be hard fought, for the Buckeyes have strength in every event in which the Irish are strong and the two teams have corresponding weaknesses. Ohio State scored 39½ points in Saturday's quadrangular, the equivalent of eight first places in the 10 events. Ohio State won only three events and the mile relay, piling up points with its well-balanced team performance in other events.

Fick, N. Y. A. C. Swimmer, Sets 100 Yard Record

New Haven, Conn., March 2.—(AP)—Peter Fick of the New York A. C. set a new world's record of 56 4-5 seconds for the 100 meter free style swimming sprint tonight, breaking a mark set by Johnny Weismuller a decade ago. The New York star broke the previous record of 57 2-5 in defeating Dave Livington of Yale in the annual Eli swimming carnival in the Payne Whitney gymnasium pool.

Helen Jacobs, George Lott Win Jamaica Net Title

KINGSTON, Jamaica, March 2.—(AP)—George Lott of Chicago and Helen Jacobs of Berkeley, Cal., today won the mixed doubles title of the Jamaica tennis championships today. Golden Gloves Boxers Point for Big Night

Cleveland; Daniel Clark, Detroit, and Adam Latoz, Danville, Ill.

The middleweight division is another matter. Bill Treest, of St. Charles, who qualified from the Joliet section of the tournament; Freddie Caserio, twice champion in 1931 and 1933 and national A. A. U. title holder in 1932; Charles Wozniak, C. Y. O. champion, and Fred Tyus of Peoria, are the candidates for the championship. While Caserio and Treest must be given advantage, Tyus, in particular, is rated as an exceptional boxer and Wozniak, veteran of many title encounters, is at his side. No matter how the draw goes, this division offers more evenly matched bouts, more thrills, than any other.

Marek Seeks Title.

Chicago also has been shut out of the light heavyweight division where Joe Louis, Detroit's famed Negro boxer; Joe Bauer of Cleveland; Peter Greigaitis, Grand Rapids, and Ario Soldati of Rockford remain in the race. Soldati fought against New York last year and lost a close decision. His showing in the Tournament of Champions labels him as worth of a title if he can get by this stellar field.

Max Marek, last year's 175 pound winner, National A. A. U. champion, and international champion as well as holder of several C. Y. O. titles, is shooting for the heavyweight Golden Glove. Marek now is a freshman at the University of Notre Dame. His fellow Chicagoan, Otis Thomas of the Savoy Athletic club; Murray Spencer, Nashville, Tenn., and Steve Smoxy of Cleveland, are his rivals.

No greater aggregation of amateur boxers ever has been brought together. Friday night's championships will begin at 8 o'clock and last approximately three hours and a half. Admission prices have been reduced in that there are fewer $3.80 seats and a new low, 55 cents. A capacity crowd is predicted on the basis of the daily sales now in progress at Tribune Tower and the Tribune Public Service office at 1 South Dearborn street.

Irving Park Lutherans Meet Holy Trinity for Title

The championship of the Northwest Church Athletic Association Basketball league will be determined tonight when Irving Park Lutheran plays Holy Trinity U. C. C. at the Irving Park Y. M. C. A., 4251 Irving Park boulevard, at 9 o'clock. The preliminary game will be between Mayfair M. E. and St. Simon's Lutheran.

Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. to Hold Wrestling Tourney

A novice wrestling tournament will be held today at the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, 53d street and Dorchester avenue. There will be competition in eight weights. Preliminaries will start at 3 o'clock this afternoon, while the finals probably will start at 8 o'clock.

Roettger Leaves Wesleyan Five for Pirate Camp

Bloomington, Ill., March 2.—[Special.]—Walter Roettger, Illinois Wesleyan basketball coach for ten years, who waited until this morning, hoping his team would win a share of the Little Nineteen basketball championship, left for Paso Robles, Cal., today to join his teammates, the Pittsburgh Pirates, at their spring training camp. The Pirate outfielder was disappointed because his team was defeated by Millikin last night, and lost a chance for at least a share of the title.

Roettger, one of the most traded men in the big league, joins his fourth National league team. Previously he had been with the St. Louis Cardinals, the New York Giants, the Cincinnati Reds.

Cochet Beats Tilden; Match Goes Five Sets

MONTREAL, March 2.—(AP)—Henri Cochet of France, scored his first professional tennis victory over Bill Tilden tonight but could not prevent the tri-color from suffering its third successive defeat in the Franco-American team series.

Beaten both by Tilden and Ellsworth Vines in New York and Boston and by Vines again last night, Cochet came back tonight to overcome Big Bill, 7-9, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

Earlier in the evening Vines had given the American pros the victory needed to clinch team honors by trouncing Martin Plaa in straight sets, 10-8, 6-4, 6-3.

The Americans had scored clean sweeps in the first two series at New York and Boston.

PLAY HERE TUESDAY.

Chicago tennis fans are assured high grade tennis when Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines meet Henri Cochet and Martin Plaa of France in a series of international team matches at the Broadway armory next Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Although the American pair has been consistent victors over the Frenchmen in their matches to date, tennis played by the quartet has been of topnotch order. Cochet, especially, has been playing the best game of his long career and each succeeding match finds him giving Tilden and Vines a harder fight.

The play will open with singles matches between Vines vs. Cochet and Tilden vs. Plaa. Following the singles matches the Americans will oppose the French in a doubles match.

Wednesday night Tilden will encounter Cochet while Vines takes on Plaa.

De Kalb Waits Sanction to Play Pitt Five

De Kalb, Ill., March 2.—[Special.]—Acceptance of the invitation extended to the De Kalb Teachers to meet the University of Pittsburgh in a series of games before the National Association of Coaches' clinic at Atlanta, Ga., on March 29, 30, and 31, today awaited sanction of Dr. Karl L. Adams, president of the college. Dr. Adams is in Cleveland at a meeting of the National Educators' association and will not return to De Kalb until Sunday. It is probable that the Little Nineteen conference basketball champions will accept the offer.

Defeat of Illinois Wesleyan by Millikin university, 36 to 28, at Decatur last night clinched an undisputed championship for the De Kalb quintet. De Kalb finished its season with eleven victories and two defeats in league play, whereas Wesleyan had ten victories and three defeats.

KRAUSE, VOEGELE, CROWE WIND UP HOME CAREERS

Notre Dame Scoring Stars Face Ohio State Tonight

Notre Dame, Ind., March 2.—[Special.]—Capt. Ed Krause, Leo Crowe, and Joe Voegele will play their last home basketball game for Notre Dame tomorrow night against Ohio State.

The three have scored more than 1,100 points between them, more than half of all Notre Dame has made in the last three seasons. Krause twice has led the team in scoring and he led the state last year.

The Crowes Carry On.

Crowe is the fourth member of his family to win major monograms at Notre Dame and the fifth to compete. Since Clem, 1925 football captain, won his first letter in 1923 some member has won one every year.

The dynasty will be broken temporarily when Leo is graduated, but two brothers, one a senior and one a junior, are now in the Jefferson High school of Lafayette and plan to enter Notre Dame.

Voegele Is Good, Too.

Voegele, forward, from Peoria, Ill., was second to Krause last season and is second this year in scoring, as well as being a valuable team man.

The Irish will be seeking their 30th victory in 32 starts, and their 17th home victory in 18 starts.

LAYDEN VISITS FORMER GRADE SCHOOL TEACHER

Rock Island, Ill., March 2.—[Special.]—Sister Mary Matthew, history teacher of St. Joseph's high school, had Elmer Layden of Davenport, athletic director head football coach at Notre Dame, as a visitor at her class today. Layden recalled that Sister Matthew was his teacher when he attended Sacred Heart grade school in Davenport. Layden was in the tri-cities to attend a testimonial dinner in his honor last night.

KIWANIS CLUBS ACT MONDAY ON EASTER TAG DAY

Four Philanthropic Groups File Protest.

Whether the All-Chicago Kiwanis clubs will hold the tag day proposed for March 24, in the face of protests by the four official tag day groups, will be decided by the club organization at their general meeting on Monday night in the Hotel Sherman, according to Joseph H. Robinson, a member of the Kiwanis committee.

The Kiwanis clubs recently were granted a permit by the city council to sell flowers, the proceeds to be used to buy Easter eggs for poor children.

Opposed by "Official" Group.

This additional tag day, the official tag day groups provided for in the city code maintain, would let down the bars again for wholesale granting of tag day permits and inaugurate a return to the evils of constant requests for donation from the public on the city streets. Last year, after years of agitation, the number of tag days was reduced to the new minimum of four.

On Thursday heads of the official tag day groups, in a joint committee meeting, voted full power to Patrick O'Reilly, representative of the Veterans' Poppy Day association and chairman of the joint group, to act for them in opposing the Kiwanis Tag day. The joint meeting followed similar votes cast at board meetings of the Chicago Children's Benefit league, Chicago Federation of Aged and Adult Charities, and the Chicago Federated Charities.

At a previous meeting the tag day situation was laid before Kiwanis committee members by the official tag day groups who felt, they said, that the Kiwanians did not have a full understanding of the fight in past years to reduce tag days as a protection to the public.

Plan Thorough Investigations.

An echo of the tag day discussion was evidenced in a new plan for more thorough investigation of "charity" schemes adopted by the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago Better Business bureau during the last week. In the future the association, through the subscriptions investigating committee headed by Clifford W. Barnes, will pass upon the merits of all public appeals for donations and other direct financial aid for established or presumably permanent charitable or philanthropic institutions.

"Approval will follow only when sponsors prove sound management, business efficiency in the institution involved, and high social service standards," according to the association statement. "Proof that solicitors are receiving commissions for raising funds will be sufficient to result in denial or approbation. At present 302 of the hospitals, nursing services, orphanages, old people's homes, and other charitable institutions are on the approved list."

MORRIS CITIZENS FIGHT U.S. PLAN TO REMOVE BRIDGE

Citizens of Morris, county seat of Grundy county, came to Chicago yesterday to protest against the war department's order that an old highway bridge on route 47 over the Illinois river at Morris be removed by April 1. A new bridge is under construction, but will not be completed until Aug. 1.

There were 160 business men and officials in the delegation. Firemen testified at the hearing, which was held in the United States postoffice building, that they would be virtually helpless if the bridge was removed before Aug. 1. School officials said the action would seriously hamper education, and merchants told of the harm it would do to trade in the town. The only remedy suggested if the war department order is carried out is to start a ferryboat service.

In April of 1932 a notice was sent by war department engineers to the mayor of Morris and the state highway department to remove the bridge because it was an obstruction to some types of boats using the waterway. The hearing yesterday was held before Capt. Richard I. Smith. Capt. Smith will turn the matter over to the chief of army engineers at Washington after it receives consideration by the upper Mississippi valley division of the department at St. Louis.

The late Henry W. Ewing, publisher of the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin, a legal newspaper, left an estate of $250,000, entirely in stock of the publication, it was disclosed yesterday when his will was filed with Mitchell C. Robin, clerk of the Probate court. After minor bequests to his children the entire estate was left in trust to his widow, Mrs. Ella Ewing.

The will provides that $500 shall be given to two of his daughters, Mrs. Lillian H. Clay, 8951 South Leavitt street, and Mrs. Melbrey Overmeyer of Emmett, Idaho. A third daughter, Mrs. Katheryne A. The residual estate is left in trust with Mr. Ewing's son, Phillip, as trustee. The income, the will directs, shall be given to Mrs. Ewing during her lifetime. At her death the trust is terminated, and after $5,000 is given to Mrs. Ewing's daughter by another marriage, Miss Lelia Ogden, the remainder is to be divided among the five children. Mr. Ewing died on Feb. 4, at Cocoa, Fla.

INDICT 17 FOR $500,000 THEFTS FROM RAIL CARS

The indictment of 17 persons, including two women, by the federal grand jury yesterday revealed the operation of an alleged ring which is charged with having stolen merchandise valued at $500,000 from railway cars since 1932. The defendants are charged with conspiracy, theft from interstate shipments, and receiving and possessing goods stolen from interstate shipments.

The ring was allegedly headed by Mrs. Rose Manhoff of Dubuque, Ia., who was described as the principal fence. The other woman named was Mrs. Irma Hay, also of Dubuque. All of the defendants are under arrest in various places in Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota.

Assistant District Attorney Lloyd Moody said that the gang preyed upon six leading railroads over a wide area centering in Chicago.

Rites for Gerald Peck Are Held in Libertyville

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Holy Spirit at Lake Forest for Gerald W. Peck, wealthy investment broker and sportsman, whose home was in Libertyville. The services were read by the Rev. Christoph Keller, pastor of the Trinity Episcopal church of Highland Park. Burial was in the Lake Forest cemetery. Mr. Peck was slain Monday at Seguin, Tex., by a ranch owner who charged his land was damaged by the construction of a dam by the financier's power company.

ADAM LE ROY JONES OF COLUMBIA U. IS DEAD OF PNEUMONIA

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—Adam Leroy Jones, director of admissions and head of the department of philosophy at Columbia university, died of pneumonia today at his home in Montclair after an illness of one week. He was 60 years old.

Born in Dunlap, Ill., Dr. Jones was graduated from Williams college in 1895 and received his doctorate in philosophy from Columbia after study as a fellow in 1898.

Save for one year as a preceptor at Princeton in 1909, he was identified with the department of philosophy at Columbia ever since, first as an assistant, then as an associate professor, and finally as director.

FINDS MAN TAKEN FROM RIVER DIED OF GUN WOUNDS

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict stating that Peter Andrie, 49 years old, 1518 West 18th street, who was rescued from the Chicago river on Feb. 1, after he had been wounded, died of bullet wounds inflicted with a pistol in the hands of an unknown person.

Shortly before his death Andrie told the police he had shot himself. He had quarreled, he said, with Edwin Platt, 34 years old, in the drug store of Platt's father at 1801 South Ashland avenue, and after tossing acid upon the druggist's son shot himself in a fit of remorse. Platt's face was scarred by the acid.

Because of expert opinion that the wounds could not have been self-inflicted, and a doubt that Andrie's dying statement was made while he was mentally competent, the coroner's jury returned the open verdict.

BERLIN TO HONOR 2,000 'RACIALLY PURE' INFANTS

BERLIN, March 2.—(AP)—To foster "racial consciousness" in Berlin a plan was announced tonight whereby "honor godfather protection" will be given 2,000 babies born nine months after Chancellor Hitler's next birthday on April 20.

Dr. Walter Klein, chief of the city health department, propounded the measure as a move to "repopulate the capital with a racial nobility" and to increase its rapidly declining birth rate. The godchildren are to be selected according to racial lines.

The city will grant these godchildren—which in every case must be the third legitimate issue—a monthly bonus of 30 marks (nearly $12 at current rates) during their first year and 20 marks each month in the following three years.

"Our godchildren will be under the special protection of the city of Berlin," said Dr. Klein. He explained that the children, when grown up, will receive preferential treatment in the filling of administrative jobs.

Chancellor Hitler has agreed to the plan. Mothers expecting their third child can apply at the health department for a designation as "a godfather's family of honor"—but, it was emphasized, only Germans "racially pure and sound" can hope to get the honors and money.

ROOSEVELT AIDS ANTI-TAMMANY CHIEF IN BRONX

Reported to Have Ordered City Census.

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt, if reports from Washington are correct, at last has taken direct, personal action in the New York political conflict by issuing an order to the census bureau to make a tabulation of citizens and alien population of the five counties of the metropolis as a basis for reapportioning the city's representation in the legislature. The new census also will serve as reason for reforming the political units in the counties.

Heretofore through the year of fighting for control in New York, the President has refused steadfastly to be drawn personally into the controversy and has acted through James A. Farley, postmaster general and state chairman, and Edward J. Flynn, secretary of state and Bronx leader.

Would Cut Flynn's Risk.

Primarily the motive prompting this reputed action on the part of the President, is believed to be the urgent necessity of throwing a line to Ed Flynn, who is facing a hard struggle to hold his organization in the Bronx.

The expectation is that as a result of the new tabulation, the Bronx will have fifteen or sixteen districts instead of eight as at present and that in the Gerrymander Flynn will be able to solidify his position for his primary fight next autumn. Such a change would reduce Flynn's risk by 100 per cent.

Bill Against Outsiders.

As a secondary consideration the new apportionment will be designed to cut under Tammany hall by reducing the new York county representation in the legislature. It will provide Farley and Flynn with a powerful weapon in the struggle ahead to oust John F. Curry as Tammany leader and take over control of the city Democracy.

Borough President James J. Lyons of the Bronx introduced in the board of estimate branch of the municipal assembly today a bill calculated to force out five or six of Mayor Laguardia's commissioners, recruited from other cities.

HARRY SINCLAIR NAMED IN NEW FRAUD CHARGES

Tulsa, Okla., March 2.—(AP)—Ten additional charges of embezzlement, involving Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, and 27 other former directors of the now bankrupt Exchange Trust company, were filed in Common Pleas court here today, alleging misuse of $248,776.02 in trust accounts.

Twenty-five of these men, including Sinclair and others prominent in the oil industry, previously had been charged in seven complaints alleging misuse of $24,000.

J. M. Springer, special prosecutor appointed by Gov. William H. Murray, announced no new warrants will be issued on today's charges, but that the accused men will be permitted to appear March 12 and be arraigned at the time their previously set preliminary trial is held.

In addition to the criminal charges the directors are defendants in a civil suit seeking to recover $325,000.

Springer said his evidence would show the trust company, which closed last spring, had been insolvent since April, 1929; that the money had been taken from trust accounts to pay salaries, dividends and interest on delinquent mortgages, and had been used to take up participation certificates issued by the company.

220 LB. WOMAN FALLS 75 FEET TO STREET; LIVES

New York, March 2.—[Special.]—A 220 pound woman plunged 75 feet from the Riverside drive viaduct at 125th street today and lived.

She was found unconscious in the street beneath the span and taken to Harlem hospital. There it was found that she was suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries.

The woman was identified as Mrs. Catharine Russell, 57, living on West End avenue. Her son Louis, who made the identification was unable to furnish police with any cause for the fall. Mrs. Russell is unconscious.

Whether the woman leaped or fell from the viaduct was undetermined by the police. There is a guard rail along the span high enough to protect pedestrians against falling.

HOUSE REVOLTS AGAINST BILL ON RESERVE NOTES

Blocks Use of U. S. Bonds as Backing.

Washington, D. C., March 2.—(AP)—An uprising of house Democrats that drove their leaders from the field in disorder prevented passage tonight of a bill to extend for another year the power of federal reserve banks to issue currency backed by government bonds.

REP. PATMAN. [Acme Photo.]

Led by Representatives Patman of Texas, Brown of Kentucky, and Busby of Mississippi, who showered charges that the bill was "another bank bonus, another bribe and subsidy to a few big banks," more than fifty members sprang to their feet to shout for an opportunity to speak before the bill was passed.

Before their insistent demands Representative Byrns of Tennessee, the Democratic leader, and Chairman Steagall of the banking committee agreed to an adjournment that let the bill go over until tomorrow.

Authority Expires Today.

Authority for the federal reserve banks to issue currency with government bond backing will expire tomorrow.

Patman charged that "the money changers had not been driven from the temple" and that the banks wanted government bonds to be used for the issuance of currency because they made "four to four and one-half per cent interest" on the bonds and had the use of the money.

Steagall said the bill was an emergency measure and that considerable confusion would be caused if it did not pass tonight so that it could be placed on the President's desk tomorrow for signature.

"This bill should be voted on on its merits," he shouted above the uproar. He made a motion to end debate on the measure.

"No, no," the Democratic members shouted. Many Republicans jumped to their feet to join in the clamor.

Steagall Shouted Down.

Steagall was shouted down, but Speaker Rainey, putting the motion, held in his favor and a standing vote was demanded. The count was 90 to 75 against his attempt to end debate, with many members not voting.

When the house adjourned after a roll call that brought members from their dinners and homes, several amendments to limit the use of the authority were pending.

Patman asserted the arrangement should be terminated to force banks to make more commercial loans, which he said they would be compelled to do in order to secure eligible paper to put up for reserve notes, in the absence of the bond provision.

"Continuing the bond privileges would mean the same old credit stagnation," he said. "The banks would just keep on refusing to make commercial loans. I am sick and tired of pleading and trying to bribe them to loosen credit."

Stock Control Ends Liquidity, Specialists Say

Washington, D. C., March 2.—(AP)—New York Stock exchange "specialists" today objected emphatically to provisions of the pending securities market control bill which would require them to abandon the practice of trading on their own account, and told the senate banking committee such a restriction would rob the market of its liquidity.

One of them, Paul Adler, under the questioning of Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, conceded that his personal trading netted a profit "three days out of five," and partially agreed the function of the specialist in "making a narrow market" resulted in making it more attractive for the speculator and investor.

The specialist is a member of the stock exchange who handles all orders for sales and purchases of a particular stock and keeps a book of stop loss and buy orders of specified price. Pecora's contention has been that the possession of this information gives him an unfair advantage over the outside trader.

"Make a Market."

Adler and Raymond Sprague, also a specialist, explained their function is to "make a market" when bids for a stock and offers for sale are so far apart in price that the seller and buyer cannot get together. In such an instance the specialist buys for his own account, if he chooses to do so, at a price slightly below that of the lowest sale order or sells at a price slightly above the highest selling order.

This, they contended, made for liquidity by narrowing the range between bid and offer and had become the investor's assurance in buying a stock that when he wanted to sell it he would be able to find a purchaser.

Pecora asked Adler if he did not think by "narowing the market" the specialist "encouraged speculation."

Adler replied that in so doing the specialist performed a function that enabled the investor to "get out."

Increases Trading.

"One of the results directly flowing from the function of the speculator," Pecora persisted, "is that the market is made more attractive to the average speculator, is it not?"

"I wouldn't want to say that the market is made close for the speculators."

"Don't you think it adds to the amount of trading?"

"Yes, I do."

"And that makes it more profitable for the broker on commission?"

"Yes."

Pecora turned to the subject of stop loss orders which would be prohibited under the bill except as approved by the federal trade commission. Adler said that such an order was difficult for the specialist to execute for the reason that when a stop loss order "becomes elected" it is a sale order on a weak market.

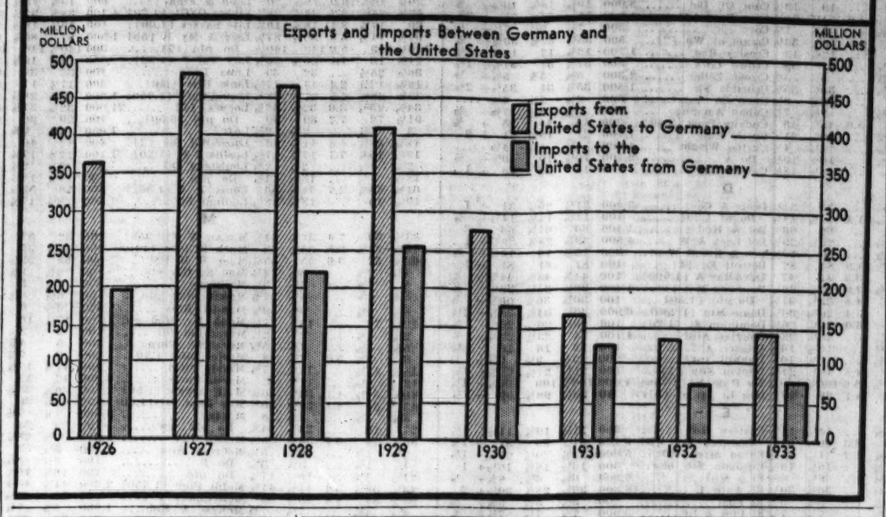
Effect on Market.

"How does that affect the trend of the market?" Pecora asked.

"It might develop at rare times into a serious situation," Adler replied, pointing out at the same time, however, that stop loss orders furnish only a small proportion of the orders which a specialist executes.

Dean Witter, representing 204 security dealers on the west coast, claimed the proposed prohibition of brokers from dealing in securities in their own interest would drive many legitimate firms out of the smaller towns and thus "injure the investor." He suggested that brokers be required to specify in every transaction whether they were acting as brokers or principals.

Trade of the United States with Germany for Eight Years Compared



Two Billions Stabilization Fund Not Used

Washington, D. C., March 2.—(AP)—The treasury closed the first month of the revalued dollar without using its 2 billion dollar currency stabilization fund. This was disclosed today on the Feb. 28 statement of the treasury's cash position and confirmed by Secretary Morgenthau's advisers. The government's purchases of more than $300,000,000 in foreign gold have been made without resort to the fund set up out of the $2,800,000,000 profit on dollar devaluation.

But the treasury made an important bookkeeping shift in its month-end statement. It took the huge gold profit out of the general receipts, where it had served to give the government more than a half billion dollar surplus, and classified it separately with trust and contributed funds.

Operation Produces Deficit.

This operation slashed the receipts figure from more than $4,000,000,000 to $1,885,601,000 and showed a deficit for the first time since January. It stood at $2,352,170,000. Officials said the move had no special significance. Since it was not intended to use the gold profit for general expenses, they said a truer picture of the treasury's condition was given by not adding the profit to general receipts.

Today's deficit was nearly $5,000,000,000 below the fiscal year-end deficit of more than $7,000,000,000 estimated by President Roosevelt. A sharp February drop in the government's rate of spending raised immediate doubts as to whether the goal of more than $10,000,000,000 would be reached by June 30.

Rate of Spending Declines.

For the first month since last July the rate of spending dropped in February instead of climbing. January's outlay was $980,579,000, including $808,000,000 of emergency expenditures. February's total was $635,321,000, of which $447,323,000 was classified as emergency.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation supplied the biggest drop in emergency costs. During January the corporation spent $466,763,000, most of it going to build up banks for membership in the Deposit Insurance corporation. Its February outgo was only $146,763,000. The corporation's disbursements for the fiscal year total so far $1,211,133,000. The budget estimated $3,959,000,000 by next June 30.

Emergency expenditures during the first eight months of the fiscal year stood at $2,411,000,000 as compared with $736,107,000 last year. Routine outlays were $1,826,000,000 as against $2,610,000,000 last year. The deficit at this time last year was $2,096,000,000.

TICKER'S SONG IS ALL WALL STREET WANTS; VETO MUSIC AT LUNCH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—Financiers of the Wall street district care for no music during working hours except the song of the ticker, according to results of a survey disclosed today by the downtown restaurateurs.

Sixty customers of eating places in the Wall street area voted "no" when asked if they would like music with their meals; 38 voted "yes," but eight of this number stipulated that they wanted music only with the evening meal.

The survey was undertaken, according to a representative of the restaurateurs, on a suggestion from the office of Nathan Straus Jr., state director of the national emergency council, that unemployed musicians might be placed in restaurants. At Mr. Straus' office a spokesman said that the suggestion "was not meant seriously."

ALUMINUM CO. STRIKERS FLOUT 11% WAGE BOOST

New Kensington, Pa., March 2.—(AP)—Howling down suggestions of their collective bargaining agents that they accept an 11 per cent wage increase, a mass meeting of Aluminum Company of America employés tonight directed picket lines to be reëstablished about the huge plant.

Oliver Moyes, secretary of one of the unions and a member of the committee which signed an agreement with company officials providing for the increase, estimated more than 2,000 attended the meeting. There are approximately 4,000 employed at the mills.

Moyes told the men that the agreement was the best obtainable at this time. He said a six hour day and 30 hour week seemed likely "within a few weeks." Shouts of "We want 80 cents an hour or nothing," came up from the crowd. Union leaders say most of the workers get 40 cents an hour now, with some receiving as high as 65 cents.

The union leaders called another meeting for tomorrow to consider a proposal that all workers return to their jobs pending negotiations. Vice President I. W. Wilson of the Aluminum company earlier had announced the wage agreement, which he said would restore wages to "approximately the 1929 levels."

Davis Store Plans Eight Story Addition

BY AL CHASE.

Constantly expanding business of the Davis company's State street department store has led to plans being drawn for an eight story addition on Wabash avenue. Whether or not it will be erected depends entirely on bids now being taken, an official said last night. If, when bids are opened on March 12, it is found the annex can be erected at a reasonable figure, work probably will start at once. If not, the project will be shelved.

PAUL C. FLEER.

The Davis store, under the presidency of Paul C. Fleer, has undergone an almost complete modernization. Business has grown so rapidly that space on Wabash avenue is needed to store open stock for retail trade and thus give more space for selling in the State street store.

Replaces Old Structure.

The plans by Graham, Anderson, Probst & White call for an eight story unit, 45x190, at 330 South Wabash avenue, replacing an old four story structure. The 55x190 three and four story building adjoining on the north, at 324 and 328, will be remodeled at the same time if the annex is built.

The upper floors of both units will be used by the Davis company for warehouse purposes. The first floor stores will be rented. A subway will connect the present State street store with the Wabash avenue units and a conveyor belt will act as a freight escalator for carrying retail stock from the warehouse to the State street retail shopping floors.

Plans also call for the first floor of the Wabash avenue units being indented thirty feet in the rear so several heavy trucks can unload merchandise without interfering with alley traffic. A long and modern shipping platform is contemplated.

Wabash Avenue Elevation.

The architects' plans call for a Wabash avenue elevation of modern design. Brick, with Indiana limestone trim, is contemplated. Spandrels will be of aluminum. Foundations will rest on caissons.

Marshall Field & Co., owners of the Davis store, also announce another step in the comprehensive modernization plan for their own big State street store. The advertising offices, now on the ninth floor, State and Randolph corner, are to be moved to the Wabash-Washington corner on the same floor.

The space now occupied by the advertising bureau will be converted into superintendents' offices when Advertising Manager G. R. Schaeffer and his assistants move to their new quarters about April 1.

Frank L. Griffith Elected Peoples Gas Vice President

Frank L. Griffith, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, was elected vice president in charge of accounting at the first meeting of the new board of directors yesterday. William R. C. Galloway, superintendent of accounting, was named assistant secretary to succeed Mr. Griffith. Other officers were reëlected.

Nash Motors Export Sales Already Exceed 1933 Total

Export shipments of Nash Motors' 1934 models up to March 1 were 167 per cent greater than total exports of 1933 models, the company reported yesterday. January export shipments alone exceeded the first six months of 1933.

WILSON TO ALTER KILLING PLANT AT COST OF $160,000

Work has just started on a $160,000 building project at the Wilson & Co. packing plant, 4100 South Ashland avenue. A permit for $80,000 was issued yesterday for structural work and in addition $80,000 will be spent for machinery.

The present five story hog killing and dressing building is to be remodeled and a three story steel and concrete fireproof addition is to be erected. According to Carl P. Barnett, structural engineer for Wilson & Co., the new plant will be completed in six months.

Central Shoe Co. Sales Rise 103% Above Year Ago

St. Louis, Mo., March 2.—(AP)—A 103 per cent increase in shoe shipments last month over February of last year was reported today by Walter A. Menke, vice president of the Central Shoe company of St. Louis. January shipments showed an 84.3 per cent increase over the same month of 1933, he said.

BATTERY FIRMS NEARLY DOUBLE PROFITS IN 1933

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—Earnings of Electric Storage Battery company and Willard Storage Battery company increased heavily during 1933 and almost doubled the amount earned in the previous year.

Consolidated net income totaled $2,022,206, compared with $1,259,859 in 1932, and earnings on combined common and preferred shares were equivalent to $2.23 on 907,310 shares, against $1.39 on combined common and preferred shares in the previous year.

The upturn in earnings was accomplished despite the fact that sales sagged slightly in 1933, dropping from $16,863,026 to $16,823,561.

MAY NOT APPEAL DECREE AGAINST PETROLEUM CODE

Dallas, Tex., March 2.—(AP)—Quinn Shaughnessy, chief of the legal section of the petroleum administrative board, said today the government might not appeal a Federal court decision invalidating the marketing section of the oil code as it applies to intrastate commerce.

"Because this test involves, in reality, not only the petroleum code, but also some 300 other codes under the NRA, we are moving slowly," he said. "The case must be studied not only by our department but by heads of the other codes involved, as well as the department of justice. It may be that we will bring a new case before the District court before we proceed to the Supreme court."

Federal District Judge William H. Atwell, recently quashed indictments against four Dallas filling station operators, holding that the petroleum code, which they were charged with violating, could not be enforced against operators dealing only in intrastate commerce.

BANK DEPOSITORS SLOW IN CALLING FOR THEIR MONEY

Despite announcement several days ago that the Edgewater Trust and Savings bank would liquidate because it was unable to carry on without a profit and had asked depositors to withdraw their money, several persons have attempted to deposit funds and in one instance an effort was made to open a new account.

Depositors apparently are in no hurry to get their holdings for at the close last night only $70,000 had been withdrawn. About $90,000 yet remains uncalled for.

Weeks' Engineering Awards Increase to $24,231,000

DOLLAR SAGS AGAIN IN TERMS OF FRANC, BUT GAINS ON POUND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—The American dollar slipped a little further today in terms of the French gold franc toward its new parity of 59.06. With the franc at 6.57¾ cents the indicated gold worth of the dollar was 59.56 cents against 59.61 cents yesterday, when the franc closed at 6.57¼ cents.

In terms of the British pound, however, the dollar was slightly stronger with sterling worth only $5.57½, a half cent less than yesterday.

Trading was unusually quiet in all markets here and in the foreign capitals.

No American gold purchases were reported abroad but the flow of the metal, purchased previously, continued into New York. About $32,000,000 arrived today on the Bremen consigned to banks and banking firms that have been active importers recently. Tomorrow the liner New York is scheduled to arrive with $11,000,000 and the Roosevelt is due late tomorrow or Sunday with $10,000,000.

Including today's transactions, there has been officially reported since Feb. 1 imports of $431,745,800 gold and transactions resulting in a net gain in monetary gold stocks during the period of $421,347,100.

Surface Lines' Traffic Gains as Elevated and Buses Lose

Increases in street car riders during February were reported yesterday by Chicago Surface lines officials, but declines were shown in bus and elevated traffic.

An improvement of 12 per cent was registered by the surface lines, Chicago Rapid Transit company suffered a loss of .5 per cent and the Chicago Motor Coach company had a decline of 3.71 per cent.

Indicates Employment Gain.

Street car and elevated travel are regarded as fairly indicative of employment conditions and in this case improvement is shown in the aggregate. Bus travel is largely from "white collar" classes and is therefore not believed to be so good a barometer.

The Rapid Transit company pointed out that weather this year was mild for the month, while last year heavy storms were experienced. Elevated traffic always picks up during stormy weather, while the other two classifications witness decreases.

Storm Causes Upturn.

In February, 1933, a 48 hour snowstorm set in Feb. 6, with temperatures dropping steadily to 19 below zero three days later. With street transportation of all forms temporarily paralyzed elevated traffic volume swung sharply upward.

From Feb. 5 to 15 this year traffic on the "L" lines was 5.83 per cent under last year, but in the last half of the month a gain of 5.23 per cent was attained.

LOADINGS, CUT BY STORM, 24% ABOVE YEAR AGO

Freight Total Also Exceeds 1932.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—The first decline of the weekly movement of freight traffic since last December was reported today when figures on loadings for last week showed a loss of 25,525 cars from the preceding week.

The decrease was attributed to several causes, the most important of which were the stormy weather which swept over the country during the period, and observance of Washington's birthday.

Railroads moved a total of 573,371 cars during the week according to the figures published by the American Railway association, indicative of a decline of 4.3 per cent from the preceding week.

Far Above Year Ago.

The figures proved encouraging in some aspects, however, for they disclosed an increase of 111,056 cars, or about 24 per cent, over the corresponding interval a year ago when some sections of the country had already declared a banking moratorium. They were also in excess of the corresponding six days of 1932.

For the week ended Feb. 17 last loadings were 4.6 per cent above the preceding period and 15.7 per cent in excess of the like week of 1933.

Miscellaneous freight totaled 195,676 cars, a decrease of 9,178 from the preceding week, but increases of 43,855 above 1933 and 17,548 above 1932; less than carlot merchandise, 144,142, a decrease of 16,586 below the preceding week but 650 above 1933 and a decrease of 25,591 below 1932; grain and grain products, 27,452, a decrease of 2,833 below the preceding week, 870 below 1933, and 5,175 below 1932; forest products, 22,505, decrease 509 below the preceding week but 8,233 above 1933 and 2,865 above 1932.

Ore Loadings Smaller.

Ore loadings were 3,211, decrease 966 below the preceding week but 1,499 above 1933 and 378 above 1932; coal, 155,026, an increase of 6,763 above the preceding week, 51,666 above 1933, and 46,823 above 1932; coke, 10,068, decrease 1,040 below the preceding week but 5,161 above 1933 and 4,109 above 1932; live stock, 15,291, decrease 1,176 below the preceding week, but 862 above 1933 and a decrease of 3,084 below 1932.

All districts reported gains for the week as compared with the corresponding weeks in 1932 and 1933. For the year thus far total loadings were 4,486,431 cars as compared with 3,894,774 in 1933 and 4,509,992 in 1932.

Report Gains for Month.

Revenue freight volume of the Chicago & North Western railway amounted to 90,743 cars in February, against 73,182 in the corresponding period last year, it was announced yesterday.

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific handled 77,147 cars in the month, an increase of 11 per cent over last year but 9.2 per cent under January.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe loadings totaled 83,804 cars against 92,254 in January, and 78,397 a year ago.

Volume of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas for the month was 27,319 cars, an increase of 12.1 per cent. While the total was below January because of fewer loading days, average daily loadings were 9.8 per cent greater.

Missouri Pacific handled 83,287 cars, an increase of 15.7 per cent over February, 1932, while the International Great Northern hauled 19,204 cars, a gain of 3,652 and the Gulf Coast lines 15,121, up 4,720.

BANKING MORATORIUM EVENTS RECALLED ON FIRST ANNIVERSARY

Tomorrow is the first anniversary of the historic national bank moratorium, which began a year ago on March 4, the day of President Roosevelt's inauguration. Events of the last year have somewhat obscured the fears then existing that brought the country to a state of financial paralysis.

The crisis was recalled yesterday, however, with vivid realism by some of the bankers who went through it. In retrospect most of the bankers agreed that the events of March 3, 1933, marked the culmination of the worst financial panic the country has ever experienced.

The calm of the financial district yesterday presented a strange contrast to hectic activity a year ago, when bankers and business men were huddling in secret conferences in back rooms at the Chicago club anxiously discussing steps to be taken to stem the panic.

Gen. Electric Pays More on Junior Stock

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—The General Electric company today declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, compared with 10 cents quarterly paid previously. The company also declared the regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents a share on the special stock.

Net income for 1933 was $13,429,739 after taxes and charges, equal after dividends on the special stock to 38 cents a share on 28,845,927 shares of common stock, compared with net income of $14,404,110, or 41 cents a share on the common, in 1932.

Sales billed in the December quarter were $39,211,122, compared with $34,112,816 in the last quarter of 1932. Billings for the quarter were the largest for any quarter since the second period of 1932, the company said. Net sales billed for 1933 totaled $136,637,268, against $147,162,291 in 1932.

Orders Exceed Shipments.

Orders received in 1933 exceeded shipments for the first time since 1929, leaving a larger amount of unfilled orders on the books Jan. 1, 1934, than the year before. Orders for January and February, the company reported, were about 49 per cent above a year ago.

"Largely due to the effect of the revaluation of the dollar," a statement asserted, "there has been an increase in the market value of our foreign securities of approximately 24 million dollars which has not been included in our valuation."

The total of investments in associated and other companies was carried at $154,682,341, against $154,998,160 a year ago. Total current assets at the year-end were $175,314,394 and current liabilities $13,302,577.

Bohn Aluminum Pays More.

The Bohn Aluminum and Brass corporation declared a dividend of 75 cents. Three months ago a dividend of 50 cents was paid and in the two quarters previous to that dividends of 25 cents each were paid.

The Fisk Rubber corporation declared a dividend of $1.50 on the preferred stock for first quarter of 1934. This is the first payment since the corporation took over the assets of the Fisk Rubber company in 1932. The old company had paid no dividends since 1928.

Dome Mines, Ltd., declared the usual extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass company declared an extra dividend of 10 cents, in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of 25 cents. Preliminary figures for 1933, as announced by H. S. Wherret, president, indicate net income of about 4 million dollars after all charges, compared with a net loss of $60,757 for 1932.

Mead, Johnson & Co., bicycle manufacturers, declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly disbursement of 75 cents on the common stock.

CLARKSON QUITS CHASE BANK; LAST OF WIGGIN GROUP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—Robert L. Clarkson, the last of the group of four executives who operated the Chase National bank prior to its merger with the Equitable Trust company in 1930, has retired from the Chase organization, it was announced tonight.

Mr. Clarkson will relinquish the title of president of the Chase corporation, the bank's affiliate which is now in process of being wound up. He was formerly president of the bank and for a time was vice chairman.

The three other former executives of the bank who have recently retired are Albert H. Wiggin, who resigned as chairman of the governing board; Charles S. McCain, who retired as chairman of the board of directors, and John McHugh, who resigned as chairman of the executive committee.

Mr. Clarkson, who is only 41, has had a brilliant career in Wall street, leading from the position of runner in a brokerage house at $4 a week to the presidency of what was then [in 1929] the second largest bank in the country, and is now the largest. His connection with the Chase began in 1919 when he joined the credit department.

SEARS-ROEBUCK EARNINGS SOAR AS PRICES RISE

Reports $11,249,295 Income for Year.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Rising prices and improved consumer purchasing power combined to lift the business of Sears, Roebuck & Co. out of the red ink figures in 1933. Rapid recovery in sales and profits in the last half of the year brought 1933 net income to $11,249,295, Gen. R. E. Wood, president, disclosed yesterday in making public results of the company's operations. The showing contrasts sharply with the 1932 record, when the company operated at a deficit of $2,543,651, exclusive of extraordinary reserve charges of $12,336,000 levied against surplus, the first time since 1921 the company ran at a loss.

GEN. R. E. WOOD. [Moffett Photo.]

At the same time Gen. Wood reported that current business of the company is running 25 to 30 per cent ahead of last year. Sales for the first period of the 1934 fiscal year, Jan. 30 to Feb. 26, were $20,395,895, an increase of $4,569,048, or 28.9 per cent, over the like period last year.

Anticipates Rise in Prices.

The remarkable profit showing of the company for the fiscal year, which ended Jan. 29, was traceable in large measure to anticipation by the company's management of the rise in prices. Alert to the possibilities of higher prices, the company stocked up on inventories early in the year.

"The management foresaw the rapid rise in prices from the low of March, 1933, and as a matter of deliberate merchandise policy built up heavy inventories," Gen. Wood said. The company valued its inventories at $72,296,876 at the close of the year, as compared with $49,084,896 a year earlier, an increase of $23,211,981. Unrealized appreciation on inventory has not been credited to profit, Gen. Wood explained. He added that the present inventory should support a business of $350,000,000 and that the year will probably see no inventory expansion.

Gross Sales Exceed 1932.

Gross sales of the company were $289,289,547 in 1933, against $276,714,897 in the preceding year, consisting of 13 four week periods. Sales were $17,588,329 behind 1932 in the first six periods of the year. The recovery then set in and sales volume expanded $30,163,479 over the preceding year, resulting in a gain of $12,575,150 for the entire fiscal period.

Practically every division of the company's organization participated in the earnings recovery, Gen. Wood said in his report to shareholders. Profits were shown by the mail order business, by all classes of retail stores, A, B, and C, and by the factories.

The policy of curtailing activity of the modern homes department was continued and sales fell to $3,575,873 from $7,516,836 in 1932. Losses on reacquired properties in the modern homes department, as well as losses on closed bank deposits, excess rentals and miscellaneous items, were charged directly to current earnings. Reserves set up during 1932 remained intact.

Trade Mortgages for Bonds.

The company acquired approximately $900,000 of Home Owners Loan corporation bonds by trading in mortgages about to default. This was reflected in a corresponding shrinkage in mortgage receivables.

The company set up a special depreciation reserve of $1,200,000, which was described merely as "special charges and reserves—fixed assets." This was in addition to ordinary depreciation on plant and equipment of $5,007,606 and $1,219,602 for repairs and maintenance. The special reserve is understood to be for the purpose of writing down the class B or leased stores. At the present rate of depreciation all the fixtures and equipment of this class of stores will be written off in a year and a half.

Predicts Further Gains.

Gen. Wood predicted further sales and profit gains this year if economic conditions continue favorable.

"I stated in last year's report," he said, "that if commodity prices rose, and the price level improved, sales and profits would mount rapidly. Such has proved to be the case after March, 1933, and if economic conditions in 1934 continue good our sales and profits will be further bettered."

Gen. Wood made no comment on the future dividend policy of the company. The last disbursement was made in May, 1933. The 1933 profit was transferred to surplus.

STOCKS BOUND 1 TO 3 POINTS ON BROAD DEMAND

Traders Are Cheered by Dividend Action.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—An unexpected increase in the quarterly dividend of General Electric common jolted the share market out of the "dumps" in the late trading today and the final gong found gains of 1 to 3 points marked all over the board.

It was the best day the market has had in well over a week. Short-covering was the motive behind a big proportion of the buying orders.

General Electric earned only 38 cents a share last year and today's surprise dividend declaration was widely interpreted as indicating a sanguine outlook on the part of officials. Up to the hour of the announcement the market had been idling along the same old rut it has been following since the middle of last month with waves of profittaking slowing up occasional efforts to bull individual groups of the list.

Rails and Oils Prominent.

Railroad and oil shares were especially prominent on the upturn, gains in the former group running to more than 3 points. Union Pacific, Atchison, New York Central, Illinois Central, Pennsylvania, and Louisville and Nashville were among the favorites.

An unusual transaction was a sale of Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Ashtabula preferred, appearing for the first time this year, at a net gain of more than 23 points.

Reports of new oil discoveries in Texas and Oklahoma provided grist for the oil shares mill. New Jersey and California Standard Oils and Seaboard elbowed each other for first place in the division. The last named forged ahead nearly 2 points and the others did more than half as well on brisk buying orders. Various low priced issues of the section enjoyed good demand.

Auto Situation Improved.

Improved conditions in the automobile plant strike zone brought a better tone to the motor shares. Chrysler showed the way with a jump of more than 2 points. General Motors and Auburn were active and strong.

Substantial gains were scored by copper, food, and tobacco issues. Public utilities looked up in modest fashion. Textile and amusement descriptions met new buying. Many miscellaneous and low priced stocks came in for a whirl, some of them going to new highs for the year.

WABASH ROAD TO SPEND $1,481,000 ON RAIL AND CARS

St. Louis, Mo., March 2.—(AP)—Plans for a rebuilding and equipment program financed by a $1,481,000 loan from the Public Works administration were announced today by Norman B. Pitcairn and Frank C. Nicodemus Jr., receivers of the Wabash Railway company.

Proceeds of the loan will be used partly in the purchase of 10,000 tons of rail which is to be laid this year in Illinois, Missouri, and Indiana. The cost of the rail and appliances will be approximately $564,700, while about $100,000 will be spent for labor to lay the rail.

The remainder of the loan, approximately $916,000, will be spent in rebuilding and repairing rolling stock, principally freight cars, and in air conditioning passenger equipment.

LARD SUPPLIES LARGEST IN YEARS; PRICES RISE

Accumulation of lard at leading western packing points, although increasing only 8,054,183 pounds in February, compared with 9,229,691 pounds for the same time last year, and 14,777,840 pounds in 1932, is said to be the largest in a number of years. Aggregate supplies are 134,900,277 pounds, compared with 31,240,534 pounds last year.

Total stocks of meats decreased 178,992,000 pounds last month to 276,114,715 pounds. There was an increase of 226,878,000 pounds in February last year.

Trade in provisions was liberal with a stronger undertone yesterday. There was a decidedly better demand for lard for export. Closing trades were at 10 to 15 cents advance on lard and 5 to 12½ cents on dry salted clear belly futures except for September which was unchanged.

Cash lard was up 12½ cents on regular to $6.52½, 20 cents on loose to $6.20, and 12½ cents on leaf to $6.25. Dry salted clear bellies were firmly held at $8.25. Pork loins were quoted at 11 to 15 cents. Liverpool lard was mostly higher. Prices:

New York, March 2.—Moderate recoveries were scored today by domestic corporation bonds and leading foreign loans continued higher. United States government long term bonds, however, were generally weaker on the indications that the treasury's March 15 financing may run as high as $1,500,000,000 and will presumably include some intermediate term obligations. The government issues were down 1-32 to 7-32 points.

Speculative railroad, utility and industrial bonds led the recovery in the domestic list, with the maximum gains amounting to one or two points.

Transactions Increase.

Transactions increased somewhat, totaling $13,138,000, par value, compared with the relatively low aggregate of $11,599,000 yesterday. Despite the rise traders for the most part were hesitant.

Gains among corporation loans ranged from fractions to more than a point. Bonds of Richfield Oil and Pan-American Petroleum jumped 4 to 7 points on announcement of plans for the reorganization of the two companies.

Most of the foreign loans which were at all active closed higher. Many of the German issues scored advances of a point or more. French government and municipal loans climbed fractionally to 1⅞ points.

East Indies Bonds Gain.

Dutch East Indies bonds were slightly improved on the news of further modifications in the government's plan for converting these issues into a guilder loan. Commonwealth of Australia bonds were fractionally higher in active dealings. Latin American loans closed generally higher.

Domestic bonds on the curb exchange showed a somewhat better degree of improvement than similar issues on the stock exchange. Foreign loans on the curb were irregularly higher.

NEW ISSUE.

An issue of $200,000 City of Oswego, N. Y., 3.90 per cent bonds, due March 1, 1935-'44 inclusive, is being offered by Halsey, Stuart & Co.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP)—Sales of June contracts of 38½ inch print cloths were made today at 7¼c, while spots are available 1/8c lower. The soldup condition on fall flannels and robe goods is noteworthy. Rayon sales of moderate character are reported, and inquiries for May deliveries are being considered. Silk goods remain quiet. Burlaps are selling in small lots for spot delivery. More inquiries are reported for fall woolens in heavy weights.

Interlake Iron.

Investors' Guide: Will you kindly give me some information regarding Interlake Iron?—H. K.

Answer: Interlake Iron corporation has its main plants in Chicago and Toledo. Output of merchant pig iron is the most important activity, with sale of coke, a byproduct, constituting an important source of subsidiary revenue. The coke is sold to Peoples Gas company of Chicago under contract. In 1932, a bad year for those in the iron and steel industry, sale of coke reached its highest proportion, being greater than iron sales.

With sales of $11,091,000 for 1933, up 33 1-3 per cent from sales of $8,321,000 for 1932, net loss was $817,000, against loss of $2,170,000 in 1932. In 1931 sales totaled $13,400,000 and net loss was $1,376,000. In 1930 the company operated at a profit of $2,066,000, or $1.03 per share, on sales of $22,800,000.

At the close of 1933 current assets, including cash of $550,000, amounted to $11,274,000 and current liabilities were $1,600,000. Funded debt, none of which matures prior to 1945, was $13,195,000.

Capitalization consists of 2,000,000 shares of no par stock on which no dividends have been paid since March, 1931.

A comparison of 1933 and 1931 sales and earnings indicates that operations are on a much more efficient basis today than in 1931. Although 1933 sales were 18 per cent under 1931 sales, loss in 1933 was about one-third less than in 1931.

The stock is a speculation.

FIND UNBRIDLED SPECULATION IS MARKETS' BANE

20th Century Fund Study Urges Regulation.

New York, March 2.—(AP)—That excessive speculation is the bane of the security markets, and that its effective control is the central problem for public regulation are two of the main conclusions of the Twentieth Century Fund's security market survey.

"The unduly large volume of uncontroled speculation, coupled with the frequent interference with the free play of supply and demand by manipulative activity," says the Fund report, "has seriously interfered with the performance of the proper functions of security exchanges and also has had a disruptive effect on the national economy."

"With principal function of the stock market, from the point of view of national interest, is to set the price of securities as closely as possible to their intrinsic values," says Evans Clark, director of the fund. "That means that fluctuations of the market prices of securities should correspond to fluctuations in earnings and dividends.

Cites Fictitious Prices.

"A study of the actual performance of 50 market leaders from 1926 to date, however, shows that during this period the market failed signally to evaluate these securities in terms of their real worth as represented by dividends and earnings. Although the rise in prices did precede the rise in earnings, the latter was greatly overdiscounted. While dividends paid on these stocks increased 56 per cent during this period and earnings increased 93 per cent, market prices more than trebled.

"If speculation contributed to proper evaluation one would expect that speculative activity in individual issues or in the market as a whole would result in greater price stability, since earnings do not show violent variations. Analysis of the actual behavior of specific issues subject to varying degrees of speculative activity, however, gives some confirmation to the conclusion that excessive speculation makes for more rather than less violent fluctuations. Apparently, however, a moderate amount of speculation results in less violent fluctuations than the absence of any speculative activity.

Several Classes of Speculators.

"Speculators fall into one of several broad classes. In one class belong those informed and shrewd traders who analyze and study business conditions until they become skilled at forecasting prices. Speculation of this type is a real aid to the market in the fulfilment of its discounting functions.

"The majority of speculators, especially in active markets, however, were found to be uninformed "outsiders." Their activity partakes more of the nature of guessing the movements of professional manipulators than of discounting the effect of current industrial happenings upon future prices. Their susceptibility to tips and rumors makes them dupes of professional pool operators. The purchases and sales of such traders exaggerate the price movements begun by professionals rather than initiate price corrections when current quotations fail to conform with real worth.

Investors Seek Stability.

"The investor, on the other hand, for whom after all the markets are supposed to exist, desires stable prices and bases his trading on his best estimate of the present and future earning power of the corporations in whose securities he deals. The more efficient he is, the more likely is the market of the security in which he trades to correspond to its real worth and, consequently, the more effectively the market performs its function of evaluation.

"These facts show that the chief object of stock market regulation should be to place a drastic limitation on the excessive uninformed speculation which exaggerates the rise and fall of security prices out of all proportion to intrinsic values. This should be done in such a way as to leave some scope for the few well informed and shrewd speculators who correctly discount future developments."

STONE-WEBSTER REPORT LOSS OF $85,907 FOR '33

Rate Cuts, Higher Taxes Are Factors.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 2.—The annual report of Stone & Webster, Inc., for 1933 shows a net loss of $85,907 after all charges and taxes, comparing with a net income of $1,015,367 for 1932. Dividends received from subsidiaries were $297,713, comparing with $1,394,763 in 1932, and other income was $502,544, against $663,295.

Gross earnings therefore were $800,257, against $2,058,058 the year before, while operating expenses were $825,442, as compared with $937,203. Expenses were reduced by $161,489, but the savings were offset to the extent of $49,727, by decreased rent receipts in the Boston office building. Taxes were $42,980, against $25,115. Interest payments were reduced from $80,373 to $17,743.

Larger Salaries Cut.

"Additional operating economies are anticipated as a result of further reductions in salaries of officers and principal employés which became effective Jan. 1, 1934," the officers say in their report. "The corporation has no funded debt, no preferred stock and no bank loans."

The consolidated income account of the company and its subsidiaries shows gross earnings of $47,051,587, as compared with $52,164,867 in 1932, a decline of 9.8 per cent. Operating expenses were reduced 8.7 per cent from $24,910,795 to $22,742,386. Net earnings were $19,479,660, as compared with $22,710,467.

Expect Tax Increase.

In 1934 taxes will further increase, due in part to the federal electric energy tax and in part to additional taxes imposed by some of the states and political subdivisions in which the subsidiaries operate, the report says.

"As the utility industry today is faced with persistent demands for lower rates, mounting taxation, increased costs and threats of federal and municipal competition, the immediate outlook is not encouraging," the report says. "While further recovery in public purchasing power should result in increased use of utility facilities, the combination of the factors above mentioned may continue to reduce net earnings."

MISSOURI GAS REDUCES LOSS BY ECONOMIES

By means of operating economies the Missouri Gas and Electric company more than made up for decreases in gross revenue during 1933 and closed the year with a net loss of $12,969, against one of $18,997 in 1932, according to the annual report issued yesterday.

Gross earnings of the company, which serves 41 communities and their adjacent rural areas in western Missouri, amounted to $555,381, compared with $570,690 in 1932. The decrease was primarily due to a falling off in ice revenues. Operating expenditures were reduced by $15,780 to $443,527.

Taxes increased from $39,878 in 1932 to $40,380 last year, mainly because of the 3 per cent federal tax on electric revenue, which was paid by the company starting Sept. 1, 1933.

ORIGINALITY!

The Astonishing Revelation in Moler's Private Lesson Course in Beauty Culture cannot be conceived by reading this ad. You must see it or have it explained by letter or phone.

Mr. Moler originated the first Beauty Culture school way back in 1893—now the private lesson course. It is almost inconceivable that a course so short, so superior and so distinctively advanced could be given so economically.

Moler's regular course at half rate for a limited time.

THIS IS NOT ALL.

Moler's are giving away $300 in scholarships in a novel advertising contest. Get details—no cost or obligation.
